The Crimson Blind

By Fred M. White

CHAPTER LII.

Putting the Light Out.

Once the trio were in the operating room, Bell gave one rapid glance at Heritage. But the latter seemed to have forgotten all his fears. There was an alert air about him; he was quiet and steady. There was something of the joy of battle in his eyes.

"Now, go and fetch Van Sneck in," Bell said.

The patient came at length. Everything was made ready. Van Sneck murmured something and looked vaguely about him, like a man suddenly roused from a deep sleep. But he obeyed quite willingly when Bell commanded him to get on the table. A moment or two later, and he was gone, under the influence of the other administered by Bell.

A case of glittering instruments lay on the table. The strong electric light was switched on and hung just over the head of the unconscious patient.

"You hold the sponge," Bell whispered to David. "There will be very little blood. I like to have a man with me who has coolness and courage. Oh, here is the spot. Feel the depression of the skull, Heritage? That is where the pressure lies, and no larger than a pea."

Heritage nodded without reply. He took up a knife, there was a flash of steel in the brilliant light and a sudden splash of blood. There was a scrape, scrape, that jolted horribly on David's nerves, followed by a convulsive movement of Van Sneck's body.

"Beautiful, beautiful!" Heritage murmured. "How easily it comes away!"

Bell was watching, in deep admiration, of the strong hand that was yet as light as thistledown. The big electric light flickered for just a moment, and Heritage stood upright.

"Don't be a fool!" Bell said, sternly. "It's a mere matter of current." Heritage muttered that it must be. Nevertheless, it had given him quite a turn. His face was set and pale and his hand shook ever so slightly. The knife was cutting deep, deeper—

A snarling oath burst from Bell's lips as the light flickered again and popped out suddenly, leaving the whole room in intense darkness. Heritage cried aloud. David felt a hand guiding his fingers to the patient's head.

"Press the sponge down, and press hard," Bell whispered. "It's a matter of life and death. Another minute and Van Sneck would have gone. Heritage, Heritage, pull yourself together. It was no fault of yours the light went out—the fault is mine."

Bell stumbled down the kitchen stairs and returned with a candle. The electric lights were out all over the ground floor with the exception of the hall. One of the circuits had given out completely, as sometimes happens with the electric light. Bell leaped on a table and turned the hall light out. A second later and he was dragging the long spare flex from the impromptu operating room to the swinging cord over the hall lamp. With a knife he cut the cord loose, he stripped the copper wires beneath, and rapidly joined one flex to the other.

"It is amateur work, but I fancy it will do," he muttered. "Anyway, that rascal is powerless to interfere with the circuit that controls the hall light."

Snap went the hall switch—there was a sudden cry from Heritage as the big lamp over the head of Van Sneck flared up again. Bell raced into the study and shut the door.

"A trick!" he gasped. "The light was put out. For heaven's sake, Heritage, don't get brooding over those fancies of yours now. I tell you, the thing was done deliberately. Here, if you are too feeble or weak, give the knife to me."

The request had a sting in it. With an effort Heritage pulled himself together.

"No," he said, firmly, "I'll do it. It was a cruel, dastardly trick to play on me, but I quite see now that it was a trick. Only it's going to make a man of me instead."

Bell nodded. His eyes were blazing, but he said nothing. He watched Heritage at work with stern approval. Nothing could be more scientific, more skilful. It seemed a long time to David, looking on, but it was a mere matter of minutes.

"Finished!" Heritage said, with a triumphant thrill. "And successful."

"And another second would have seen an end of our man," Bell said. "He's coming round again. Get those bandages on, Heritage. I'll look after the mess. Give him the drug. I want him to sleep for a good long time."

"Will he be sensible to-morrow?" David asked.

"I'll pledge my reputation upon it," Bell said. "Hadn't you better telephone down to your electrician to come and see to those lights? I see the fuse in the meter is intact; it is only on the one circuit that they have gone."

Van Sneck opened his eyes and stared languidly about him. In a clear, weak, yet wholly sensible voice, he asked where he was, and then lapsed into slumber. A little later, and he lay, snug and still, in bed. There was a look of the deepest pleasure in the eyes of Heritage.

"I've saved him and he's saved me," he said. "But it was touch and go for both of us when that light failed. But for Bell I fancied that I should have fainted. And then it came to me that it was a trick, and my nerve returned."

"Never to leave you again," Bell said. "It tried you high and found you not wanting."

"Heaven be praised!" Heritage murmured. "But how was it done?"

Bell's face was stern as he took the kitchen candlestick from the table and went in the direction of the dining room.

"Come with me and I'll explain," he said, curtly.

The dining room was in pitchy darkness, for the lights there had been on the short circuit; indeed, the lights on the ground floor had all failed with the exception of the hall, which, fortunately, had been on another circuit. This fact had saved Van Sneck's life, for, if Bell had not speedily used that one live wire the patient must have perished.

Henson looked up from his sofa with a start and a smile.

"I am afraid I must have been asleep," he said, languidly.

"Liar!" Bell thundered. "You have been plotting murder. And but for a mere accident, the plot would have been successful. You have worked out the whole thing in your mind; you came here on purpose. You came here to stifle the light at the very moment when we were operating upon Van Sneck. You thought that all the lights on the floor would be on the same circuit; you have been here before."

"Are you mad?" Henson gasped. "When have I been here before—"

"The night that you lured Van Sneck here by a forged letter and left him for dead!"

Henson gasped, his lips moved, but no words came from them.

"You have a little knowledge of electricity," Bell went on. "And you saw your way pretty clear to spoil our operation here to-night. You got the idea from yonder wall plug into which goes the plunger of the reading lamp on the cabinet yonder. At the critical moment all you had to do was to dip your fingers in water and press the tips of them against the live wire in the wall plug. You did so, and immediately the wires fired all over the circuit and plunged us into darkness. But the wall light remained sound, and Van Sneck was saved. If it is any consolation to you, he will be as sensible as any of us to-morrow."

Henson had risen to his feet, pale and trembling. He protested, but it was all in vain. Bell approached the china wall plug and pointed to it.

"Hold the candle down," he said. "There! You can see that the surface is still wet; there is water in the holes now, and some of it has trickled down the distemper on the wall. You ought to be shot where you stand, murderous dog!"

Henson protested, but with much dignity. It was all so much Greek to him, he said. He had been sleeping so quietly that he had not seen the light fail. Bell cut him short.

"Get out!" he cried. "Go away; you poison the air that honest men breathe—and you are as fit and well as I am. Why don't you pitch him into the street, Steel? Why don't you telephone to Marley at the police station, and say that the Huddersfield swindler is here? Oh, if you only knew what an effort it is to keep my hands off him!"

Henson made for the door with alacrity. A moment later, and he was in the street, dazed, confused and baffled, with the conviction strong upon him that he had failed in his great coup. Van Sneck would be sensible to-morrow—he would speak. And then—

But he dared not think of that at present. He wanted all his nerve and courage now. He had just one last chance, one single opportunity of making money, and then he must get out of the country without delay. He almost wished now that he had not been quite so precipitate in the matter of James Merritt. That humble tool might have been of great advantage to him at this moment. But Merritt had threatened to be troublesome and must be got out of the way. But then, the police had not picked Merritt up yet. Was it possible that Merritt had found out that—

But Henson did not care to think of that, either. He would go back to the quiet lodgings he had taken in Kemp Town for a day or two. He would change his clothes and walk over to Longdean Grange, and it would go hard if he failed to get a cheque from the misguided lady there. If he were quick he could get there by 11 o'clock.

He passed into his little room. He started back to see a man sleeping in his arm chair. Then the man, disturbed by the noise of the newcomer, opened his eyes. And those eyes were gleaming with a glow that filled Henson's heart with horrible dread. It was Merritt who sat opposite him, and it was Merritt whose eyes told Henson that he knew of the latter's black treachery. Henson was face to face with death, and he knew it.

He turned and fled for his life; he scudded along the streets, past the hospital and up towards the downs, with Merritt after him. The start was not long, but it was sufficient. Merritt took the wrong turn, and with a heart beating fast and hard, Henson climbed upwards. It was a long time before his courage came back to him. He did not feel really easy in his mind until he had passed the lodge gates at Longdean Grange, where he was fortunate enough, after a call or two, to rouse up Williams.

The latter came with more alacrity than usual. There was a queer grin on his face and a suggestion of laughter in his eyes.

"There seems to be a lot of light about," Henson cried. "Take me up to the house, and don't let anybody know I am here. Has your mistress gone to bed?"

"She's in the drawing room," Williams said, "singing. And Miss Enid's there. I am sure they will be glad to see you, sir."

Henson doubted it, but made no reply. There was a clatter of voices in the drawing room, a chatter of lightsomeness that Henson had never heard before. Well, he would soon settle all that. He passed quietly into the and then stood, in puzzled fear and amazement.

"Our dear nephew," said a cold, sarcastic voice. "Come in, sir, come in. This is quite charming. Well, my sweet philanthropist and most engaging gentleman, and what may we have the pleasure of doing for you tonight?"

"Lord Littimer!" Henson gasped. "Lord Littimer here?"

CHAPTER LIII.

Unsealed Lips.

Bell gave a gesture of relief as the door closed upon Henson. Heritage looked like a man who does not quite understand.

"I haven't quite got the hang of it yet," he said. "Was that done for my benefit?"

"Of course it was," Bell replied. "Henson found that Van Sneck was here, as he was certain to do, sooner or later. He comes here to make inquiries, and finds you; also, he comes to spy out the land. Now, without being much of a gambler, I'm willing to stake a large sum that he introduced the subject of your own trouble."

"He invariably did that," Heritage admitted.

"Naturally. That was part of his game. And you told him that you had not got over your illness, and that you were going to do an operation. And you told him how. Where were you when the little conversation between Henson and yourself took place?"

"He was asked into the dining room."

"And then you told him everything. Directly Henson's eyes fell upon that wall plug, he knew how to act. He made up his mind that the electric light would fail at the critical moment. Hence the dramatic 'accident' with the cycle. Once Henson had got into the house, the rest was easy. He had only to wet his fingers and press them hard against the two wires in the wall plug, and out pops the light, in consequence of the fuses blowing out. I don't know where Henson learned the trick, but I do know that I was a fool not to think of it. You see, the hall light, being dropped through from the floor above, was on another circuit. If it hadn't been we should have had our trouble with Van Sneck for nothing."

"He would have died?" David asked.

The two doctors nodded significantly.

"What a poisonous scoundrel he is!" David cried. "Miss Chris Henson does not hesitate to say that he was more or less instrumental in removing two people who helped her and her sister to defeat Henson, and now he makes two attacks on Van Sneck's life. Really, we ought to inform the police what has happened and have him arrested before he can do any further mischief. Penal servitude for life would about fit the case."

Van Sneck was jealously guarded by Heritage and Bell for the next few hours. He awoke the next morning little the worse for the operation. His eyes were clear now; the restless, eager look had gone from him.

Bell explained briefly. As he spoke his anxiety passed away. He saw that Van Sneck was following quite intelligently and rationally.

"Where am I?" he demanded. "What has happened?"

"I remember coming here," the Dutchman said. "I don't recall the rest just now. I feel like a man who is trying to piece the fragments of a dream together."

"You'll have it all right in an hour or two," Bell said, with an encouraging smile. "Meanwhile, your breakfast is ready. Yes, you can smoke afterwards if you like. And then you shall tell me all about Reginald Henson. As a matter of fact, we know all about it now."

"Oh," Van Sneck said, blankly. "You do, eh?"

"Yes; even to the history of the second Rembrandt, and the reason why Henson stabbed you and gave you that crack over the head. If you tell me the truth you are safe; if you don't—why, you stand a chance of joining Henson in the dock."

Bell went off, leaving Van Sneck to digest this speech at his leisure. Van Sneck lay back on his bed, propped up with pillows, and smoked many cigarettes before he expressed a desire to see Bell again. The latter came in with Steel. Heritage had gone elsewhere.

"This gentleman is Mr. Steel?" Van Sneck suggested.

Bell responded, somewhat drily, that it was. "But I see that you are going to tell us everything," he went on. "That being so, suppose you begin at the beginning. When you sold that copy of the 'Crimson Blind' to Lord Littimer had you the other copy?"

"Ach, you have got to the bottom of things, it seems," Van Sneck gurgled.

"Yes, I have saved your life, foolish as it might seem," Bell replied. "You came very near to losing it the second attempt last night at Henson's hands. Henson is done for, played out, burst up. We can arrest him on half a dozen charges when we please. We can have him arrested any time on a charge of conspiracy over those pictures—"

"Of which I am innocent; I swear it," said Van Sneck, solemnly. "Those two Rembrandt—they fell into my hands by what you call a slice of good luck. I am working hand-in-glove with Henson at the time, and show him them. I suggest Lord Littimer as a purchaser. He would, perhaps, buy the two, which would be a little fortune for me. Then Henson, he says, 'Don't you be a fool, Van Sneck. Suppress the other; say nothing about it. You get as much from Littimer for the one as you get for the two, because Lord Littimer thinks it is unique.'"

"That idea commended itself to a curio dealer?" Bell suggested, drily.

"But yes," Van Sneck said, eagerly. "Later on we disclose the other and get a second big price. And Lord Littimer he buy the other for a long price."

"After which you discreetly disappear," said Steel. "Did you steal those pictures?"

"No!" Van Sneck said, indignantly. "They came to me in the way of honest business—a poor workman who knows nothing of their value, and takes fifteen marks for them."

"Honest merchant," David murmured. "Pray go on."

"I had to go away. Some youthful foolishness over my garnets, raked up after many years. The police came down upon me so suddenly that I got away by the skin of my tooth. I leave the other Rembrandt, everything, behind me. I do not know that Henson he give me away so that he can steal the other Rembrandt."

"So you have found that out?" said Bell. "Who told you?"

"I learn that not so long ago. I learn it from a scoundrel called Merritt, a tool of Henson. He tells me to go to Littimer Castle to steal the Rembrandt for Henson, because Dr. Bell, he find my Rembrandt. Then I what you call pump Merritt, and he tells me all about the supposed robbery at Amsterdam and what was found in the portmanteau of Dr. Bell yonder. Then I go to Henson and tell him what I find out, and he laughs. Mind you, that was after I came here from Paris on business for Henson."

"About the time you bought that diamond-mounted cigar-case?" David asked, quietly.

Van Sneck nodded. He was evidently impressed by the knowledge possessed by his questioners.

"That's it," he said. "I buy it because Henson ask me to. Henson say he make it all right about the Rembrandt, and that if I do as I am told he give me $500. His money is to come on a certain day, but I pump and I pump, and I find that there is some game against Mr. Steel, who is a great novelist."

"That is very kind of you," David said, modestly.

"One against Miss Enid Henson," Van Sneck went on. "I met that young lady once I liked her; therefore, I say I will be no party to getting her into trouble. And Henson says I am one big fool, and that he is only giving Mr. Steel a lesson in the art of minding his own business. So I ask no further questions, though I am a good bit puzzled. With the last bank-notes I possess, I go to a place called Walon's and buy the cigar-case that Henson says. I meet him and hand over the case and ask him for the money. Henson swears that he has no money at all, not even enough to repay me the price of the cigar-case. He has been disappointed. And I have been drinking. So I swear I will write and ask Mr. Steel to see me, and do so."

"And you get an answer?" David asked.

"Sir, I do. You said you would see me the same night. It was a forgery?"

"It was. Henson had anticipated something like that. I know all about the forgery, how my note paper was procured and when the forgery was written. But that has very little to do with the story now. Please go on."

Van Sneck paused before he proceeded.

"I am not quite sober," he said. "I am hot with what I call my wrongs. I come here and ring the bell. The hall was in darkness. There was a light in the conservatory, but none in the study. I quite believed that it was Mr. Steele who opened the door and motioned me toward the study. When I turned around I found myself face to face with Henson."

Van Sneck paused again and shuddered at some hideous recollection. His eyes were dark and eager; there was a warm moisture like varnish on his face.

"Even that discovery did not quite sober me," he went on. "I fancied it was some joke, or that perhaps I had got into the wrong house. But no; it was the room of a literary gentleman. I—I expected to see Mr. Steel come in or to try the door. Henson smiled at me. Such a smile! He asked me if I had the receipt for the cigar-case about me, and I said it was in my pocket. Then he smiled again, and something told me my life was in danger.

"I was getting pretty sober by that time. It came to me that I had been lured there; that Henson had got into the house during the absence of the owner. It was late at night, in a quiet house, and nobody had seen me come. If that man liked to kill me he could do so and walk out of the house without the faintest chance of discovery. And he was twice my size and a man without feeling. I looked around me, furtively, for a weapon.

"He saw my glance, and understood it, and smiled again. I was trembling from head to foot now with a vague, nameless terror. From the very first I knew that I had not the smallest chance. Henson approached me and laid his hand on my shoulder. He wanted som thing. He gave that something a name. If I passed that something over to him I was free, if not—

"Well, gentlemen, I didn't believe him. He had made a discovery that frightened me. And I had what he wanted in my pocket. If I had handed it over to him he would not have spared me. As he approached me, my foot slipped and I stumbled into the conservatory. I fell backwards. And then I recovered myself and defied Henson.

"'Fool!' he hissed. 'Do you want to die?'

"But I knew that I should die in any case. Even then I could smile to myself as I thought how I could baffle my foe. Once, twice, three times he repeated his demands, and each time I was obdurate. I knew that he would kill me in any case.

"He came with a snarl of rage; there was a knife in his hand. I hurled a flower pot at his head and missed him. The next instant and he had me by the throat. I felt his knife between my shoulders, then a stunning blow on the head, and till I awoke here to-day I cannot recollect a single thing."

Van Sneck paused and wiped his face, wet with the horror of recollection. David Steel gave Bell a significant glance, and the latter nodded.

"Was the thing that Henson wanted a ring?" Steel asked, quietly.

(To be Continued.)

Honest Confession Rewarded.

Wandering up Fifth avenue, Charles Steckler, whom all mendicants seem to pounce upon as an easy mark, was approached by a Weary Willie of the worst type.

"Say, boss, give me a couple of cents, will yer?" said the wanderer.

"I will if you will tell me, honestly, what you want them for," said Mr Steckler.

"To me shame, boss," replied the tramp, "I confess that I want to put 'em on de Futurity."

"Here you are," said Mr. Steckler, laughingly handing him over two pennies. "Drop into the club house after the race and let me know if you win."—New York Times.

She had just handed him the frosty mitt, but he was game to the last hurdle.

"If you are ever in trouble," he said, "do not hesitate to lift up your voice and you will find me 'Johnny on the spot.'"

"I'm in trouble now," answered the human refrigerator with a sigh long drawn out.

"And behold!" exclaimed the unsuspecting youth, "I am here."

"Yes," she said, "that's the trouble."

His Case Not So Bad After All.

"Ah, it's a sad old world," sighed the man who had been cheated out of $20.

"Yes," assented his neighbor; "one of my horses got his head fast in the hayrack last night and broke his neck. I was offered $200 for him less than a month ago."

"Pshaw! That's too bad. Looks as though it was goin' to brighten up, don't it?" And he went on his way whistling cheerfully.

Jack—So you managed to get acquainted with Miss Millyuns at the seashore, eh?

Tom—Yes. She dropped her handkerchief on the beach, and after picking it up I made a few remarks for the purpose of breaking the ice as it were.

Jack—And was your ice-breaking effort a success?

Tom—Oh, yes; but I didn't cut any.

Might Be She Bumps.

"That man is a phrenologist, Pat."

"A what?" asked Pat, puzzled.

"A phrenologist."

"An' sure, what's that, sorr?"

"Why, a man that can tell, by feeling the bumps on your head, what kind of a man you are."

"Bumps on my head, is it?" exclaimed Pat. "Begorra, then, I think it would give him more of an idea what kind of a woman me wife is!"

Not In Any Rush.

"Swing low, sweet chariot!" exclaimed Deacon Darkleigh. "Swing low! Swing raight straight in ermongst us, en pick us up w'enst we ain't lookin', en tek us off w'ilst we novah dreamin' dat yo' comin' at all! Swing low, en swing fast!"

Conflict of Opinion.

"What a bright looking baby!" commented the male caller.

"Do you think so?" asked the proud father. "You know everybody says it looks just like me."

"Well, you believe what I tell you, old man," replied the caller, soothingly. "The others are jealous—that's what's the matter with them."

Out of Sorts.

"See here," said the conceited young stump speaker, "you promised to print my speech in full, and you haven't given more than half of it."

"Yes," replied the editor of the county paper, "but I didn't promise to buy the extra fonts of capital I's we found we'd need."

Doris—Indirectly. It stated that "Miss Olde and Mr. Yale were married, the latter being a well known collector of antiquities."

MYTHIST IN TOILS

REMARKABLE SERIES OF PROGRESSIVE SWINDLES IN CHICAGO.

VICTIMS BY THE THOUSANDS.

CHICAGO MAN CHARGED WITH TAKING PEOPLE'S MONEY UNLAWFULLY.

REALIZES A BIG FORTUNE.

CREATES MYTHICAL MILLIONAIRE, WHOM HE SETS POLICE AFTER.

Chicago, Oct. 12. — Search for a missing millionaire who, not satisfied with his own vast fortune, was said to have embezzled $385,000 from a Chicago concern, came to an abrupt stop yesterday when the government secret service men discovered that no such person as F. M. Bartlett, the man they had been seeking, ever existed.

There was an arrest, nevertheless, and John H. Dalton, North side politician and saloonkeeper, was taken into custody by a deputy United States marshal. Dalton, who has been under arrest on similar charges before, was taken on a capais issued immediately after the federal grand jury had returned a true bill charging him with misuse of the mails.

The story told the grand jury revealed a clever swindle by which Dalton is said to have realized several hundred thousand dollars. Thus far more than 5,600 victims have been found and they lost amounts varying from $5 to $500.

Among These Victims are numbered some of the largest newspapers in the country. Three years ago Dalton organized the International Aural Clinic and began to advertise to cure deafness by mail.

Money came in so rapidly that Dalton decided to add another branch to his establishment. This he christened the United States Distillers' Distributing company. This second organization advertised to send four bottles of whiskey to any address upon receipt of $3.50.

Hundreds bit at this bait, too. The "whisky" was a decoction put up by Dalton, and was made of high-wines and flavoring and coloring extracts, it is charged. This company also advertised "whisky certificates" for sale at a price so low that no saloonkeeper who thought he was wise refused to buy them. These certificates set forth that a certain quantity of whisky, as described on the document, would be delivered to the bearer of the certificate upon payment of $1.10 per gallon. For a time

Business Was Slack with the United States Distilling company and the International Aural Clinic, and Dalton organized the Independent Advertising agency. It had offices in the Schiller building, and Louis Ogle was president and Dalton was secretary and treasurer. The agency sent letters to nearly every newspaper in the country, offering to place the advertising of the United States Distillers' Distribution company and the International Aural Clinic, provided terms could be agreed upon.

This was last December, and big advertisements of the two concerns began to appear in newspapers all over the country. The result was a stream of letter, every one containing money for "whisky" or the Cure for Deafness, poured into the two establishments. This continued until the beginning of April, when bills for the advertising began to come in. They were not paid. Instead, President Ogle announced in a letter which showed pathos in every line, that the bills could not be paid. He explained that in January Mr. Dalton had retired from the agency, disposing of all his stock and holdings to Mr. F. M. Bartlett, a new York millionaire. Because Mr. Bartlett was a man of such great wealth no watch was kept on his books, which he, as treasurer, had sole access to. On March 25, as President Ogle said, he found Bartlett missing. With him, he said, had gone $385,000.

Then he went to Harrison street police station and swore out a warrant charging Mr. Bartlett with embezzling $26,000.

Search for the missing millionaire was begun, but it had not gone far before the government officials found no such person as Bartlett ever existed. Other detectives were not so wise, and not until the grand jury's indictment of Dalton became known did they cease their search for the mythical millionaire.

Proposed Amendments

TO THE

Constitution of Minnesota

Hon. Peter E. Hanson, Secretary of State—Sir:

Pursuant to Chapter 157 of the General Laws of 1887, I herewith file in your office synopses of Amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota as proposed by the General Laws of the State of Minnesota enacted at the General Session of the Legislature in 1901 and the Extra Session in 1902, as well as a synopsis of Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, being an Act involving the taxation of railroad property, to be submitted to the electors of the State for adoption or rejection at the next General Election.

Yours respectfully,
W. B. DOUGLAS,
Attorney General.

SYNOPSES OF AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE SAID STATE AT THE GENERAL SESSION IN 1901 AND THE EXTRA SESSION IN 1902, AS WELL AS A SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER 150 OF THE GENERAL LAWS OF 1901, PROPOSING AN INCREASE OF THE GROSS EARNINGS TAX UPON RAILROAD PROPERTIES.

I.

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 32a, of Article IV of the State Constitution, the Legislature by Act approved April 6, 1901, known as Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, present to the electors of the State for rejection or approval, the following, to wit:

Section 1. That every railway company owning or operating any line of railway situated within, or partly within, this state shall, during the year 1903, and annually thereafter, pay into the treasury of this state, as taxes upon all property within this state owned or operated for railway purposes by such company, including equipment, appurtenances, appendages and franchises thereof, a sum of money equal to four (4) per cent of the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state; and the payment of such taxes shall be in full and in lieu of all other taxes upon the property and franchises so taxed. The lands acquired by public grant shall be and remain exempt from taxation until sold or contracted to be sold or conveyed as provided in the respective acts whereby such grants were made.

Sec. 2. The term "the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state," as used in section one (1) of this act, is hereby declared and shall be construed to mean all earnings on business beginning and ending within the state, and a proportion of earnings on all interstate business passing through, into or out of the state as the mileage operated within the state bears to the entire mileage operated by such company.

Sec. 3. All acts and parts of acts not inconsistent herewith regulating the payment, collection, time of payment, enforcement, or reports involving the amount of taxes upon the gross earnings of railroad companies within this state, or providing penalties for the non-payment of such taxes, are hereby made applicable to this act so far as they apply; and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. Upon failure to pay the amount of such taxes legally due upon the dates heretofore provided by law for the payment thereof, in addition to existing remedies, collection may be enforced in a civil action brought in the name of the State of Minnesota in the district court of any county.

Sec. 5. This act shall be submitted to the people of this state for their approval or rejection at the next general election for the year 1902.

(The omitted provision refers to the method of printing the ballot and submitting the act for ratification.)

This act provides for an increase of the amount of taxes collected by the state upon the property of the railroads situated within the State, from three per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway within the State, to a sum of money equal to four per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway therein.

Under the terms of the Constitution above referred to, this Act of the Legislature must be submitted to legal voters of the State, and will become operative if adopted, by a majority of such electors voting at the next general election.

II.

By an Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved February 28, 1901, and known as House File No. 100, it is proposed to amend Article Eight (8), Section Six (6), of the Constitution.

This Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this state may be invested in the purchase of bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this state, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this state; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the issue of which the same is part would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed seven per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or indebtedness be made at a lower rate of interest than three per cent per annum, nor for a shorter period than five (5) years nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the county, town, school district, city, village, or county lines shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city in this state at the time of issuing of such bonds from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

It is proposed by said act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this state may be invested in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this state, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this state; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the bonds to be issued or purchased would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or investments be made at a lower rate of interest than three (3) per cent per annum, nor for a shorter period than five (5) years, nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the county, town, school district, city, village, or county lines shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city in this state from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the investment of the permanent school and university fund of this state for a period of not less than five (5) or more than twenty (20) years, at an interest rate not less than three (3) per cent per annum, in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town, or village of this state, when the bonds to be issued or purchased will not make the entire bonded indebtedness of such municipalities exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property contained therein.

The substantial change proposed by said amendment is to authorize the such investments, when the entire indebtedness, including the loan in question, does not exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property in such municipalities, whereas, under the existing Constitution loans are permitted only where such total indebtedness does not exceed seven (7) per cent of the assessed valuation.

III.

By An Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota Approved April 13, 1901, and known as House File No. 353, it is proposed to amend Section Sixteen (16) of Article Nine (9) of the Constitution.

The Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "state road and bridge fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-twentieth (1-20) of one (1) mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The legislature is also authorized to provide for the appointment by the governor of the state of a board to be known as the "state highway commission," consisting of three (3) members, who shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by law, without salary or compensation other than personal expenses.

Such commission shall have general superintendence of the construction of state roads and bridges and shall use such fund in the construction thereof and distribute the same in the several counties in the state upon an equitable basis. Provided, further, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (1/2) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that no more than one-third (1-3) of such fund accruing in any year shall be expended for bridges, and in no case shall more than one-third (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund.

It is proposed by said Act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "State Road and Bridge Fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of the state, and providing in its discretion for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any one year one-tenth (1-10) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The existing Constitution authorizes legislation providing for a levy of a state tax of 1-20 of one mill for the purpose of building roads and bridges, and provides for its use under the direction of a State Highway Commission in such counties as shall contribute at least double the amount of the State moneys expended by said Commission for such purpose, subject also to certain other limitations.

By the proposed change, a tax of 1-10 of one mill is authorized to be levied for this purpose; the Highway Commission is abolished, and the result, if the proposed amendment is adopted, will be to place the distribution of such funds in the hands of the Legislature, without limitation or restriction.

IV.

By an act of the legislature of the State of Minnesota, known as chapter one (1) of the Laws of the Extra Session of 1902, it is proposed to amend sections one (1), two (2) and three (3) of article nine (9) of the constitution.

The sections as now existing read as follows:

"Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided, that the legislature may, by general law or special act, authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon the property to be benefited by such improvements, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe; and provided, further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of laying water pipes and supplying any city or municipality with water, the legislature may, by general or special law, authorize any such city or municipality, having a population of five thousand or more, to levy an annual tax or assessment upon the lineal foot of all lands fronting on any water main or water pipes laid by such city or municipality within corporate limits of said city, for supplying water to the citizens thereof, without regard to the cash value of such property, and to empower such city to collect any such tax assessments, or fines or penalties for failure to pay the same, or any fine or penalty for any violation of the rules of such city or municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any water rate due for the same.

And provided further, that there may be by law levied and collected a tax upon all inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description above a fixed and specified sum, of any and all natural persons and corporations. Such tax above such exempted sum may be uniform, or it may be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum tax of five per cent.

Sec. 2. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated (ordinary) expenses of the state for each year; and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses of the state for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year, the legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency of the preceding year, together with the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 3. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money; but public burying grounds, public schoolhouses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property used for religious purposes, and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property to an amount not exceeding in value two hundred dollars for each individual, shall, by general laws, be exempt from taxation.

It is proposed by said chapter to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 1. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated ordinary expenses of the state for each year, and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year the legislature shall at its next general session provide for levying a tax sufficient to pay such deficiency. And whenever the income of the state from other sources shall be sufficient to defray all of its ordinary expenses without the levy of any annual state tax, such tax levy shall be omitted. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be and shall be levied and collected for public purposes only; and all property on which taxes are to be levied, except as herein otherwise provided, shall have a cash valuation, and shall be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided that whenever the levy of a tax for state purposes is omitted as above provided, the taxes levied for local purposes shall be upon a valuation of the property within the several counties and the subdivisions thereof, which shall be equalized and uniform throughout each county. The legislature may by general or special law authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon property benefited thereby, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. There may be levied and collected an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority. In addition to the tax on the real property and other personal property of the person or corporation holding such franchise; or in lieu of a tax on such franchise alone, or in lieu of a tax on such franchise and the personal property used in connection with the exercise of the same, there may be imposed such tax upon the gross earnings of the person or corporation holding such franchise as the legislature may determine; and said tax shall be apportioned between the state, counties and municipalities where such franchise is exercised, in the same manner as real estate taxes are apportioned. There may be levied and collected a transfer tax not to exceed 5 per centum upon the estates of decedents, above a fixed and specified sum, which tax may be uniform or graded or progressive. There may be levied and collected a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages which shall be in lieu of all other taxes on the debt secured by such mortgages; and a tax upon the income from all credits owned by persons or corporations, as such credits are now or may be hereafter defined by law, and also on the income arising from all personal property, and also upon the income of all persons or corporations above the sum of $1,000 per annum, not arising from such credits or from such personal property, or from property otherwise taxed in this state. Such income tax shall be uniform throughout the state, and may be graded or progressive or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed 10 per centum upon the income from such credits, and upon the income from personal property, and at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum upon such other income. Laws shall be passed taxing all real and personal property; provided that credits and personal property shall not be subject to other taxation than the income or registry tax herein authorized, while the law imposing such income or registry tax shall be in force; provided, public burying grounds, public schools, public hospitals, public library associations, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches and church property used exclusively for religious purposes, and institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for public purposes, and personal property to an amount not exceeding $300 to each individual shall be exempt from taxation, but such personal exemption shall not be allowed to more than one member of the same family. Provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to amend the existing Constitution, as follows:

1st. To prohibit the legislature from surrendering or contracting away the power of taxation.

2nd. To provide that whenever the income of the State derived other than from direct taxation upon real and personal property shall be sufficient to defray all the expenses of the State, and the direct tax levied for such purpose is omitted, taxes for local purposes shall be levied upon the taxable property of the county, which shall be equal and uniform throughout the county as distinguished from being equal and uniform throughout the State.

3rd. To authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements under and pursuant to special, as distinguished from general, laws.

4th. The legislature is authorized to provide for the levy and collection of an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on real and personal property of the person or corporation holding the same.

5th. The Legislature is authorized to provide a tax upon the gross earnings of any person or corporation holding such a franchise, conditioned that such gross-earnings tax may be in lieu of a tax upon the franchise or upon the franchise and personal property as well.

6th. Authority is conferred upon the Legislature to provide for the levy and collection of a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages which shall be in lieu of all other tax on the debt secured by such mortgage.

7th. The Legislature is authorized to provide for a tax upon incomes in excess of $1,000 per annum, not arising from credits or personal property or from property otherwise taxed in this State, and also a tax upon the income derived from credits as well as from personal property. Such tax shall be uniform throughout the State and may be graded, or progressive, or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed ten percentum upon incomes derived from credits and personal property, and at a rate not exceeding four per cent per annum upon such other income. In case of the imposition of the registry tax above referred to, or of an income tax arising from credits or personal property, all credits and personal property owned by the party against whom such registry or income tax is imposed is exempted from all taxation while the law imposing such income or registry tax is in force.

A Costly Cabin.

On Warren's island, off the coast of Maine, is being erected what is properly described as "a palatial log cabin." It is composed of spruce logs, and costs the tidy little sum of $7,000. The entire island on which this summer palace is erected was purchased by the late William H. Folwell of Philadelphia. Mr. Folwell died before the completion of the house. The work is now superintended by his son, William H. Folwell, Jr. Some idea of the size of the "cabin" may be gained from consideration of the fact that there are twenty-two sleeping rooms on the second floor. On the ground floor there is a fireplace of brick and granite, the mantelpieces being of marble, twelve feet in length, three in width and nine inches thick, the whole piece of work weighing some forty tons.—New York Tribune.

A Kansas mule balked the other day, and thereby contributed to the fund of real life romance. How? Well, the long eared quadruped was being driven by an angry father in chase of his eloping daughter and the mule stopped to think it over long enough to let the anxious couple have the knot tied.

He—How charmingly you sing. She—Do you really think so? He—Oh, yes, indeed. I never listen to you without wishing you were where my folks in Colorado could hear you.—Chicago American.

HOPE DASHED OUT

CONFERENCE THAT PROMISED SOLUTION OF STRIKE IS A FIZZLE.

OPERATORS ARE OBSTINATE

WILL RESIST DEMANDS OF THE MINERS' UNION TO THE BITTER END.

STRONG PRESSURE IS BROUGHT

THREE SENATORS AND GOV. ODELL TRY PERSUASIVE MEASURES.

New York, Oct. 11.—Replete at its opening with promise of a solution of the long-drawn-out struggle between the United Mineworkers of America and the operators of the anthracite properties in Pennsylvania, yesterday closed without apparent appreciable progress toward an agreement upon the issues in controversy. Most noteworthy of the day's events was a conference at the office of Senator T. C. Platt, at which there were present the governor of New York and nearly all the heads of the big corporations controlling the anthracite fields. In all seeming this conference had a contrary effect to that which had been hoped from it, and the operators departed declaring adherence to the policy they have followed from the first of resisting the demands of the miners' union to the bitter end. There were other conferences during the day in which President Mitchell and people of more or less consequence in the industrial world participated, but these, so far as information goes, were as barren of results as the principal meeting. In brief, there has been no change in the situation, so far as it might have been affected by the gathering in New York of labor leaders, mine operators and public men.

Was Without Result.

From what may be described as an inside and authoritative source, it may be announced that the conference at the office of Senator Platt was absolutely without result, the operators refusing to consider the political aspect of the situation and maintaining the position that the question was one between employer and employe as to the management of the properties concerned.

The story of the day really centers about the meeting held in the afternoon in Senator Platt's office.

Present at This Meeting were Gov. Odell, Senators Quay and Penrose of Pennsylvania, Senator Platt, President Olyphant of the Delaware & Hudson, President Fowler of the Ontario & Western, President Truesdale of the Lackawanna, Chairman Thomas of the Erie, John Markle, representing the independent operators; David Wilcox, vice president and general counsel of the Delaware & Hudson; David Lamar and Edward Lauterbach. At the conclusion of the meeting none present would say what had taken place or whether any solution to the strike trouble had been reached.

Mr. Lauterbach went back and forth from the office during the conference, and made a trip to J. P. Morgan's office. He did not see Mr. Morgan. He then went back to the conference room. Mr. Lauterbach replied to questions by saying that appearances looked very hopeful for a speedy settlement of the strike. He said he had seen President Mitchell Wednesday night and that he seemed disposed to act with a Spirit of Fairness.

The conference ended at 4:30 o'clock. President Fowler was the first to leave, the other operators following him. The coal road presidents referred all inquiries to the senators and Gov. Odell.

"I've nothing to say; there is nothing to be said," was Gov. Odell's answer to a question.

Senator Quay likewise had nothing to say.

Senator Platt was the last to leave his office.

"I don't think I can say anything," he said. "I am too tired. There will be further meeting. That is all I can say at present."

Although President Mitchell apparently had no part in the conference between the senators and the operators his actions were anxiously awaited. Early in the day he was joined at the Ashland house by ex-State Senator Moses W. Solomon of Chicago. The Chicagoan has so far refused to disclose his mission, saying he was Merely a Messenger.

During the morning Mr. Mitchell had a long conference with his three district presidents. Afterward District President Nicholls had this to say:

"Unless the demands of the strikers are granted in full I do not see how President Mitchell can settle the strike without calling a convention. If only a part of the demands are granted that would render it necessary to call a convention and that would take two weeks at least."

Late in the afternoon President Mitchell and the district presidents had another conference at the Ashland house. Mr. Nicholls said that his associates had not considered any formal or informal proposition from the operators. He said that the strike might possibly be settled by Monday, but intimated that it was improbable.

CONFERENCE AT DETROIT.

Big Bunch of Suggestions Handed Out to President Roosevelt.

Detroit, Oct. 11.—The 185 delegates representing eleven states who attended the interstate conference on the coal situation here yesterday adopted resolutions after much debate urging the president to institute civil proceedings looking to the enforcement of the interstate commerce act against the coal companies and criminal proceedings against their officers; petitioning the governor of Pennsylvania to call a special session of the legislature of that state to condemn all the coal carrying roads and sufficient of the mines to supply the demands of the people. Further, the resolution petitions the president to call a special session of the house of representatives and to recommend the appointment of a committee with full power to investigate the cause of the strike and to place the blame therefor. A supplemental resolution offered by Judge Frank E. Garvin of Indianapolis was also adopted and ordered attached to the main resolutions. It urges the president to at once institute proceedings to dissolve "the present combination of the coal operators" and to have a receiver appointed to operate the mines. The supplemental report urges a special session of congress if it is impossible at present for the president to take action.

IS STILL DETERMINED.

President Roosevelt Not Discouraged by Mitchell's Reply.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The letter of President Mitchell expressing regret that he could not comply with the president's request to have the miners return to work was given out from the White House yesterday morning, and in the afternoon Secretary Root and Attorney General Knox were in conference with the president.

None of the president's advisers were surprised by the reply of Mr. Mitchell. It was what they expected. Neither did they complain because Mr. Mitchell declined to act favorably on the president's suggestion. There is still an air of confidence about the White House. President Roosevelt is determined to find some way to end the coal famine, if that is possible. He hopes that the conference in New York will result in some agreement, but if it fails there will be a renowed effort here. Just what will be the next move by the administration is kept a well-guarded secret.

All Is Quiet.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 10. — There were no developments in the mineworkers' strike in this valley yesterday. The entire community remains quiet and the troops had nothing more to do than go through their daily routine.

CUBA IS FAST DRIFTING AWAY.

Youthful Republic Is Careless of Its Welfare.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The situation as to Cuba is such at present as to give great concern. It is feared that Cuba is drifting away, and evidence is multiplying day by day to mark the growth of a spirit of indifference toward the cultivation of friendly commercial relations with the United States that almost borders on hostility. The best efforts of the state department thus far have failed to secure the adhesion of the Cuban government to the treaty which, by the terms of the Platt amendment, must be entered into by the two governments. That treaty is now awaiting the approval of the Cuban government, which approval is withheld, not with any expressed intention of rejecting the convention, but through what is regarded here as the natural inertia of the Cubans in diplomatic matters.

TOOTH SEARCH KILLS HIM.

Operation to Remove False Molars That Are Not There Is Fatal.

Cleveland, Oct. 11.—Frank Buettner, a well known contractor of this city, died early yesterday as the result of an operation performed to remove a set of false teeth which it was supposed he had swallowed while asleep Monday night. An X-ray machine was used on Buettner, which the surgeons declared showed the teeth to be in the aesophagus. Just as the latter had been opened its entire length a relative of Buettner rushed into the operating room with the missing set of teeth, which had been found in Buetther's bed. It was then learned that Buettner was suffering from a severe case of acute laryngitis. The pain in his throat led him to believe he had swallowed the teeth.

WHAT HITCHCOCK WANTS.

About Hundred and Sixty-Seven Millions for His Department.

Washington, Oct. 11. — The grand total of appropriations which the interior department asks of congress for the next fiscal year, in the estimates which have just been completed, is approximately $167,000,000. Of this $142,200,700 is for pensions, including expenses of administration and distribution. The estimates of expenses of the Indian bureau aggregate $7,000,000, and of the general land office $2,094,130. The largest increase asked for in the land service is an additional $200,000 for the protection of forest reserves, the total for such work being $500,000.

PRIEST DIES OF POISON.

Negro Servant Also Likely to Be Victim of Mineral Water.

Mannington, W. Va., Oct. 11. — Fr. W. R. Prendergast, pastor of the Catholic church here, died at 10 o'clock yesterday from the results of poison taken into his stomach by means of mineral water served at a dinner the previous night. A colored servant is at the point of death, and twelve other people, who drank the water are very ill. The poisoning is a mystery and the authorities are investigating.

FATAL COLLISION.

One Killed and Over a Score Are Injured.

Danbury, Conn., Oct. 11.—One person dead and over a score injured is the result of a head-on collision on the Highland division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad last night directly in front of the station at Sandy Hook. An excursion train of fourteen cars crashed into the regular west-bound train standing in front of the station discharging passengers.

LAW IN BALANCE

STATE SUPREME COURT WILL PASS UPON THE DRAINAGE LAW.

POLK COUNTY DITCH CASE UP

PETITIONERS SET FORTH CLAIM THAT THE LAW IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

POINTS ON WHICH IT IS FOUNDER

PROVIDES FOR CONDEMNATION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY FOR PRIVATE USE.

St. Paul, Special, Oct. 10.—Yesterday's session of the supreme court was taken up entirely with the hearing of the case instituted by John Utick and others against the board of county commissioners of Polk county to test the validity of the Minnesota drainage act of 1901. Gideon S. Ives appeared for the petitioners and Hiram F. Stevens and C. W. Somerby, assistant attorney general, for the respondents. Mr. Stevens was largely instrumental in drawing the act in question, while Mr. Ives had much to do with framing the drainage act of 1887. Both prepared elaborate briefs.

Fortunes Are Involved.

Many counties have instituted proceedings under this act, and much depends on the decision in this case. Seven or eight hundred thousand dollars is involved in the construction of ditches throughout the state that are projected or in course of construction. A great many bonds have been floated to pay for these, and other bonds are in process of issue and are held back pending the decision of this case. If the act is declared unconstitutional many serious consequences are likely to follow in relation to the financial propositions that these counties must meet.

Judge Collins was not present at the hearing, but by agreement of the attorneys the matter was to be submitted, as far as he was concerned, upon the briefs.

The case was brought up on a writ of certiorari, and it was asserted by the petitioners that the act was unconstitutional in that it provided for the condemnation of private property for private uses. Another ground upon which the unconstitutionality was pleaded was that the act in its opening section failed to state that the ditches constructed under the act were public ditches.

California Precedent.

The respondents answered that the ditches and drains of this state were just as much public utilities and necessities as are the irrigation canals of California, and that the United States supreme court has upheld the irrigation act of California, which is almost identical with the Minnesota drainage act. The United States supreme court in sustaining the California act held that irrigating canals, being a necessity in California, there being thousands of acres of arid land useless unless water was brought to them, the act did not provide for the taking of private property for private uses, even though the ditches crossed lands which were well-watered and were not, from a cultivation standpoint, benefited by the irrigation.

It was argued that in Minnesota there are thousands of acres of swamp land absolutely unfit for anything unless drained, and that the act with reference to Minnesota should be given the same construction as the California act.

Defends Drainage Law.

With reference to the contention that it was not specified in the opening section of the act that the ditches were public ditches it was answered that in the last two sections the legislature determined that the ditches constructed under the act were public ditches and that they were not to be established unless there was a public necessity shown to exist, and all lands crossed were to be assessed according to benefits or damage.

Mr. Somerby made the point that drainage canals in Minnesota were even more of an essentially public necessity than were irrigation ditches in California and argued that the conditions in any state with reference to an improvement are the determining factor with the courts as to whether or not such improvements are public improvements.

FIVE RIOTERS KILLED.

Compulsory Closing of Socialist Club Results in Warfare.

Gibraltar, Oct. 10. — Compulsory closing of a Socialist club within the Spanish lines resulted in a riot in which five of the rioters were killed and several wounded. The mob fired upon the civil guard, who were temporarily driven back, but returned the fire of the rioters and scattered their assailants. The mob afterward attacked the house of the mayor and other dwellings before it was finally disposed. A battalion of infantry and a squadron of cavalry have arrived here from San Roque.

FRENCH MINERS DETERMINED.

Paris, Oct. 10. — The strike movement has become general almost everywhere in the mining districts. The national committee of the French Miners' association held a meeting here yesterday to discuss the situation. The delegates drew up a letter, copies of which they sent to the coal masters' association and M. Combes, the prime minister, in which they declared that the strike which had begun could end only in victory for the men. The letter invites Premier Combes to bring the masters and delegates together for the purpose of settling their differences.

Robert P. Wallace Dies at St. Paul City Hospital.

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—Death dismissed the charge of forgery in the first degree against Robert P. Wallace. The young man died at the city hospital last evening of heart failure. Last summer Wallace entered the store of Mrs. Carrie Hyde on East Sixth street, and is said to have taken a draft made out to the Connecticut Mutual Insurance company for $150, and, by erasing the name of the payee and inserting his own, had it cashed at the State Bank of St. Paul. Wallace then left for New York, where he was arrested. He was brought back to St. Paul by a deputy sheriff and was lodged in the county jail pending the action of the grand jury. While being brought to St. Paul he developed what appeared to be insanity and last Wednesday he was removed to the city hospital for treatment. He gradually grew worse while being treated for mental trouble and died yesterday.

Word has been received from Wilkesbarre, Pa., that E. W. Tourney of Scranton, Pa., has given himself up. The tragedy was enacted near Lucerne, Pa. FIVE PERSONS LIKELY TO DIE

TWO CHILDREN ARE AMONG THE VICTIMS OF THE TEACHER'S GUN.

Toowes, a school teacher at Altoona, the first station on the Great Northern on the Manitoba side of the line, yesterday shot and fatally wounded two members of the school board and two of his pupils. The other member of the board and another pupil were wounded. Toowes then turned the weapon on himself and inflicted a wound from the effects of which he will die.

Toowes and the members of the board of directors of the school had had several disagreements, in which the board made strenuous objection to the manner in which he conducted the school. They called in a body yesterday to remonstrate with him, and, after a heated argument, Toewes drew his revolver and began firing. He fired indiscriminately into the crowd, and children climbed under the desks and benches to escape the rain of bullets which were sent in the direction of his accuser.

A. Rempel and J. Thiebert, two of the members of the board, were shot down and cannot recover from their wounds. P. Kehler, the other member, was wounded less seriously, although his injuries may prove fatal. Two of Kehler's girls and a daughter of Rempel's were shot. The company is now getting crews into the woods to lay ties and rails on the new logging road, running west from Hawthorne, where it connects with the Omaha. Lumber camps are to be built a mile and a half west. They will be of boards instead of logs, this innovation being caused by the fact that less material is thus used, and that the logs are very valuable now. The timber will not be brought here to be sawed, but will go to Hayward.

FAST MAIL TRAIN CROSSING THE MISSOURI RIVER AT SIBLEY, IOWA

Directions in London.

In London and throughout the tight little island the words "up" and "down" have a peculiar significance. In going to London from any part of England you go "up." In traveling in any direction from the capital you go "down." So in London itself everything goes "up" if it goes in the direction of the bank—that is, the Bank of England—and going from that center toward any of the points of the compass is to go "down."

The word bank, which is not only always spelled with a capital "B," but is always uttered with an impressiveness that suggests an initial letter of the largest type, may be said to be in a sense interchangeable with city, a term of equal dignity and value in the eyes of Englishmen, and likewise invariably adorned with a capital "C."

The City does not mean London by any means. It means a certain limited section of London, the part where business is mainly carried on and where the great financial institutions stand.

Some Resemblance.

It was a landlord and tenant case which was before Judge Lintott in the second district court here, says a Newark telegram to the New York Press. The plaintiff, Bernard Benson, who says James Barneman owes him a month's rent, was on the stand.

"Did you ask him for the rent?" the judge inquired.

"I did."

"What did he say?"

"He told me to go to h—"

"What did you do?"

"I came right down here to court, your honor."

"Well," remarked the judge, as he mopped his forehead and glanced at an electric fan which had ceased fanning the judge's brow, "there may be some points of resemblance."

Chicago Men Not Gallant.

The lack of gallantry on the part of Chicago's men was never so forcibly illustrated as in the case of sweet Beulah Corley, who had the misfortune to be found drunk in a doorway, writes Roswell Field in the Chicago Evening Post. When she was fined by the judge, and had no money to save her from the bridewell, she appealed to the spectators, offering to marry any man who would pay her fine and save her from further disgrace. And in this whole city there was none to heed her cry. It is true that most men would shrink from a hasty promise to love and cherish a young woman who leaped into fame by decorating a doorway while in a condition of intoxication, but we dare say the knights of old would have responded chivalrously to the invitation. Still, at the prevailing prices for meat and coal, Beulah must not be surprised that gallantry has its limits. We hope by this time that the fine has been paid, without the added incumbrance, and that she will go and sin no more.

A Wealthy Pyromaniac.

Young Dennison H. Bell, a pyromaniac confined in the Bloomingdale asylum, is one of the heirs to the millions of his father, Dr. Christopher H. Bell, who died recently in Germany. Bell created a sensation at Newport two years ago by burning down costly villas and cunningly concealing the origin of the fires. He finally admitted he was the firebug and was placed under restraint after his insanity was established. The boy's misfortune is believed to have broken his father's heart, for after the exposure the latter sold his American property and moved to Europe, where he lived in seclusion until his death.

Assaulted on His Soft Side.

The young man stood before the grim old captain of industry and looked him full in the face.

"Well, sir," said Horatious J. Hardrox, "you wished to see me, I believe?"

"No, sir. I did not wish to see you. I am not here because I wish to be, but because it is necessary. You have a daughter. I will not ask you to sacrifice any of your valuable time in listening to a catalogue of her charms. You probably have noticed most of them. I will come down to business, sir, at once. She and I desire to merge our interests, and I trust that I have made no bull in hoping you may not take a bearish attitude toward the proposed combination."

"Trust—combination, bull and bear—merge? All right. Take her, my boy. You seem to be one of us."

Renovating British Embassy.

Michael Herbert, the new British minister to this country, is expected to take a leading part in the social life of Washington the coming winter. The embassy is to be renovated and modernized as to its interior. It needs this work very badly, because while one of the most imposing residences in Connecticut avenue, it is also one of the stuffiest. It is understood that Mr. Herbert will come to this country long enough to present his credentials and then return to England for a short time while the embassy is in the hands of the artisans. It is expected that the embassy durin gthe coming winter will be one of the most brilliant places in Washington official life, as Mrs. Herbert's relatives in New York, the Vanderbilts, the Wilsons and the rest, will be there during the season and there will be much entertaining.

Finance in South America.

A story of the Colombian idea of taxation is told by Peter MacQueen, the Boston traveler, who returned to this city last week, after a visit to the seat of the South American revolution.

"Some American friends of mine," said Mr. MacQueen, "were visited by the city officials of Colon.

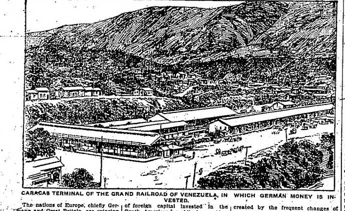
"'Senor,' said the leader of the delegation, 'we have come to collect $12 in gold from you, your share of the cost of collecting the garbage for this year.'

"'But, my dear sir,' said the American, in surprise, 'you have not collected the garbage once during the whole year.'

"'That's true,' said the collector, scratching his head; 'well, let's make it $6, then.'"—New York Times.

Truth may be stranger than fiction, but the average liar makes a desperate effort to supply contrary proof.

DIFFICULTIES IN VENEZUELA



CARACAS TERMINAL OF THE GRAND RAILROAD OF VENEZUELA, IN WHICH GERMAN MONEY IS INVESTED.

The nations of Europe, chiefly Germany and Great Britain, are evincing increased irritation over the conduct of Venezuelan internal affairs, and a crisis seems approaching. The amount of foreign capital invested in the South American republic is considerable, and the powers resent the interests of their subjects being placed in jeopardy by the constant turmoil created by the frequent changes of government. Our illustration shows the Caracas terminal of the Grand Railroad of Venezuela, in which much German money is invested.

Turkey and Chicken Crop.

"From all reports there will be a shortage in the turkey crop this year," says W. L. Ogden in the Sioux City, Iowa, Tribune, "but it is impossible to approximate what the shortage will be as the turkey season will not be on until October. This has been a bad season for growing turkeys owing to the heavy rains. Young turkeys will not thrive in wet weather. Last year there was a shortage in the amount of turkeys raised because of the scarcity of the food. Then the crop was only about 75 per cent and from all reports it will be still less this year. I don't believe there will be much of a falling off in the number of chickens raised this year. So far the market looks good, with prices several cents higher than last year. At this time last year spring chickens sold at nine cents per pound. This year there is an increase of two cents in the price. The market price for hens also is about two cents higher than last year. This increase, however, is not due to a shortage in the crop, but is brought about owing to the high price of meat. Because of this raisers are eating chickens instead of sending them to the market.

Feeding Cattle.

Pigs should always follow the fattening cattle, at least one pig to every two steers. A good way to feed fodder corn is to have two large yards or fields, hog tight. Scatter the corn fodder in yard No. 1 and allow your fattening cattle to be in there for the first half day. Scatter more corn fodder in yard No. 2, and drive cattle from yard No. 1 to yard No. 2 for the second half day. Then drive the other stock—pigs, cattle and horses—into yard No. 1 where the fattening cattle have been, and they will pick up everything, so there will not be any waste.

When you have fed this way for two or three months confine your fattening cattle in a small yard and feed snapped corn for about a month or six weeks. If the weather is cold, shelled corn is better for them, mixed with about one-fourth oats and a little oil cake. For coarse food, clover or timothy hay is the best, but if hay is scarce stock fed in this way will do well on straw. Always have plenty of water where they can get at it; also keep salt mixed with sulphur in front of them.—A. M. Stewart.

The World's Wheat Crop.

According to Beerbohm's estimates the world's wheat crop this year is 2,861,200,000 bushels of 60 pounds, against 2,801,200,000 such bushels in 1901, a difference of 60,000,000 bushels in favor of this year. This is the largest crop since that of 1898, which Beerbohm puts down at 2,902,400,000 bushels of 60 pounds. The crop of the Southern hemisphere included in these figures is in each case that of the harvest following the European harvest of the year for which the estimate is given. Thus the estimate for 1902 includes the estimated crops to be harvested in the Southern hemisphere a few months hence. The crop of Argentina to be harvested in November, December and January next is put down at 80,000,000 bushels, a considerable increase on the last crop of that country. Uruguay and Chili, too, are credited with increased crops, but the crop of Australasia is estimated at only 32,000,000 bushels, which is less than the production of any recent year, although short crops in that part of the world have, with only two exceptions, been the rule for almost a decade past.

Roots in Hog Feed.

So far as economy is concerned little can be said about roots in the ration for the hog. But they have a value in addition to the nutriment that is in them. It takes from six to eight pounds of roots to equal in feeding value one pound of mixed grain. But the feeding of roots keeps the animals in good condition, which in turn helps them use to advantage the grains they receive. They prevent young and growing pigs from getting too fat. Hogs as well as other animals seem to want some bulky feed and the roots supply that need. In fact the snout of the hog was given him to permit him to dig into the earth after roots, and we can well imagine that they are therefore of unusual value to him. There is little doubt that roots are not fed to hogs in America as freely as they should be.

Money in Good Fruit.

Someone has said that the money in fruit is in good fruit and not in bad. This is the exact truth of the situation, whether the fruit be apples, pears, peaches or any other kind. Large peaches, for instance, always bring a fancy price. That great peach grower, R. Morrill of Michigan, long ago realized this truth, and so every year thinned the peaches in his orchard till he had growing only those that would make large fine peaches. The result has been that he has sold year by year peaches in immense quantities that brought fancy prices. But as yet few growers are practicing this sensible act, having either not the knowledge of its value or the grit to do it. It takes some grit to pick off thousands of peaches at a time when the fruit is small and when it does not seem to be overloading the trees.

How to Circumvent the Hessian Fly.

So little complaint of the Hessian fly has been heard at the Ohio Experiment Station this season that there is ground for the hope that there will be no more trouble from it for a few years to come, but it will be wiser for farmers to be on their guard lest it may reappear suddenly as it did in 1899.

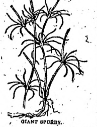
It is possible for every farmer to determine for himself whether the fly is likely to appear in destructive numbers in his wheat each season. To accomplish this, let a small strip of wheat be sown along one side of the intended wheat field about two weeks before the time when the main crop is usually sown in that particular locality. As soon as the wheat comes above the ground examine the young shoots carefully every day with a magnifying glass. A cheap lens, magnifying about three diameters, which can be bought of any optician or department store for a dollar or less, is sufficient. If the fly is present its minute, reddish eggs, one-fiftieth of an inch long, will be found in the creases of the young wheat blades. Once seen under a glass these eggs can easily be seen by the unaided eye as red specks. Often two or more are found together, lying end to end.

Usually egg laying occupies about a week, and if the fly, on her appearance, finds a little wheat ready for her, she will soon deposit all her eggs, after which the main crop may safely be sown in the assurance that by the time it appears above ground the eggs will all have been laid on the earlier sown wheat.

Many farmers suppose that the so-called "flax-seeds," which are found in October and November at the base of the wheat stalk, are the eggs of the fly, but this is a mistake; these "flax seeds" are the full grown larvae of the fly, which undergo their transformation into the winged insect within the brown cases called "flax seeds."—Chas. E. Thorne, Director Ohio Experiment Station.

Giant Spurry.

We illustrate Giant Spurry, a plant that is being tried on some of our sandy soils. It is a low-growing annual, forming a tangled mass. Under fair conditions it makes a good growth on sandy land, but is otherwise of little value. Its place in the agricultural system of the country is yet to be determined.



GIANT SPURRY.

Canada Thistle.

In all the history of weeds in America none has been more complained of than the Canada thistle. A century ago it was regarded by the farmers of New England as the greatest pest of their fields. When the sons of these farmers moved West the Canada thistle went with them. It grows vigorously, sometimes spreads rapidly, and is always difficult to kill by ordinary cultivation. It forms dense patches, sometimes to the complete exclusion of other plants, and its abundant sharp spines make it disagreeable to handle. To these characters are due its traditional reputation in the Northeastern United States as the worst of all weeds. With little doubt, however, it causes in the aggregate less real injury to farm products than does bull thistle, ragweed, or pigeon grass, and its distribution is confined to a smaller area than that of any of these weeds.

Rotating Crops to Escape Potato Scab.

When the soil has become badly infested with the scab fungus it is usually cheaper to abandon potato growing upon it for a time at least than to continue the practice. The best system of croping to purify such a soil and the length of time which should elapse before potatoes may be grown again with safety is not fully determined. The evidence indicates that root crops should be avoided, and that grains, including corn, grasses, and especially clover, are the best cleaning crops. The turning under of a green crop, like clover, just before potatoes are again planted is especially commended.

Farmers that go into the growing of sugar beets have a good many things to look after if they expect to be successful. The cost of growing is great compared with other crops, and the sugar factory is the only place where beets so grown can be disposed of at a profit.

She Was Persuaded to Try St. Jacobs Oil, and All Pain Disappeared Immediately.

It is undoubtedly a fact beyond dispute that the strongest advertising medium the proprietors have is that of people who recommend others to use St. Jacobs Oil. People who have themselves experienced a happy result, which invariably follows the use of this great remedy, show their gratitude by recommending it to those whom they know are similarly affected. This is the case of Margaret Lee, of 71 Brightfield road, Lee Green, Wis.

"Having suffered from muscular rheumatism for years, and not receiving any benefit from various remedies, I used St. Jacobs Oil; pain and soreness removed at once; no return of rheumatism." St. Jacobs Oil is sold in 25-cent and 50-cent sizes by all druggists.

MARRIAGE LOTTERY IN RUSSIA.

There Are Tickets Costing Two Shillings Which Are Sold to Men.

In the Russian province of Smolensk there is a most extraordinary lottery every three months.

The tickets cost about two shillings, and there is only one prize. This consists of the entire sum made by the sale, amounting to about $2,500, together with a lady described as of noble birth.

The tickets are only sold to men, and the winner of the prize has to take the lady or forego the money. If married already, he may, however, put any friend to whom he wishes to do a good turn, in the position of prize-winner.

It is not difficult to imagine that even in Russia, where old maids are generally looked down upon, the chosen bride may often decide that the sum of $1,125 is a more desirable possession than a lord and master of whom she knows nothing.—New York Mail and Express.

It Was His Text.

An amusing occurrence took place in a Baptist church in New London, Conn., when Dr. Wightman, who was well and favorably known in his denomination, was pastor.

One Sabbath morning a stranger was in the pulpit with Dr. Wightman. The latter, after conducting the usual devotional exercises, introduced the stranger as the Rev. Mr. Smith. And that gentleman, rising promptly, without mentioning chapter and verse, announced as his text: "Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named."

After the service Mr. Smith asked Dr. Wightman why the congregation appeared to be amused when the text was announced.—New York Times.

Helen Moon's Case.

New Providence, Ia., Oct. 13th—The wonderful case of little three-year-old Helen Moon continues to be the talk of the neighborhood and everyone is rejoicing with Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Moon, the happy father and mother.

It will be remembered that this sweet little girl was given up by the doctors with Dropsy. She was so far gone that her eyes were closed up and her body bloated till it was purple.

After everything else had failed Dodd's Kidney Pills were used and to the joy and surprise of everyone she commenced to improve.

This improvement resulted in complete good health and she continues to keep strong and well and without the slightest symptom of the Dropsy left.

The doctors are as much bewildered as anyone at the wonderful cure of this desperate case.

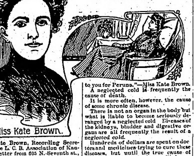
SUFFERED SEVEN YEARS

With Catarrhal Derangements of the Pelvic Organs.



Miss Kate Brown.

Hundreds of Dollars Spent in Vain—Peruna Cured.

Miss Kate Brown, Recording Secretary of the L. C. B. Association of Kansas, in a letter from 605 N. Seventh st., Kansas City, Kansas, says:

"For seven years I have not known what it was to spend a well day. I caught a severe cold which I neglected. It was at the time of menstruation and inflammation set in and prostrated me. Catarrh of the kidneys and bladder followed, my digestive organs gave way, in fact the cold disarranged my whole system.

"I spent hundreds of dollars with doctors and medicine, but derived but little benefit until I began treatment with Peruna. I kept taking it for nearly nine months before I was completely cured, but I kept growing better gradually so that I felt encouraged to continue taking Peruna until my health was restored. I send my thanks and blessings to you for Peruna."—Miss Kate Brown.

A neglected cold is frequently the cause of death.

It is more often, however, the cause of some chronic disease.

There is not an organ in the body but what is liable to become seriously deranged by a neglected cold. Diseases of the kidneys, bladder and digestive organs are all frequently the result of a neglected cold.

Hundreds of dollars are spent on doctors and medicines trying to cure these diseases, but until the true cause of them is discovered, there will be no use in using medicine.

Dyspepsia medicine, diarrhœa medicine and constipation medicine is of no good whatever when catarrh is the cause. The catarrh must be treated. The cause being removed, the derangements will disappear.

Peruna cures catarrh of the digestive organs, the urinary organs or any of the internal organs.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Duck Raising.

Ducks possess many advantages over other domestic fowl. They are very hardy, entirely free from vermin and liable to few diseases. They take to confinement much better than do chickens, and any cheap, low fence is sufficient to keep them in any desired place. They are great egg-producers, and their feathers are of considerable value. They grow more rapidly than chickens, and weigh more on reaching maturity, and, public opinion to the contrady notwithstanding, they do not require more food. The old saying that a duck will "eat his head off" is a myth.—Country Life in America.

ANECDOTES OF JUSTICE GRAY

Once Mistaken for John L. Sullivan—An Unfortunate Quotation.

Although the late Justice Gray was a man with whom people did not easily come into friendly relations, because of his somewhat austere manner, he is described by those who know him intimately as one of the most charming of conversationalists, with a range of information which was remarkable. He liked a good story, and would often tell one at his own expense. He often gave publicity to a peculiar experience which he had in a little town in Colorado some years ago. John L. Sullivan was then at the zenith of his fame, and was expected in that part of the state in a few days. The train which was carrying the Supreme Court justice made such connections at a junction point that a stop-over of one hour was necessary, and he improved the occasion to stretch his legs on the station platform.

The natives saw this great man, and began speculating as to his identity. One of the knowing ones hinted that it was John L. Sullivan and cited in evidence that he had seen "Boston" marked on one of the belongings of the distinguished-looking traveler. This was enough. The crowd gazed in open-mouthed wonder; the report that the greatest fighter of the country was at the station brought half the population of the town there to get a glimpse of him. The justice could not understand the meaning of such a demonstration in his honor until one of the citizens, not altogether satisfied on the subject, asked him: "Be you really John L. Sullivan, the prize-fighter?"

Mr. Gray used also to tell of a very religious man who had favorite passages of scripture stamped on his letter-heads, changing them from time to time. He happened to write to Justice Gray once, making a suggestion in connection with a case to come before him, on letter paper bearing these words: "Ye are bought with a price." In acknowledgment which was so severely formal, the justice suggested that in the future a more apposite quotation at least should be selected.—New York Evening Post.

Who Is Best Educated?

R. J. Wells, Esq., gave the teachers something practical to think about in the conundrum: "Who is the best educated person?" Various opinions were expressed by the teachers, but Mr. Wells's own answer is probably the best. The best educated person he said, is the one who can instantly think the right thing, say the right thing and do the right thing under any and all circumstances. The best education, he said, is obtained outside of text books and schools. Lincoln, Franklin and Washington attended school and studied text books but little. And where did Shakespeare, Galileo and Darwin get their education? he asked. Certainly not in the schools or from text books. The inference to be drawn from Mr. Wells' practical talk is, "That teaching is best which induces most thought on the part of the pupils, and no teaching is really valuable which does not lead the pupils to think."—Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argus-Leader.

Where Echo Dwells.

I.

Some summer morn immersed in calm,
When every wafture breathes of balm,
Take you the pathway under hill,
Night haunted by the whipporwill,
Until, where beech and birch confer,
And hemlocks make their harp-like stir,
A weeping amphitheater
Opes, golden green, upon the view;
There Echo dwells, and waits for you.

II.

The elderberry every hour
Adds to the purple of its dower;
With every dusk, with every dawn,
The mandrake fruit takes amber on;
A gossip brook gives happy hint
Of spruce and sassafras and mint;
While overhead, a luring tint,
The vast vault arches, virgin blue;
There Echo dwells, and waits for you.

III.

If you bespeak her loud or low,
At night, heart, or at morning glow,
Trump clear, or subtle sweet and shy,
Swiftly her voice will make reply,
Never beheld, or near or far,
Elusive as blown perfumes are,
Evasive as a falling star,
With all her ariel retinue,
Fair Echo dwells, and waits for you!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially.

L. C. Simons, the Republican nominee for representative, is well qualified for this office, and will make an able legislator.

E. J. Swedback, the Republican nominee for state senator, was in the city last week. People of Thief River Falls should remember that a vote for Swedback is a vote for Clapp.

The Republican candidates for county offices are conducting a vigorous campaign and the voters of the county are this week having an opportunity to pass judgement upon them. They are holding meetings in every township in the county.

The voters of Red Lake county will make no mistake if they vote for nominees of the Republican party for county offices. They are all good, clean and capable men, and should receive your vote regardless of your political affiliations.

Let the voter remember when he votes for candidates for county offices that the Populists have been in control of affairs in this county since its organization, and that the rate of taxation in Red Lake county is higher than in any other county in the whole state. Give the Republicans a chance.

The Republican candidates for county offices held a meeting last Friday night in the town of Wyandotte, and Saturday in the town of Terrebonne. Monday they attended an auction sale in the town of Garnes held a meeting in the school house that evening. They will hold meetings nearly every night from now until the campaign closes. The meetings held thus far have been quite largely attended and there has been a great deal of enthusiasm.

All parties desiring to purchase mill wood should leave their orders at the lumber company's office before Oct. 20th, if they desire to secure it at the present prices of $1 per load or $10 for 12 loads. After Nov. 1st the price of wood will be advanced to $1.50 per load.

W. C. SMILEY

Republican Candidate for County Surveyor.

William C. Smiley, Republican candidate for county surveyor, is without doubt the only man in the county who is thoroughly equipped to fill this important office. Mr. Smiley was born in Pennsylvania, and received a high school and academic education in that state. After leaving school he was employed in the office of the city engineer of Bradford, Pa., and left that office to accept a position under the U. S. surveyor general of Minnesota. Mr. Smiley was employed in this office for six years, and there became thoroughly familiar with the United States surveys of Minnesota, many of the original plats in the reservation portion of Red Lake county were drawn by him. Leaving this office in 1896 he was appointed a recorder of the U. S. engineer corps and for nearly two years was engaged as assistant in the work of measuring the flowage of various rivers in Minnesota. In the winter of '97 the appropriation for this work having been exhausted, he went out with the Great Northern railway engineers, who were constructing the branch line from Fosston to Duluth. Soon after the commencement of this work, Mr. Smiley was put in charge of the construction of pile bridges and put in six bridges on that line, one of them being the long bridge over the narrows at Cass Lake. At about this time the Spanish war broke out, and Smiley left the railroad to enlist as a private in company C of the 13th Minnesota. He had been a soldier of the state guard for a number of years while a resident of St. Paul, and in view of this experience he was offered a commission as lieutenant in the 14th Minn. This commission was accepted and he served with that regiment until the close of the war, being acting engineer officer of the regiment. After the war the U. S. engineer corps resumed the river measurement work in this state and Smiley was put in charge of the station at Thief River Falls, where he remained for two years. In 1901 he started the practice of general surveying in the city of Thief River Falls. He was appointed city engineer of that place which position he now holds with credit to himself and the city. Mr. Smiley is the only all 'round surveyor in the county, and has in his office every equipment necessary to the proper performance of the duties of county surveyor. Since leaving school, thirteen years ago, he has been continuously in the business of surveying with the exception of six months service as a soldier and one year in which he acted as editor of the Thief River Falls Press. He is able and qualified and should be elected.

J. J. WEEKS, Republican candidate for clerk of court, was born Sept. 15, 1862, on a farm in Racine township, Mower county, Minn., and at the age of 19 he graduated from school with high honors and commenced his struggle in life by teaching school in the winter and working on the farm in the summer. This he continued for five years and by being careful and making everything count he saved up enough to make him feel independent, and in the fall of 1885 he ventured in matrimony, and took for his life partner the daughter of his neighbor, Rose O. Dalen, and this union has been blessed by six children—three boys and three girls. The following spring Mr. Weeks engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed for twelve years with good success until the panic of 1893, when he lost heavily. This, however, did not discourage him and in the spring of 1898 he came to the northwest, and by careful management and his business experience he succeeded in retrieveing a portion of his lost fortune, and is at present one of the most enterprising men of Thief River Falls. Mr. Weeks has always been connected with public enterprises and business, and has filled various town, village, school and society offices with honor, holding four of them at one time for seven years. When first elected to the council of Grand Meadow, he found that village in debt $1,800, and upon his retirement eight years later it had many new improvements, besides $1,200 in its treasury. Mr. Weeks is an active church and Sunday school worker; is well liked by all who know him; is a thorough business man, and has all the qualifications for a good official. A vote for Mr. Weeks on Nov. 4 is a vote for the right man.

VOL. XIX. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1902. NUMBER 42

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

HERE is a letter from Congressman J. T. McCleary, of the Second Minnesota district, written over two years ago, which speaks for itself, and the only excuse for publishing it here is that it voices the sentiment of a man of high attainment who has known Thomas Germo, the Republican candidate for county attorney, and the Germo family for over twenty years:

House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.,
Sept. 24, 1900.

To Whom It May Concern: When I was a member of the faculty of the state Normal School at Mankato, Minnesota, Mr. Germo now of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, was a student in the institution. As he was a member of some of my classes, I came to know him very well. Since Mr. Germo concluded his course at the Normal School he has studied law and been admitted to the bar. As best I could I have kept track of Mr. Germo and have been gratified to note that he has continued to justify the good opinion of him which I formed when he was one of my pupils. Knowing Mr. Germo as I do I take genuine pleasure in recommending him as a young man of high character, excellent habits and good ability. He belongs to one of the best and most respected families of this county and is worthy of all confidence.

Respectfully,
(Signed) J. T. McCleary.

LOGS BY RAIL

Lumber Company Will Ship Logs Here.

In order that the saw mill may get an early start next spring, the Thief River Falls Lumber company is making arrangements to ship by rail from near Bemidji to this city about 5,000,000 feet of logs. The logs will be shipped here during the winter and next spring. The demand for lumber has been greater this year than ever before, and the company has found it hard to fill all their orders.

A side track is being built from the mill yards to the river near H. E. Mussey's residence, where the logs will be dumped in the river. The company owns a large amount of pine near Bemidji which can be taken here only by rail, and it means that many million feet of pine which might otherwise have been floated down the Mississippi or sawed up at Bemidji, will now be shipped and sawed into lumber in Thief River Falls.

THE EXTENTION.

Will Undoubtedly Be Made Next Spring.

Col. R. A. Wilkinson reached the city last night coming from Thief River Falls and accompanied by Andrew Grindeland, of Warren. Together they have been on a trip from that city north through eastern Marshall county of Roseau. The object of the trip, which was made by team, was as stated in the Journal of Monday, to establish the feasibility of a route along which to extend the Thief River Falls branch of the Great Northern into Roseau county. Mr. Grindeland's familiarity with the country traversed made him a valuable guide.

The party traveled an average of 60 miles a day, and were on the road at an early hour every day in order to make the distance. They covered a wide range of territory and established to the satisfaction of Col. Wilkinson the entire feasibility of building a road over the route without any particularly difficult feats of engineering.

The country traversed is fairly well settled and the land is such in most instances as will make excellent farms. Much of it is covered with brush, and in every instance where a farmer has made a farm on such land he has one that is highly productive. The route taken was through Breeze and north to Badger, thence to Roseau. Returning the trip was made to Pelan and thence southeasterly to Thief River.

Col. Wilkinson is making no prediction as to the future action of the company, but there is slight doubt that the line will be surveyed during the coming winter and built during the coming summer. —Crookston Journal.

JAMES A. WILSON

Republican Candidate for School Superintendent.

James Wilson, Superintendent of schools at Thief River Falls, was born at Lake City, Minn., in 1875. His boyhood days were spent on his fathers farm, and at an early age his first desires for work in his chosen profession of teaching were satisfied by tutoring classes in the largest school in the county, as an assistant.

Being the oldest child he was obliged to remain at home until circumstances permitted him by exercising strict economy and hard labor to put himself through three years of high school work, after which he taught for two years, the second year as principal of the graded schools at Cottonwood, Minn. Feeling the need of a more liberal education, he declined a second offer of this promising position and entered the University of Minnesota in September, 1896, heavily conditioned. During his first year young Wilson not only worked off all of his conditions but taught as a special instructor in the schools of St. Paul during the afternoons of each day. During the summer months of his university course he attended various teachers' training schools, the better to prepare himself for his future work. While at the university Mr. Wilson took an active and prominent part in all social, literary and athletic life, holding various offices of trust in the student body. Besides making his own way and helping a younger brother, who was physically disabled, he accumulated enough money to enable him to spend a time between his junior and senior years on special work at Chicago university. He graduated with honor with the class of 1900 and shortly afterward accepted the principalship of the schools at Thief River Falls, which position he still retains.

During the past summer Mr. Wilson was selected as one of the instructors in the Teachers' Training Schools, in which capacity he served with the marked success which has always attended his efforts along educational lines.

Wilson is a big man in every sense of that term. He is broad minded, vigorous and gritty by nature and has had all these qualities strengthened and rounded out by the best education the state has to give. He would be an inspiration to both teachers and students.

It is not often that the people of a county situated as we are have an opportunity to place at the head of its schools a man of Wilson's mental calibre. The county is growing rapidly in population and wealth, our schools are in the formative period, the strong hand of a man of Wilson's executive ability will bring them rapidly to the front. A community is judged largely by its schools. Whether or not a family will locate in a certain place depends much upon the kind of schools found there. There is perhaps nothing which aids more in bringing desirable citizens into a country, than the knowledge that it has good schools.

Mr. Wilson's career in Red Lake county has been marked with that success, earnestness of purpose and unimpeachable integrity which have won for him esteem and honor of our citizens. Of recognized ability and untarnished reputation he is the ideal man to come in contact with the youth of the county, and we feel ourselves safe in predicting for him a handsome majority when the votes for superintendent of schools of Red Lake county are enumerated.

Can't Come.

Mayor Kratka has received the following letter from President Roosevelt's private secretary, Geo. B. Cortelyou, dated at Washington, Oct. 16:

"My Dear Sir; The President requests me to extend to you and the citizens of Thief River Falls his hearty thanks for the very attractive invitation to participate in a moose hunt which has been extended to him. The President regrets exceedingly that it will not be possible for him to accept; he only wishes he could send his declination on birch-bark too. There is nothing the president would like so much as to go on a moose hunt at the present time.

Very truly yours,
Geo. B. Cortelyou.

Judge Moen, People's Party candidate for congressman, was in the city last Saturday and addressed a meeting in the city hall that afternoon. Mr. Moen is a good speaker and entertained his audience from start to finish.

Mr. Crowe succeeded in jumping from the carriage, and did not sustain any injury, but Mr. Ward's foot was caught in one of the wheels and he was dragged over the rough road for nearly a mile. That he did not sustain serious injury was indeed fortunate.

SAVING FOR STATE

SHOWN BY FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF STATE BOARD OF CONTROL.

SAVED $105,861.57 OVER 1901

EXPENDITURES AFFORD SOME SHARP CONTRASTS TO OLD SYSTEM.

DOCUMENT IS VERY THOROUGH

INSTITUTIONS ARE SHOWN TO BE IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION.

Advance sheets of the first annual report of the state board of control to Gov. Van Sant have been given out for publication. The opening chapter which is a history of the board of control movement, of the year's work and a justification of its acts, contains some 14,000 words. It summarizes the results and the policy of the board in the following:

"We have decreased the cost of maintenance in the institutions under our control. We have eliminated politics from their management. We hold the superintendents of the institutions responsible for their success and good management and have given them powers commensurate therewith. We have constantly had in mind the fact that the institutions are the property of the state, and that the localities where they are situated have no greater proprietary rights in them and are entitled to no more consideration in their management than are the people living in other, remote portions of the state, believing that this course, persistently adhered to, will in time so delocalize the several state institutions as practically to eliminate from legislative consideration the question of equalization of appropriations for the purpose of dispensing local benefits; that, while requiring of our superintendents the practice of economy in the management of their several institutions, we have never lost sight of the still higher duties of our position and have preserved and extended the humane, educational and reformatory purposes for which the institutions were established."

The financial showing made by the board is better than its friends claimed for it. For the fiscal year ending July 31, the board spent for the institutions under its charge $105,861.57 less than was spent during the last year of the old system. The saving is given in tabulated form by institutions as follows, the per capita cost being given first for 1901, and below it for 1902:

Net saving $105,861 57

This saving was made in the face of advanced prices for almost all products, which have been carefully calculated. There was an average raise of 5 per cent in the price of supplies, excepting meat, butter and potatoes, causing an additional expense of $20,950.36. The market advance on these three items, for which $138,-589.93 was expended, amounted to $25,090.42. The board also saved $16,-433.24 by replacing the insurance, and $1,369.44 by deporting 72 persons at a per capita cost of $12.02. From this the board calculates its gross savings is $169,705.03.

A practical illustration of the board's economy is furnished in its action of Sept. 1, when it asked State Auditor Dunn to cancel and cover into the treasury unexpended balances in the different funds amounting to $154,-853.53, distributed as follows:

Anoka asylum	$11,741 0[illegible]
Hastings asylum	7,391 8[illegible]
Fergus Falls hospital	55,867 8[illegible]
Rochester hospital	12,474 1[illegible]

Moorhead normal school	1,620 61
Winona normal school	657 96
St. Cloud normal school	3,054 18
Total to be covered into the treasury	$154,853 53

The law permits a surplus to be kept for one year in order to meet possible deficiencies, but the board declines to avail itself of this. Of the balances returned to the treasury, $110,375.59 were savings for 1902, and the other $44,477.94 was accumulations from previous years. Most of the funds, however, had been running behind in previous years, twelve of them showing up with deficits aggregating $22,618.63 on July 31, 1901.

New and Old Systems.

Much hue and cry has been made of the expensive machinery of a central board of control. By cold figures the board shows that there has been an actual saving over the old system of unsalaried boards. During the year ending July 31, 1901, the various state boards which the board of control supersedes cost the state as follows:

Corrections and charities	$7,601 19
School for defectives	4,302 76
Insane hospitals	4,212 85
State prison	2,632 50
State reformatory	1,261 55
State public school	292 24
State training school	197 23
Normal schools	2,930 72
Total	$23,431 04

The expenses of the board of control during the year just closed were as follows:

Salaries of members	$10,500 00
Salaries of employes	8,314 37
Traveling expenses	468 34
Books and stationery	1,024 41
Postage	476 74
Express, telegrams, etc.	412 05
Furniture	52 54
Rent	715 00
Miscellaneous	125 96
Total	$22,098 41

The report censures the practice of some members of former boards, who charged the state with railroad fare when they had railroad passes.

Minnesota Bidders Favored.

The charge that outside business houses have been favored in purchases is answered by figures.

For the year ending July 31, 1901, the following purchases were made under the old system:

In towns where institutions are located	$301,365 03
In State of Minnesota outside institutions towns	263,337 69
In other states	67,350 67
Total	$632,053 39

For the year ending July 31, 1902, the following purchases were made by the board of control:

In towns where institutions are located	$146,706 75
In State of Minnesota outside institutions towns	371,377 75
In other states	60,463 06
Total	$578,547 56

The board recites the following innovations and changes in the system it has inaugurated:

It has caused annual inventories of supplies to be taken at each institution, and careful accounts checked up of supplies used, in order to show at any time the stock on hand.

It has made and enforced a rule against nepotism, so that no relative of a member of the board shall be employed by it, and no relative of the head of an institution shall be employed under him.

It has absolutely barred politics from the institutions, and has placed full responsibility for conduct of employes in the hands of each superintendent.

It has kept in mind the welfare of inmates, devoting its best efforts to seeing "that all have plenty of wholesome, well cooked food, and a sufficient amount of work to occupy them and keep their minds from dwelling on their condition."

It has kept on hand a complete bill of fare for every meal served at each institution.

It has inaugurated the manufacture of boots and shoes at the state reformatory to supply some of the other institutions.

It manufactures all the soap used at the institutions at the Rochester hospital. Brooms for all institutions are made at the school for the blind.

The Hastings asylum garden has supplied that institution and the penitentiary with vegetables.

Plain sewing, lacemaking, etc., have been encouraged among the female insane.

Plans have been matured for growing sorghum cane and making syrup next year to supply all the institutions.

The board has held helpful quarterly conferences with the heads of institutions.

It has purchased all supplies on estimates by superintendents, and on competitive bids, which are kept confidential. However, the books of the board are open for the inspection of the governor, the public examiner, committees from either branch of the legislature, or any court of record.

The board has rewritten all insurance on state buildings at an annual saving of $16,000.

More county jails and lock-ups have been inspected and condemned than under the board of charities and corrections, and more insane and paupers have been deported.

The board has raised all salaries less than $100 per month 10 per cent.

The board recommends that separate homes be built for the nurses in the hospitals, so that they can sleep apart from the scene of their daily work and have the luxury of privacy.

Boats Run by Electric Power.

An "electric mule" company has secured a lease of the Miami & Erie canal in Ohio, and it is promised that a fleet of forty or more boats will soon be running by electric power. The canal is 274 miles long, connecting Cincinnati and Toledo, and was completed in 1835. The first electric construction will be for sixty miles, south from Toledo or north from Dayton.

JUSTICE IS QUICK

NEGRO MURDERER TRIED, CONDEMNED AND HANGED ALL IN ONE DAY.

HE KILLED AN ENTIRE FAMILY

PLEADS GUILTY AND WITHIN TWO HOURS IS LEGALLY EXECUTED.

MOB THIRSTY FOR HIS BLOOD

WAS LODGED IN JAIL UNDER THE PROTECTION OF FIVE MILITIA COMPANIES.

Nacogdoches, Tex., Oct. 19. — Jim Buchanan, colored, the murderer of the Hicks family, was tried here yesterday, a plea of guilty was accepted by the judge and the negro was legally hanged within two hours after sentence had been passed. Buchanan was brought to Nacogdoches under the protection of five companies of militia. Upon his arrival here the negro was immediately turned over to Sheriff Spradley, who told the people that he would be given a speedy trial.

The town began to fill up rapidly and the excitement was intense. The telegraph wires were cut, the railroad tracks were torn up for a short distance and it was announced that an attempt would be made to get possession of Buchanan. District court was at once convened, a jury was impanelled without delay and the negro's plea of guilty was accepted by the court. The judge ordered that the death sentence be executed Nov. 17, but many people announced that they would have no delay. Buchanan then waived the thirty days allowed him by law and was hanged by Sheriff Spradley in the jail yard in the presence of a large crowd.

His Awful Crime.

Ten days ago the dead bodies of Farmer Hicks, his wife and daughter, were found in the Hicks home and Sheriff Spradley began a search for the murderer. A week later Jim Buchanan was arrested and confessed to the murder. The news of the negro's confession spread rapidly and a mob of several hundred people marched after the sheriff and his deputies, with the intention of securing possession of the negro and burning him at the stake. Sheriff Spradley and his deputies refused to give up the prisoner and later they were joined by Sheriff Bowers of San Augustine county. The two officers, through a ruse, finally succeeded in spiriting the negro away to the parish jail at Shreveport. Buchanan was next taken to the jail at Henderson and a company of militia was ordered out to protect the negro from violence. A mob formed and it was feared a collision with the troops would result in serious bloodshed. Two more companies of militia were dispatched to Henderson, and yesterday, when the negro came here he was guarded by five companies of militia.

JOYCE HELD FOR TRIAL.

Cashier of Wisconsin Bank Must Face the Music.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 19. — John H. Joyce, former cashier of the Dane county bank at Stoughton, was held for trial at the conclusion of his preliminary examination in the municipal court, on the charge of receiving deposits after he knew the bank was insolvent. His trial is set for Nov. 5. Bail was continued in the sum of $5,000. The bank's failure, about two years ago, was caused by the loss of about $40,000 loaned to a Texas land company in which Cashier Joyce was interested. When arrested in Chicago last winter Joyce made a protracted fight against being brought back.

STRETCHING THE LIMIT.

Nature Splits Even in Supplying Sets of Twins.

Boone, Iowa, Oct. 19. — There is probably no man in the country other than Mr. Weir of South Omaha, who is visiting Boone, who can lay claim to being the father of eleven twins—twenty-two children. It is said that the mother was partial to girls, while the father preferred boys. Nature has satisfied them both, for at each birth came a boy and a girl. Mr. Weir's two eldest daughters are married to twin brothers. Within twelve hours of each other each of these daughters gave birth to twins, a boy and a girl. Mr. Weir's offspring enjoy the best of health.

MILLION FOR WATER.

Highland Canal and Power Company Takes Option on Power.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 19.—The Highland Canal and Power company has taken an option to purchase the Jay Cooke water power on the St. Louis river for $1,000,000. The company has plans for the extensive development of water power here and have taken hold of the Jay Cooke proposition, which has been a prospective source of water power for many years. The company has not abandoned its original plans for water power, that of constructing reservoirs north of Duluth and utilizing surplus rainfall, but its plans are not fully worked out.

REAL SMITHEREENS.

Train Scatters Part of Grain Separator Over Quarter Section.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 19.—The Northern Pacific passenger train on the Southwestern branch to Edgely, struck a threshing machine on a crossing near Warren last night. The machine was being pulled by a traction engine, which was just over the track. When the train hit the separator it was scattered over a quarter-section. All the steps on one side of the train were torn off, but no one was killed.

*The schedule called for reports of "trees of bearing ages," but the chief statistician for agriculture in the census office states that in "some sections" the enumerators included young trees that had not yet begun to yield fruit. It would seem as though the fact that the number of trees reported is the number "of bearing ages" on June 1, 1900, whereas the production of fruit is of necessity that of the preceding year, will also help to account for the disparity between the number of trees and the production of fruit in many important states.

American Apples in Europe.

Reports from across the water say that our apples are arriving in England in good quantities, but of quite poor quality. The good quality apples have sold at more than $5 per barrel, while the poor qualities have sold as low as $2.50 per barrel, which latter price of course leaves little or no profit to the shippers. The advice of the English dealers is to ship only first-class fruit, as the English buyers look for that and will not buy the poorer grades at a price satisfactory to the shippers. There is more profit in the high-priced fruit both to the growers and the subsequent handlers. The Kings apple seems to be a favorite in the English markets, and also on the continent. The prices that Europeans pay for our apples is far better than the prices obtainable for them in this country. In this respect the contrast is great between the conditions that surround the butter trade and the conditions that surround the apple trade. We cannot hope for much from our butter trade with England, for the reason that American prices for first-class butter are better than English prices for first-class butter, while the opposite is true as to prices for apples. Therefore, while we cannot build up a trade in butter we can in apples. The prices that the English are willing to pay for apples will have a tendency to keep up prices for apples on this side of the water. So the apple growers will reap a double advantage; they will get a good sum for the fruit they sell in the foreign countries, and they will get a better price for the apples sold at home than they otherwise would.

The Development of Forestry.

The science of forestry is in this country but a few years old. Yet it has already made tremendous strides. The national government has taken up the work in earnest and some of the states are paying more attention to their forests than ever before. In addition the private owners of forests have begun to awaken to the necessity of looking after their forests. Recently we have had some very large fires in the lumbering regions of the Pacific slope. These fires are said to be caused by careless lumbering—by the leaving on the ground of masses of inflammable material, which await but a spark to become fuel for a conflagration both widespread and destructive. Such fires have occurred this year and every other year for a generation. Single forest fires have destroyed enough timber to supply all the demands of commerce for the year in which they occurred. The companies that are waking up to the real situation have enlisted the aid of the government in ordering their cutting. They will in future do their logging according to approved plans that will leave all but the maturest trees to grow. It will be a system of thinning out the trees rather than wholesale destruction. Meanwhile our universities are taking up the work of educating foresters and are starting departments for the teaching of forestry. All of which bodes good to those that would use wood in the future.

The Grass Thrips.

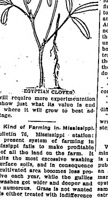
Bulletin 83 of the Maine Station consists of a scientific and technical description of the grass thrips (anaphothrips striata Osborn). As the bulletin is not of general interest only a limited edition was printed and it will be sent only on application.

The grass thrips is a minute insect, from one twenty-fifth to one-sixteenth of an inch in length, usually living in some part of the grass plant, from which it sucks the juice. In the early summer its work is confined chiefly to June grass, but later in the season timothy and other grasses are attacked also. The dead grass tops seen along the highway and in the edges of the field are often due to this cause. If the top of a plant thus affected be gently pulled, the stalk usually parts above the upper joint, and the part which was covered by the sheath is found withered and shrunken.

As the thrips feeds by sucking the juices of the plants, contact poisons, as kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap are the only ones which are of use in combating it. When only a small area is infested, one of the insecticides just mentioned or even a liberal application of water will prove successful in controlling the pest. When a large area is infested the application of an insecticide is not feasible on account of the expense of materials and application. In such a case the burning of the dead stalks after the ground has frozen in the fall so as to secure a close burn without injuring the roots of the grass, may prove successful. With badly run out fields, which are the ones most likely to be badly infested, the best remedy is deep plowing in the fall or in the early spring before the grass has started. If this is followed by thorough cultivation none of the insects will be able to make their way to the surface of the ground.

Egyptian Clover.

Trifolium alexandrinum. This is an annual clover recently introduced from Egypt. It is believed that it will do well in the southern states, but it will require more experimentation to show just what its value is and just where it will grow to best advantage.



EGYPTIAN CLOVER.

One Kind of Farming in Mississippi.

Bulletin 76, Mississippi station: The present system of farming in Mississippi fails to make profitable use of all the land on the farm. It permits the most excessive washing of surface soils, and in consequence the cultivated area becomes less productive each year, while the gullies and washes get wider and deeper and more numerous. Grass is not wanted and is either treated with indifference or as an enemy. The money received for the cotton crop is spent for supplies, for work stock and for food, because not enough of these things are grown on the farm to supply the demand. The present system will not permit of paying good wages for labor, and labor that is poorly paid is generally unsatisfactory.

The growing of live stock on the farm has an important bearing on its productiveness and increases very greatly the opportunities for using all parts of it profitably. By furnishing a means for disposing of the crops grown, live stock encourages diversification and makes it easy to practice rotation without "losing the use of the land when it is occupied by restorative crops." Under the present system one dollar per acre for the entire area is very good rent for the average farm. A few will rent for a little more, while many will not rent for so much. This condition, apparently, is largely due to the fact that no returns whatever are gotten from large areas, while the average productiveness of other large areas is too small for any profit.

World's Cereal Crops for 1902.

The Hungarian minister of agriculture issued on September 4 his annual estimate of the grain crops of the world. The figures are approximately as follows:

	Bushels.
Wheat	2,900,000,000
Oats	3,000,000,000
Corn	2,970,000,000
Rye	1,575,000,000

THE RAGE FOR RISKS.

Long Record of Lives Lost in Daring Exercises.

A list made up by us at random from newspaper accounts, and without any thought of completeness, of the number of persons who have lost their lives through their passion for risk, the love of hazard, during the past few months, makes a total of several hundred. This includes some forty-five persons who have lost their lives in automobiles, seventeen who have "missed" their footing in balloon exhibitions, nine who have been ushered out of existence by means of the bicycle and its allied contrivances, two who have climbed steeples for the last time, three bridge jumpers, seventeen Alpine climbers, five long-distance swimmers, seven who have been blotted out of existence in efforts to break athletic records, and scores of others who have gone to a better, and it may be hoped, a safer land by various other agencies or methods designed ostensibly to promote the joys of this present life. If to this list we should add the 300 other mountain climbers who, it is said, have lost their lives in the Alps during the past ten years, the total sacrifice of human life to the rage for risk would indeed assume formidable proportions.—Leslie's Weekly.

HIS RIGHT TO RECOGNITION.

New York Saloon Keeper's Idea of a "Rating."

An east side Teutonic saloon keeper having saved more money than he cared to allow in his till over night, decided to deposit it in a bank. Strolling down Broadway, he inquired for a "goot bank," and was directed to the Chemical National. He asked the bank usher:

"Is Mr. President at home?" The usher replied that the president was in his office. Very well, you yoost tolo him that Mr. Yoccup Schmitt wants to put a hundred dollars every night in his bank and take it oudt in the morning."

After a long wait the attendant returned and informed Mr. Jacob Smith that the president could not take his money, as he was not rated by Dun or Bradstreet. The excited German replied:

"Dun or Bradstreet! Why, I was been raided twice by Parkhurst!"—New York Times.

Authority Needed.

When Father Jones, president of the Augustinian College at Havana, was recently in Philadelphia the attendance on the conference of members of his order, he told a story of a reformed burglar who, after much persuasion, induced his long-time pal, also, to reform. A Paulist friend of Father Jones', then stationed in New York city, had been the recipient of the first burglar's confession, and was picked to listen to the second's. The priest was interested in the two fellows because of the sincerity of the first; and, when the pair called, he took the second into his own room and left the evangelist in the hallway. After listening half an hour to the now penitent's story of a vicious life, the Paulist remembered something left undone with regard to a marriage to be celebrated that evening, and, interrupting the burglar, hastened from the room. After waiting ten minutes, the fellow put his head through the door and called:

"Bill!"

"What is it?" responded the first convert.

"Where did he go?"

"Don't know," answered Bill. "What difference does it make?"

"Well," replied the half-confessed wretch, "I was afraid he might have stepped out to call a policeman."

An Australian Wit.

William Shields, a member of the ministry of the Australian federation, is a wit. In the course of a recent public speech he exclaimed: "I am an Irishman, and a pessimistic Irishman is as great a curiosity as a poetic oyster or a benevolent tiger." At the same time he was not "an optimistic ostrich, that sticks his head in the sand while the wind plays fantastic tricks with its tail." In the opinion of Mr. Shields Australians are nationally and individually an extravagant people. He proved it with an anecdote. When the present huge government house in Melbourne was being planned the architect consulted the premier of the period as to the size of the ballroom. "Do you know anything about ballrooms in other parts of the world?" queried the premier. "I only know the one in Buckingham palace," was the reply. "Then build our ballroom a third bigger than the one in Buckingham palace," said the premier. "It was done as the lordly premier commanded, and so Melbourne came to possess the biggest ballroom in the world.

All About a Corn.

A lady who was grievously tormented with a corn, was advised by one of her friends to anoint it with phosphorus, which she did; she forgot, however, to tell her husband, before retiring at night. It had just struck twelve when the husband awoke, and he was startled at seeing something sparkle at the foot of the bed. He had never heard of a firefly in the locality, nor did he remember seeing such a terrible looking object as he beheld at that moment. Reaching carefully out of bed for one of his slippers, he raised it high in the air, and brought it down with great force on the mysterious light. There was a shriek, followed by an avalanche of bedclothes. The lady has not got rid of her phosphorated corn.

STABLE IN NEW MEXICO.

This New Mexican stable, strange as it may appear to us, is a common sight enough in that territory. No very commodious quarters are required for the housing of the solitary "burro" that is sheltered under the primitive roof, and no large corps of stable attendants is needed to assure his well-being. The Indian boy shown in the picture is jockey, chief groom, and everything else necessary around a stable, and the spirit of fun and mischief in his eyes is not vastly different from what may be seen in the eyes of young gentlemen of his age further East. No border line of very great solidity marks the Kingdom of Boyhood.

HAD BEEN "ET OUT."

Troubles of a New Congressman in Washington.

A certain congressman is from the rural district, and as this was his first winter in Washington—and, indeed, his first visit to any city of considerable size—the experiences of himself and wife have often been unique. At home a guest had been something of a rarity, but only had meant an extra piece from the pumpkin pie, a few more doughnuts, and perhaps a deeper inroad into the dish of cabbage or beans. It was slow dawning on them that a congressman at Washington is a host at large.

Soon after they had become settled in their new home a friend called on them from the rural district and began to express astonishment at the size of the city and the number of its people, winding up with:

"An' so you keep a girl now, Sairy, an' you put your washin' out? Well, well, the luck o' some people! An' I s'pose ye have callers every day?"

"Callers!" gasped the congressman's wife, throwing up her hands in direful recollection. "I should say so, an' eaters. Mary Ann, Hiram an' me's been et out twice in a week."

"BUG" WAS TOO MUCH.

Where Unsophisticated Guest at Tammany Banquet Drew the Line.

An amusing story is told of a prominent Irishman who arrived in New York and joined the Tammany forces. His admirers prepared a banquet in his honor, and the table equipments and menu were most elaborate. The Irishman, having always been accustomed to simple methods of life, was slightly overwhelmed at the general magnificence. First came soup, which he eyed with some suspicion, but as he saw his companions eating with apparent relish, he took up his spoon and went to work, but the effort was most perceptible. Next came an artistic salad, with quantities of fluted lettuce leaves, and this seemed to cause the guest of honor more discomfort than the soup. After the salad each one was served with a small lobster in the shell, and with the exception of the guest, all ate eagerly of the delicacy. Noticing that he did not indulge, someone asked him what the matter was. This was too much for the Irishman, who straightened up indignantly and said:

"I'd like to have you onderstand I'm a gintleman. I've eaten your dishwater, I've eaten your bouquet, but I'll be d——d if I'll eat that bug."

Untrustworthy.

W. H. Kilgore tells a story of a Colt who, hard-pushed for work, asked the captain of a coasting vessel for employment of somekind. He was told to get references, and returned with a bundle wholly satisfactory to the captain, who engaged him as a deckhand. A few minutes afterward, a German walked on deck, asked for work, and was told to go and report to the mate. Casey noted that the newcomer had not been asked for references, and wondered much. The third day out, as the German was washing the decks with a bucket and a swop, the ship keeled badly in the trough of a rough sea, and a wave that swept over the deck carried German, bucket, and swob into the water. Casey, the only man on board who saw the accident, rushed in glee to the captain and said:

"Yez made me bring references, didn't yez?"

"Certainly!" replied the captain.

"Yez asked th' Dootchman for none?"

"What of it?" asked the captain, getting angry.

"Nawthin'—nawthin', captain," replied Casey, airily—"but he's gone with your bucket." — Philadelphia Ledger.

SHE WAS TOO COMPASSIONATE.

Amusing Blunder Made by Good-Hearted Farmer's Wife.

An artist who was making a sketching tour through a picturesque region of Connecticut chanced one day on a barn so alluring to his eye that he sat down on a stone wall and went to work at once.

He soon became conscious that he had two interested spectators in the person of the farmer and his wife, who had come to the door of the house to watch him.

The artist by and by discovered that he had lost or mislaid his rubber eraser, and as he wished to correct a slight error in the sketch, he went up to the door and asked the farmer's wife if he might have a small piece of dry bread. This, as every artist knows, makes a good eraser.

The farmer's wife looked at him with an expression of pity not unmixed with surprise.

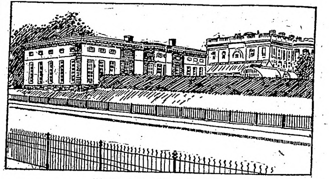
"Dry bread!" she repeated. "Well, I guess you won't have to put up with any dry bread from me, young man. You come right into the kitchen with me and I'll give you a thick slice of bread with butter on it."

"Now, don't say a word," she continued, raising her hand to ward off his expostulation. "I don't care how you came to this state, nor anything about it; all I know is, you're hungry, and that's enough for me. You shall have a good dinner."

Pleased With Labor Mayor.

Dennis Mulvihill, the workingman mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., has given so much satisfaction to those who elected him that they are endeavoring to secure his nomination as sheriff of his county. His selection as a candidate for that office probably would be equivalent to election. The place has always been slated as worth $10,000 a year, and the sheriff has a four-year term.

ADDITION TO THE WHITE HOUSE.



THE NEW WING OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

The new building which is to be an addition to the White House and which the President will use for business offices will be occupied by his entire executive staff, who will vacate room in the older part of the structure that has long been needed for living purposes by the family of the chief magistrate. The new wing is only a temporary building, and for this reason it has not been made fireproof. It will, however, be the receptable of innumerable documents of great value, some of which will be kept in the cellar in a fireproof and burglar proof vault.

The interior of the new structure will be finished in mahogany and oak. Of the historic furniture of the Executive Mansion, the famous cabinet table will remain in the White House proper in the private cabinet room which is to be established there. Entrance to the executive offices will be so arranged that business callers need not enter the old structure at all.

A handsome marble stairway now replaces the wooden stairway that once led to the quarters occupied by the President's office. The west stairway, used by the family, has been removed entirely to make way for an extension of the state dining room. A small private stairway will run from the first to the second floor, near the family dining room. Where the conservatory stretched as a beautiful promenade will be a terraced arcade from the main building to the new office building. Beneath this open colonade are basements, to be used for laundry and other domestic purposes.

READY FOR WORK

MINERS GLAD TO GET TOGETHER AND END MONTHS OF IDLENESS.

WILL BE IN MINES THIS WEEK

NOTHING TO INDICATE THAT CONVENTION WILL NOT ACT FAVORABLY.

ONE THING THAT TROUBLES

LARGE NUMBER OF MEN FEAR THEY WILL NOT GET PLACES BACK.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 21. — Delegates to the anthracite mineworkers' convention, which will meet in the Nesbitt theater, this city, to-day, for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the proposition of the president of the United States to end the strike and submit all grievances to the arbitration commission appointed by him, began arriving here yesterday and about one-quarter of the 700 or 800 delegates to the convention had arrived last night. Strike headquarters, which had been extremely quiet since the excitement of last week, began to be lively before noon yesterday. Many of the delegates are interested in various features of the settlement, but a majority of them will follow the advice and judgment of President Mitchell. There is now that gives the slightest indication that the convention will not vote to send the men to work this week, with the probabilities still in favor of Thursday as the day of resumption. A noticeable thing among the delegates was their cheerfulness. It was quite evident to observers that they would be glad to get together and decide to return to work after the weary idleness of more than five months.

All of the delegates who were spoken to regarding the action of to-day's convention appeared to have no fear that a hitch might occur which would disarrange the present peaceful trend of affairs. A good many of the delegates say they have instructions on certain matters, which they will place before the delegates. As already stated in these dispatches the outside of the great question of accepting or rejecting President Roosevelt's proposition will be that of strikers getting their old places. A large number of the men fear that in the general rush to return to the mines some of them may fail to get work. They want some assurance from the convention that they will be able to get the positions they occupied before the suspension was ordered. It is likely this element from the three districts will join forces and make a concerted fight on the floor of the convention for some specific action. In the face of the fact that the operators are on record that they will not dismiss one man who stood by them during the struggle, it is going to be a serious problem to solve. The debate, it is believed, will take up a great deal of the time of the convention which is expected to last not more than two days.

TROLLEY SLEEPING CARS.

New Departure in Electric Railroad Operation.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 21.—An order for five sleeping cars has been placed with the Kuhlman Car company of this city. The cars will be used on the interurban electric lines between this city and Detroit, and mark a new departure in electric railroad operation. The sleepers will resemble the Pullman sleeper in general plan, but will not be built as heavy and are destined to accommodate fifteen persons. The berths will be arranged in tiers, there being two in each tier. Much attention will be paid to beauty and complete appointment. The cars will run regularly between this city and Detroit, a distance of 173 miles. The time will be about ten hours, as the proposed schedule provides for the sleeper to leave Detroit at 9 p. m. and arrive here at 7 a. m. The average speed will be about 20 to 25 miles an hour. The usual stops will be made along the line.

EIGHT MEN SCALDED.

Four Will Die as Result of Bursting Steam Pipe.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 21.—By the parting of a steam pipe at the Riverside plant of the National Tube Works in Benwood yesterday afternoon eight men were scalded and three or four of them will die. Four of the men were carpenters and four laborers. They were placing a partition in the boiler room of the new blast furnace and were working on a scaffold. A twelve-inch copper pipe supplying the blast engines with steam from the boilers broke without warning, and the escaping steam filled the room. A valve was blown through two board partitions. When the steam was shut off, the groaning men were carried out and taken to hospitals in this city. All of them were horribly burned about the face and will carry the marks of their injuries to the grave.

BRITISH LOSE HEAVILY.

Disastrous Campaign Against the Mad Mullah.

London, Oct. 21.—The foreign office has issued an undated dispatch from Col. Cobbs, commanding one of the columns of British forces operating against the Mad Mullah in Somaliland. The dispatch was forwarded through the British vice consul at Berbera, Somaliland. The British forces engaged were composed entirely of native troops and levies. Col. Cobbs says:

"My force reached Erego this morning. When about one day's march north of Mudug it was attacked in the thick bush. Two advances were made and the enemy was beaten back in the morning. Their losses were heavy and we captured one hundred rifles. Our force then proceeded to collect animals for transportation purposes and to join the detachment at the stockade camp. In the afternoon a reconnaissance was made and, after sharp fighting, the enemy were again driven off.

"I deeply regret the following casualties: Col. Phillips and Capt. Angus and fifty men killed and about one hundred men wounded. The latter include Capt. Howard and Lieut. Everett, but both are doing well. There were severe losses among the transport and riding camels. The force will reach the stockade camp to-morrow and will advance to attack the enemy."

The vice consul also telegraphs the substance of a later dispatch from Col. Swayne, who says that as a result of the fighting at Erego Oct. 6, which was very severe, the Somali levies were considerably shaken. The mullah, who is said to be in communication with Kail and Inger, in the direction of the Webbe river, is bringing up reinforcements from all sides.

Col. Swayne is much hampered owing to the necessity of transporting the wounded and water. He is retiring on Bohotle. He asks that 600 further reliable troops be dispatched from Berbera forthwith.

CAPTURED BY A POSSE.

Men Who Wounded a Sheriff and Three of His Men.

Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 21.—A sheriff's posse, reinforced by a Gatling gun squad, late yesterday afternoon effected the capture of W. G. Hull, his son, R. G. Hull, and his daughter, Mrs. Vaughan, of Arkansas. They were aboard the shanty boat Hazel, also said to be a whisky boat, from which shots were fired on Sheriff Frank Strong and his posse of Chicot county, Ark., Saturday, resulting in the wounding of the sheriff and three of his men. The elder Hull made a statement that he had no idea that he was firing on officers of the law Saturday. He says a squad of men, both white and black, appeared on shore and opened a fusilade without warning. His son was wounded in the arm, and believing his family to be in jeopardy he secured his rifle and returned the fire. The men were brought to Vicksburg and immediately sent to Jackson for safety. Reports assert that a mob is on the way from Arkansas to lynch them.

MAY GRACE SIAMESE THRONE.

Rumors About Gen. Wilson's Daughter and Crown Prince.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Is the crown prince of Siam in love with Miss Eleanor Wilson, the daughter of Gen. James L. Wilson, with whom the prince and his brother, Prince Charkarbongse, stopped while in Washington? Many residents of Wilmington say he is. According to rumor Miss Wilson met the prince at the coronation of King Edward, and it is said it was a case of love at first sight. They were much together, and those who were asked to dinners given in honor of the crown prince by her father say he paid marked attention to the charming daughter of his host. Miss Wilson is a pretty blonde, about twenty years old. It is known that she likes the crown prince. In her autograph album Miss Wilson has a poem written by his royal highness and dedicated to herself.

COTTON GOES UP IN FLAMES.

Fire in a Compress Causes a Loss of $225,000.

Hamlet, N. C., Oct. 21.—Fire which broke out at the cotton compress here destroyed property valued at $225,000 and caused the death of J. M. Wilson of Clarksville, Ga., bookkeeper for the compress company. The compress was owned by the Seaboard Air Line company and was leased by E. E. Johnson of Raleigh. The Pee Dee ice plant, one of the largest in the state, 2,400 bales of cotton and a quantity of burlaps and bagging also were burned. Bookkeeper Wilson was playing a stream of water on the fire and did not notice that he was being surrounded by the rapidly spreading flames until too late. When he attempted to escape he found all the avenues cut off.

Kite Brigade for Navy.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21. — Russia's Black sea fleet is now equipped with a large number of areal boats, or "flying dragons," as the Russian soldiers call them. They are powerful box kites, five being enough to raise a man so that he can inspect a wide expanse of water to reconnoiter hostile craft. When there is no wind the speed of the ship raises them to a great height.

YOUNGER IS DEAD

JIM, ONE OF THE FAMOUS BANDIT BROTHERS, TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

FREEDOM BRINGS NEW TROUBLES

INFATUATION FOR A YOUNG WOMAN AND QUARREL WITH HIS BROTHER.

IS FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

QUARRELED WITH FRIENDS WHO HELPED HIM TO GAIN HIS LIBERTY.

St. Paul, Oct. 21.—James Younger, the paroled prisoner, was found dead in his room in the Reardon block, Seventh and Minnesota streets, at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The body was dressed in a suit of underwear. A 38-caliber revolver was clutched in the right hand and the left hand was covered with coagulated blood. He had evidently been dead several hours.

Jim Younger had been patient and docile in the state penitentiary for twenty-five years, living in the hope of future happiness outside the prison walls. This was granted to him and his brother Cole Younger in July, 1901. Jim's freedom seems to have brought new troubles to him. A quarrel with his brother Cole, an infatuation for a young woman beyond his station, which resulted in a conflict between him and the friends that had been most instrumental from the penitentiary, are assigned as the motives which prompted him to end his life. Besides this it is said that he disliked the notoriety that attached to him. He felt that he was shunned and the object of observation everywhere. He became morose and often said that he had "no friends." He suffered constantly from a bullet wound in his face and had frequently consulted physicians concerning it since his parole.

The primary cause of the death of James Younger is thought to have been his infatuation for a young girl who is now in Boise, Idaho. She became interested in his case and worked to secure his pardon. When Jim Younger was released he was admitted to her home. He fell in love with her and a quarrel with her relatives followed and he was told to find a home elsewhere.

Wrote a Book.

He and She, it is said, wrote a book concerning the state penitentiary. It is asserted that he hoped to get married as soon as a full pardon was granted to him, and intended then to publish the book covering the history of the penitentiary during the quarter century. The pardon was hoped for at the last meeting of the state board, but the subject was not taken up by that body.

The cause of the trouble between Jim and Cole Younger was money. Cole being the older of the brothers, been the recipient of all money sent from friends in the South and elsewhere. Cole, it is said, had been very generous to his brother, although the latter had always had a position and was able to support himself. Jim conceived the idea six months ago that his brother was not as liberal as he might be. They quarreled and had not spoken since. Another theory advanced is that James Younger had been from a bullet wound in the right side of his head. It is said that he often became melancholy on account of the persistant pain, and many of his acquaintances take the charitable view that he shot himself to end the pain.

On a large Manila envelope, which contained a number of letters, was written in James Younger's own large, legible handwriting the following note:

"To all that is good and true I love and bid farewell. — Jim Younger, (Over.) 'Oh! Lassie! Good Bye. All relatives just stay away from me. No crocodile tears wanted. Reporters, be my friends. Burn me up."

The envelope contained the following letter:

"Oct. 18.

"A. U. G.

"Last night on earth.

"So good by, Lassie, for I still think of the, A. U. G. Forgive me, for this is my only chance. I have done nothing wrong.

"But politics is all that 'Vansant, Wolfer' and others of their 'stripe' care for.

Let the People Judge.

'Treat me right and fair, reporters,' for I am a square man. A socialist and decidedly in favor of woman's rights.

"Bryan is the brightest man these United States has ever produced.

"His one mistake is in not coming out for all the people and absolute socialism. Come out, Bryan. There is no such thing as a personal God. God is universal; and I know him well and am not afraid.

"I have pity for the pardoning board. They do not stop to consider, their wives, or to think of the man that knows how to love, and appreciate a friend in truth. Good by, sweet lassie. —Jim Younger."

Cole Younger, the brother of the deceased, is sick in bed at 136 West Fourth street. He was very much affected by the news of his brother's death. He said he had nothing to say and that he could not account for his brother's act.

Warden Is Surprised.

Stillwater, Oct. 21.—Warden Wolfer of the state prison could hardly realize the truth of the statement that Jim Younger had committed suicide. Mr. Wolfer said that he knew Jim was despondent because of inability to hold positions owing to poor health, but he never mistrusted that he contemplated killing himself.

Proposed Amendments
—TO THE—
Constitution of Minnesota

Hon. Peter E. Hanson, Secretary of State—Sir:

Pursuant to Chapter 157 of the General Laws of 1887, I herewith file in your office synopses of Amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota as proposed by the General Laws of the State of Minnesota enacted at the General Session of the Legislature in 1901 and the Extra Session in 1902, as well as a synopsis of Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, being an Act involving the taxation of railroad property, to be submitted to the electors of the State for adoption or rejection at the next General Election.

Yours respectfully,
W. B. DOUGLAS,
Attorney General.

SYNOPSES OF AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE SAID STATE AT THE GENERAL SESSION IN 1901 AND THE EXTRA SESSION IN 1902, AS WELL AS A SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER 150 OF THE GENERAL LAWS OF 1901, PROPOSING AN INCREASE OF THE GROSS EARNINGS TAX UPON RAILROAD PROPERTIES.

I.

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 32a, of Article IV of the State Constitution, the Legislature by Act approved April 6, 1901, known as Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, present to the electors of the State for rejection or approval, the following, to wit:

Section 1. That every railway company owning or operating any line of railway situated within, or partly within, this state shall, during the year 1903, and annually thereafter, pay into the treasury of this state, as taxes upon all property within this state owned or operated for railway purposes by such company, including equipment, appurtenances, appendages and franchises thereof, a sum of money equal to four (4) per cent of the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state; and the payment of such taxes shall be in full and in lieu of all other taxes upon the property and franchises so taxed. The lands acquired by public grant shall be and remain exempt from taxation until sold or contracted to be sold or conveyed as provided in the respective acts whereby such grants were made or recognized.

Sec. 2. The term "the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state," as used in section one (1) of this act, is hereby declared and shall be construed to mean all earnings on business beginning and ending within the state, and a proportion of earnings on all interstate business passing through, into or out of the state as the mileage operated within the state bears to the entire mileage operated by such company.

Sec. 3. All acts and parts of acts not inconsistent herewith regulating the payment, collection, time of payment, enforcement, or reports involving the amount of taxes upon the gross earnings of railroad companies within this state, or providing penalties for the non-payment of such taxes, are hereby made applicable to this act so far as may be; and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. Upon failure to pay the amount of such taxes legally due upon the dates heretofore provided by law for the payment thereof, in addition to existing remedies, collection may be enforced in a civil action brought in the name of the State of Minnesota in the district court of any county.

Sec. 5. This act shall be submitted to the people of this state for their approval or rejection at the next general election for the year 1902. . . . . .

(The omitted provision refers to the method of printing the ballot and submitting the act for ratification.)

This act provides for an increase of the amount of taxes collected by the State upon the property of the railroads situated within the State, from three per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway within the State, to a sum of money equal to four per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway therein.

Under the terms of the Constitution above referred to, this Act of the Legislature must be submitted to legal voters of the State, and will become operative if adopted by a majority of such electors voting at the next general election.

II.

By an Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved February 28, 1901, and known as House File No. 100, it is proposed to amend Article Eight (8), Section Six (6) of the Constitution.

This Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this State may be invested in the purchase of bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this state, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this State; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the issue of which the same is part would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed seven per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or indebtedness be made at a lower rate of interest than three per cent per annum nor for a shorter period than five (5) years nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the town, school district, village, city or county lines shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city in this state at the time of issuing of such bonds from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

It is proposed by said act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this State may be invested in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this state, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this state; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the bonds to be issued or purchased would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or indebtedness be made at a lower rate of interest than three (3) per cent per annum, nor for a shorter period than five (5) years, nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the town, school district, city, village, or of county lines, shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city in this state at the time of the issuing of such bonds from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the investment of the permanent school and university fund of this State for a period of not less than five (5) or more than twenty (20) years, at an interest rate not less than three (3) per cent per annum, in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town, or village of this state, when the bonds to be issued or purchased will not make the entire bonded indebtedness of such municipalities exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property in such municipalities. The substantial change proposed by said amendment is to authorize such investments when the entire indebtedness, including the loan in question, does not exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property in such municipalities; whereas, under the existing Constitution loans are permitted only where such total indebtedness does not exceed seven (7) per cent of the assessed valuation.

III.

By An Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota Approved April 13, 1901, and known as House File No. 253, it is proposed to Amend Section Sixteen (16) of Article Nine (9) of the Constitution.

The Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "state road and bridge fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-twentieth (1-20) of one (1) mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The legislature is also authorized to provide for the appointment by the governor of the state of a board to be known as the "state highway commission," consisting of three (3) members, who shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by law, without salary or compensation other than personal expenses.

Such commission shall have general superintendence of the construction of state roads and bridges and shall use such fund in the construction thereof and distribute the same in the several counties in the state upon an equitable basis. Provided, further, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that no more than one-third (1-3) of such fund accruing in any year shall be expended for bridges, and in no case shall more than one-third (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund.

It is proposed by said act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "State Road and Bridge Fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, and providing in its discretion for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any one year one-tenth (1-10) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The existing Constitution authorizes legislation providing for a levy of a state tax of 1-20 of one mill for the purpose of building roads and bridges, and provides for its use under the direction of a State Highway Commission in such counties as shall contribute at least double the amount of the State moneys expended by said Commission for such purpose, subject also to certain other limitations.

By the proposed change, a tax of 1-10 of one mill is authorized to be levied for this purpose; the Highway Commission is abolished, and the result, if the proposed amendment is adopted, will be to place the distribution of such funds in the hands of the Legislature, without limitation or restriction.

IV.

By an act of the legislature of the State of Minnesota, known as chapter one (1) of the Laws of the Extra Session of 1902, it is proposed to amend sections one (1), two (2) and three (3) of article nine (9) of the constitution.

The sections as now existing read as follows:

"Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided, that the legislature may, by general law or special act, authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon the property to be benefited by such improvements, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe; and provided, further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of laying water pipes and supplying any city or municipality with water, the legislature may, by general or special law, authorize any such city or municipality having a population of five thousand or more, to levy an annual tax or assessment upon the lineal foot of all lands fronting on any water main or water pipes laid by such city or municipality within corporate limits of said city, for supplying water to the citizens thereof, without regard to the cash value of such property, and to empower such city to collect any such tax, assessments, or fines or penalties for failure to pay the same, or any fine or penalty for any violation of the rules of such city or municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any water rate due for the same.

"And provided further, that there may by law be levied and collected a tax upon all inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description above a fixed and specified sum, of any and all natural persons and corporations. Such tax above such exempted sum may be uniform, or it may be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum tax of five per cent.

Sec. 2. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated (ordinary) expenses of the state for each year; and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses of the state for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year, the legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency of the preceding year, together with the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 3. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money; but public burying grounds, public schoolhouses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property used for religious purposes, and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property to an amount not exceeding in value two hundred dollars for each individual, shall, by general laws, be exempt from taxation.

It is proposed by said chapter to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 1. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated ordinary expenses of the state for each year, and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year the legislature shall at its next general session provide for levying a tax sufficient to pay such deficiency. And whenever the income of the state from other sources shall be sufficient to defray all of its ordinary expenses without the levy of any annual state tax, such tax levy shall be omitted. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all taxes shall be levied for public purposes only. All property on which taxes are to be levied, except as herein otherwise provided, shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided that whenever the levy of a tax for state purposes equalized and uniform throughout each county. The legislature may by general or special law authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon property benefited thereby, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. There may be levied and collected an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on the real property and other personal property of the person or corporation holding such franchise, or in lieu of a tax on such franchise alone, or in lieu of a tax on such franchise and the personal property used in connection with the exercise of the same, there may be imposed such tax upon the gross earnings of the person or corporation holding such franchise as the legislature may determine; and such tax shall be apportioned between the state, counties and municipalities where such franchise is exercised, in the same manner as real estate taxes are apportioned. There may be levied and collected a transfer tax not to exceed 5 per centum upon the estate of decedents above a fixed and specified sum, which tax may be uniform or graded or progressive. There may be levied and collected a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages which shall be in lieu of all other taxes on the debt secured by such mortgages; and a tax upon the income from all credits owned by persons or corporations, as such credits are now or may be hereafter defined by law, and also on the income arising from all personal property, and also upon the income of all persons or corporations above the sum of $1,000 per annum, not arising from such credits or from such personal property, or from property otherwise taxed in this state. Such income tax shall be uniform throughout the state and may be graded or progressive, or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed 10 per centum upon the income from such credits and on the income from personal property, and at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum upon all other income. Laws shall be passed taxing all real and personal property; provided that credits and personal property shall not be subject to other taxation than the income or registry tax herein authorized, while the law imposing such income or registry tax shall be in force; provided, public burying grounds, public schools, public hospitals, public libraries, academies, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches and church property used exclusively for religious purposes, and institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for public purposes, and personal property to an amount not exceeding $300 to each individual shall be exempt from taxation, but such personal exemption shall not be allowed to more than one member of the same family. Provided further, that nothing in this act contained, shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to amend the existing Constitution, as follows:

1st. To prohibit the legislature from surrendering or contracting away the power of taxation.

2nd. To provide that whenever the income of the State derived other than from direct taxation upon real and personal property shall be sufficient to defray all the expenses of the State, and the direct tax levied for such purpose is omitted, taxes for local purposes shall be levied upon the taxable property of the county, which shall be equal and uniform throughout the county, as distinguished from being equal and uniform throughout the State.

3rd. To authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements under and pursuant to special, as distinguished from general, laws.

4th. The Legislature is authorized to provide for the levy and collection of an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on real and personal property of the person or corporation holding the same.

7th. The Legislature is authorized to provide for a tax upon incomes in excess of $1,000 per annum, not arising from credits or personal property or from property otherwise taxed in this State, and also a tax upon the income derived from credits as well as from personal property. Such tax shall be uniform throughout the State and may be graded, or progressive, or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed ten percentum upon incomes derived from credits and personal property, and at a rate not exceeding four per cent upon incomes from such other income. In case of the imposition of the registry tax above referred to, or of an income tax arising from credits or personal property, all credits and personal property owned by the party against whom such registry, or income tax is imposed is exempted from all taxation while the law imposing such income or registry tax is in force.

In other words, where an income tax upon salaries or earnings of individuals is provided for, all personal property and credits must still be subjected to taxation, while in case of the imposition of an income tax arising from credits and personal property or of a registry tax such credits and personal property are exempted from taxation.

8th. The Legislature is authorized to exempt personal property of each individual to the extent of $300, provided the same shall not apply or be allowed to more than one member of the same family.

9th. Other provisions of the existing constitution involving the subject of taxation are preserved and continued in force.

Attorney General.

A Costly Cabin.

On Warren's island, off the coast of Maine, is being erected what is properly described as "a palatial log cabin." It is composed of spruce logs, and costs the tidy little sum of $25,000. The island on which this summer palace is erected was purchased by the late William H. Folwell of Philadelphia. Mr. Folwell died before the completion of the house. The work is now superintended by his son, William H. Folwell, Jr. Some idea of the size of this "cabin" may be gained from consideration of the fact that there are twenty-two sleeping rooms on the second floor. On the ground floor there is a fireplace of brick and granite, the mantel pieces being of marble, twelve feet in length, three in width and nine inches thick, the whole weighing some forty tons.—New York Tribune.

A Kansas mule balked the other day, and thereby contributed to the fund of real life romance. How? Well, the long eared quadruped was being driven by an angry father in chase of his eloping daughter and the mule stopped to think it over long enough to let the anxious couple have the knot tied.

He—How charmingly you sing. She—Do you really think so? He—Oh, yes, indeed. I never listen to you without wishing you were where my folks in Colorado could hear you.—Chicago American.

HUNDREDS SLAIN

BLOODY BATTLE BETWEEN CASTRO'S FORCES AND REVOLUTIONISTS.

IS WITHOUT DEFINITE RESULT

CASTRO HAS 247 MEN KILLED, WHILE REBELS LOSE 310 MEN.

SCENE IS ONE OF GREAT HORROR

WOUNDED MEN LAY UNATTENDED ON THE FIELD OF CARNAGE.

Willemstad, Oct. 17.—News has been received here from Caracas that the battle near La Victoria between forces of President Castro, numbering 4,100 men with fifteen guns, and the Venezuelan revolutionists, which began Monday morning, had so far been without definite result.

Gen. Matos, leader of the revolution, and Gen. Mendoza, were not present. The only rebel generals engaged were Guevera, Torres, Crespo and Antonio Fernandez, who had with them about 3,100 men, representing the advance guard of the revolutionists. President Castro twice led a charge in person and showed great courage and coolness. His lieutenant, Gen. Alcantara, who was at one time at the West Point military academy, was mortally wounded. The government forces while the revolutionists lost 310 men. Among the latter was Gen. Guevera. The arrival at the scene of battle at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon of Vice President Gomez with 800 men and a large amount of ammunition saved the situation for the government. At that time the odds were greatly against President Castro, but the arrival of reinforcements improved his position. Monday night the revolutionists still retained their position.

The fight started again Tuesday and at 10 o'clock in the morning Castro retired to La Victoria. At 1 o'clock the fighting ceased on both sides.

News of the engagement having reached Generals Matos and Mendoza they and arrived at a point near La Victoria Tuesday with the rest of the revolutionary, which now numbers about 5,000 men. The reinforcements under Matos and Mendoza intended to take part in the renewal of hostilities yesterday.

President Castro appears to be surrounded by his enemies. The town of El Consejo, which lies back of La Victoria, is occupied by the revolutionists. Valencia is believed to be doomed. The town was attacked by Gen. Riera on Monday and Tuesday. The government cannot receive reinforcements from Caracas, as the German railroad from there to Valencia is held by the rebels.

Those who were wounded in the fighting are still without medical assistance or care. They lie on the battlefield as they fell and the scene here is one of great horror.

LIPTON'S CHALLENGE.

Document Is Received by the New York Yacht Club.

New York, Oct. 17. — Sir Thomas Lipton's third challenge for the America's cup, sent by the Royal Ulster Yacht club, arrived by the steamer Oceanic yesterday. It was delivered in the regular mail at the New York Yacht club and opened by Secretary George A. Cormack, to whom it was addressed. The important document was then deposited in the safe until to-night, when it will be read before the members at a meeting especially called to consider the contents of the challenge. There is no doubt in the minds of well informed yachtsmen that the challenge is framed in such language that it will be promptly accepted by the club.

London, Oct. 17.—Speaking at Manchester last night, Prime Minister Balfour declared that the government would adhere to its educational bill and that parliament would sit until the measure was passed. He added that the criticisms accusing the bill of aiming at clerical control of the national schools were sectarian calumnies. Unless the bill was passed the present chaotic conditions of education would continue for another generation.

ADMIRAL SELFRIDGE DEAD.

Oldest Living Officer of That Rank in Any Navy of the World.

Boston, Oct. 17. — Rear Admiral Thomas O. Selfridge, Sr., U. S. N., retired, died at the McLean asylum in Waverly yesterday. He was probably the oldest living officer of that rank in any navy of the world, and there is no other navy which had two admirals, father and son, both retired. The elder admiral was born in Massachusetts and was appointed to the navy from that state on Jan. 1, 1818.

LAND SWINDLE EXPOSED.

Several Minnesotans Believed to Have Been Caught on Bogus Titles.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 18.—In a cancellation of a claim in Teton county by the department of the interior, the authorities believe they have unearthed a wholesale system of land swindling. The canceled entry was based on the alleged assignment of the rights of one John Stone, who was purported to have made an entry in the Minneapolis district. Claude Conzene, said to be in a Minneapolis jail, was found to have forged the alleged assignment. It is now thought that for years Conzene made a business of forging alleged assignments of soldiers' claims and disposing of them to "tenderfoot." Several Minnesota people are believed to hold land in this section on bogus titles conferred in this manner.

ARMOUR THE KING

J. OGDEN HAS GATHERED IN ALL CASH CORN ON THE MARKET.

CUDAHY AND PATTEN LAID OUT

BOTH SPECULATORS DECLARE THEY HAVE TAKEN THEIR MEDICINE.

HEAVY LOSSES FOR THE SHORTS

ARMOUR'S PROFIT IS 5 CENTS A BUSHEL WITH MUCH MORE IN SIGHT.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—J. Ogden Armour yesterday compelled John Cudahy, chief of the shorts in December corn, to run to cover. James A. Patten, who had also covered a line estimated at 1,000,000 bushels, proclaimed the supremacy of Armour, and declared:

"I have taken my medicine."

Covering of 5,000,000 bushels of short corn was credited to John Cudahy as the result of the operations yesterday and Tuesday. He had made a game fight, but accepted defeat in the face of conditions that made the outlook dark for ability to find the corn sold.

"Armour is king of December corn," the traders cried, and ascribed to him speculative skill and success on a scale even greater than that of his father, P. D. Armour. The long line of December corn credited to J. Ogden Armour was estimated at 10,000,000 bushels, on which the profit already averaged 5 cents, with far more in sight.

How Tight Is His Grip

on the option is shown by the figures that changed the views of Patten and Cudahy. Contract corn was reduced 500,000 bushels last week, leaving the total only 975,000 bushels. Instead of the total stock of nearly 12,000,000 bushels in all positions a year ago, the figures yesterday were 317,000. Armour has all the cash corn and is buying wherever he can, throughout the country.

"Armour has the corn," said James A. Patten. "I've covered my shorts and taken my medicine. There may also be a change in the grading of corn and I am afraid of this. The present market is very uncertain."

Mr. Patten's loss is said to have averaged about 1 cent a bushel. The quotation on the December option made a gain of a full cent yesterday, reaching 49 1-4 cents. John W. Gates is also well on the long side of the market, but not at the head of the procession. Armour's lead is not disputed.

ASK IDEAS OF POSTMASTERS.

Special Delivery Service Will Be Improved.

Washington, Oct. 17.—In line with the purpose of the postal officials to improve cities, the postmasters at St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities of the West will soon be called upon to report to the department the condition of this class of mail service in their respective offices. Complaints of the inefficiency of the special delivery have fallen on deaf ears for years, and not until First Assistant Postmaster General Wynne entered the department has any effort been made to organize it. It is the belief of Gen. Wynne that special delivery can be made to pay, and that, properly organized, it will be of great value to business men in the large cities.

Three of the robbers were captured, but the fourth one managed to effect his escape.

Savage Harris was placed in custody.

SHADE TREES THEIR FUEL.

Many "Mighty Monarchs" at La Crosse Are Sacrificed.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 17.—Owing to the scarcity of all kinds of fuel and the exorbitant prices of wood, many people in the city are chopping down their shade trees to be used for winter fuel. Many large trees have been cut in the residence portion of the city. The trees are mostly cottonwoods and large maples, although some people have threatened to cut other varieties also.

JUMPS FROM MOVING TRAIN.

Prisoner Escapes While on the Way to Stillwater.

St. Paul, Special, Oct. 18.—

While the Great Northern train from Sandstone was running at the rate of fifty miles an hour yesterday morning Andrew Machlin jumped through a coach window, taking the frame with him, and escaped from the custody of City Marshall Sandy Gund of Sandstone.

Machlin is a colored man, and was being taken to Stillwater by the marshal. The train was behind time, and it was running at a lively rate when Machlin secured permission to go into the toilet room. His shackles were removed, and Marshal Gund remained on guard outside.

Jumps Through Window.

When the train was about a mile from Houls Siding a crash of glass was heard. The marshal guessed what it meant, but could not open the door of the room. Conductor C. D. Nickey went to his relief, but the train had sped along so rapidly that considerable territory had been covered by the time the door was opened. Machlin had escaped, and the window was smashed. The train was stopped and was backed up a couple of miles, but the prisoner was not in sight. Marshal Gund told Conductor Nickey that he didn't want to go to St. Paul, and the train pulled out, leaving the marshal in the woods to search for his prisoner.

SENT TO SOUTH DAKOTA.

Rev. G. S. Parker of St. Paul Is Transferred.

St. Paul, Special, Oct. 18.—

Rev. George S. Parker, who has been pastor of the Bates Avenue M. E. church for two years, has been transferred by Bishop Daniel A. Goodsell of the Minnesota conference to the South Dakota conference, and he will fill the pulpit of a church at Madison, S. D. The transfer was made at Mr. Parker's request as he was very desirous of accepting the urgent call he had received from Madison. He will leave next week with his family for his new home.

The parish is considerably larger than the one he leaves in this city. The members are now planning a $15,000 church and Mr. Parker will have charge of the construction of the new edifice.

Mr. Parker came to this city as pastor of the Bates Avenue church two years ago from Kasson. He has become very popular with the members of his congregation and its membership has grown rapidly under his leadership. The members of the church were loath to see him leave. He is a very eloquent preacher and is known as one of the best church-builders in the Minnesota conference. Until the pulpit is filled, the presiding elder of this district, Rev. F. M. Rule, will provide supply pastors.

TAGS ON FISH NETS.

Executive Agent Fullerton's Device a Success.

St. Paul, Special, Oct. 18.—

Executive Agent S. F. Fullerton of the state game and fish commission is preparing for the fishing season. The system of tagging the nets of each licensed fisherman worked so well last winter that it will be continued this winter.

Before the tagging device was hit upon the deputies had much difficulty in finding illegal nets because the capture of a suspected net was almost sure to be followed by the appearance of a claimant holding a license and the deputy could not safely confiscate a net upon the mere suspicion that it might belong to an unlicensed person. Now, each net has its tag, and the deputy who makes inspection has a check list of persons to whom tags have been issued. The ownership of a net is fixed as soon as its tag comes in sight, if it has been licensed. If the tag is missing there is no doubts to harass the deputy. Last year 333 tags were issued. Most of the tags go to Otter Tail county.

MINNESOTA SCHOOLS.

State Superintendent Tabulates Reports From Districts.

St. Paul, Special, Oct. 18.—

The reports from the school districts of the state have been tabulated in the office of the state superintendent. The total enrollment is 416,251 pupils. This is much in excess of the 353,419 reported as attending school forty days in the school year and seems to indicate a rather floating population of pupils.

There are 12,331 teachers in the state. The total amount of money expended by the people of the state for the schools during the last school year is $7,081,018. There is a balance of $1,915,093 now remaining in the hands of the school authorities, but it is believed that a sum about equal to this was received as balance from the preceding year, so that the actual expenditure is about $7,000,000, as reported.

EARTHQUAKES ADD TO HORROR

ERUPTIONS ON ST. VINCENT AND MARTINIQUE BAD AS ANY YET.

SHOWERS OF LARGE STONES

DARKNESS ON ISLAND OF BARBADOES AT 10 O'CLOCK IN MORNING.

Kingstown, St. Vincent, Oct. 18.—A terrific eruption of the Soufriere volcano commenced Wednesday night.

During the preceding day earth tremors, apparently too slight to be considered important, were experienced in the central and northern parts of the island.

At 8 o'clock Wednesday night there were indubitable indications of an eruption. Rumbling noises were heard, they increased until 9 o'clock, when the roaring volcanic giant belched out its deadly contents. This eruption was followed by a brief lull. Then, from 10 o'clock until 4 o'clock yesterday morning the upheaval continued. The outbreak was accompanied by an incessant and confused cannonading. There were incandescent clouds and sparkling matter was ejected. After 4 o'clock the disturbance gradually decreased, but the noise of is still audible in the districts near the volcano. Both craters of the Soufriere were apparently active; they have been steaming all day long. Sand fell heavily everywhere from 1:30 to 2:30 yesterday morning. At southern points the sand is half an inch deep, the depth gradually increasing toward the volcanic cone, where there were showers of large stones, pebbles and cinders.

Kingstown and other southern points of the island have not been damaged. Reports from the Windward district are awaited. This eruption caused darkness at Bridgetown, Island of Barbados, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. There was a fall of volcanic dust there.

The sand ejected during this eruption has a stronger sulphurous odor than any previously thrown out, and one superficial square foot of it weighs exactly one pound.

Pelee Also at It.

WEST POINT HAZING ABOLISHED.

Superintendent of Military Academy Makes His Annual Report.

Washington, Oct. 18. — Col. A. L. Mills, superintendent of the United States military academy, has made his annual report to the secretary of war. He says that the discipline of the corps of cadets of the academy has been very satisfactory throughout the year. He makes the following reference to hazing:

"During the year there has been no relaxation of proper efforts to make permanent the reforms already accomplished bearing on the treatment accorded new cadets by their older comrades. The regulations governing the subject have been carefully enforced, and with but a single exception that is worthy of note cadets have shown soldierly regard for their obligations in the matter. The exception referred to—the first under the new regulations—is that of a cadet who, without authority, made a fourth-class man assume a constrained position and used threatening and abusive language to him. For this offense the cadet was brought to trial by court-martial, and, being found guilty, was dismissed.

CHAPTER LIV.

Where Is the Ring?

Van Sneck looked up with some signs of confusion. He had not expected a question of that kind. There was just the suggestion of cunning on his face.

"A ring?" he murmured, vaguely. "A ring? What ring?"

"Now, look here," David said, sternly. "You are more or less in our power, you know, but we are not disposed to be hard on you as long as you are quite candid with us. Henson required something that he believed to be in your possession; indeed, you have as good as said you had it with you. Henson lured you into my house to get that more than anything else. That he would have killed you, even after he got it, I firmly believe. But that is not the point. Now, was not Henson looking for Prince Rupert's ring that you got from him by means of a trick?"

Van Sneck dropped his hands helplessly on the bed.

"Gentlemen," he whined, you are too much for me. The marvellous accuracy of your knowledge is positively overwhelming. It was the ring Henson was after."

"The one you stole from him years ago! But what did you know about it?"

Van Sneck smiled.

"There is no living man who knows more about those things than I do," he said. "It's a passion and a study with me. And, some seven years ago, in Holland, Henson gave me the description of a ring he wanted me to copy. Henson never told me what the ring was called, but I knew it was the Prince Rupert ring. I made a copy, and Henson was pleased with it. Some time later he came to me with the original, and asked for another copy. I meant to be honest, but my love for those things got the better of me. I made him two copies, the one good, the other an exact fac simile of the Prince Rupert. These I handed over to Henson, and he went away perfectly satisfied that he had a good copy and the original. I chuckled to myself, feeling pretty sure that he would never find out."

"But he did find out?" David said.

"Only lately. Probably he took it to an expert for valuation or perhaps for sale. Lately his idea was to offer the ring to Lord Littimer for a huge sum of money; but when he discovered he had been done, he knew that Lord Littimer would not be so deceived. Also, he had a pretty good idea that I should keep the ring about me. You see, I dared not sell an historic gem like that. And, as usual, Henson was perfectly right."

"Then you had the ring in your pocket the night you came here?" asked Steel, with a commendable effort at calmness. "Did Henson get it?"

"No, he didn't!" Van Sneck chuckled. "Come what might, I had made up my mind that he should never see that ring again. You see, I was frightened and confused, and I was not properly sober, and I did something with the ring, though to save my life, I cannot say what I did. Do you know, Dr. Bell, I have lost my sense of smell?"

Steel wriggled impatiently about on his chair. The interruption was exasperating. Bell, however, seemed to take a different view of the matter altogether.

"Quite naturally," he said. "The blow on your head held all your senses suspended for a time. After the operation I should not have been surprised to have found you half-blind and stone-deaf into the bargain. But one thing is certain—your smell will come back to you. It may remain in abeyance for a few days; it may return in a few moments."

"What on earth has that to do with our interview?" David asked.

"I fancy a great deal," Bell said. "The sense of smell has a great deal to do with memory. Doesn't the scent of flowers bring back vivid recollections of things sometimes for years forgotten? Van Sneck was going to say the air was heavy with the fragrance of some particular blossom when he was struck down by Henson in the conservatory."

"Very clever man, Dr. Bell," Van Sneck said, admiringly. "He seems to see right through your mind and out at the other side. To a great extent, I recollect all that happened that eventful night. And just at the very last I seem to smell something powerful. That smell came to my nostrils just like a flash and then had gone again. Gentlemen, if I could have a big, long scent at that flower I could tell you what I did with the ring."

"Sounds rather complex," David said.

"Not a bit of it," Bell retorted. "Our friend is talking sound common sense, and our friend is going to rest now till late in the afternoon, when we'll put him into an arm chair, with some pillows, and let him sit in the conservatory. Associating with former surroundings frequently works wonders. Van Sneck, you can go to sleep."

Van Sneck closed his eyes obediently. He was somewhat tired with the interview. But, on the whole, Bell decided that he was doing very well indeed. And there was very little to be done for the present. The two men smoked their cigars peacefully.

"We have got to the end," Bell said.

"I fancy so," David murmured. "But we can't save the scandal. I don't see how Reginald Henson is going to get out of the mess without a prosecution."

Any further speculation as to the future of that engaging rascal was cut short by a pleasant surprise, no other than the unexpected arrival of Ruth Gates and Chris Henson. The latter was beaming with health and happiness; she had discarded her disguise, and stood confessed before all the world, like the beautiful creature that she was.

"What does it all mean?" David asked. "What will Longdean village say?"

"What does Longdean village know?" Chris retorted. "They are vaguely aware that somebody was taken away from the house a short time ago to be buried; but that is all their knowledge. And there is no more need for disguise, Lord Littimer says. He knows pretty well everything. He has been very restless and uneasy for the past day or two, and yesterday he left, saying that he had business in London. Early to-day I had a characteristic telegram from him saying that he was at Longdean and that I was necessary to his comfort there. I was to come, clothed in my right mind, and I was to bring Mr. Steel and Dr. Bell along."

"It can't be managed," said Bell. "We've got Van Sneck here."

"And I had forgotten all about him," said Chris. "Was the operation successful?"

Bell told his budget of good news down to the story of the ring and the mysterious manner in which it had disappeared again. David had followed Ruth into the conservatory, where she stood with her dainty head buried over a rose.

She looked up, with a warm, shy smile on her face.

"I hope you are satisfied," she said. "You are safe now."

"I was never very much alarmed, dearest," Steel said. "If this thing had never happened I might never have met you. And as soon as this business is definitely settled I shall come and see your uncle. I am a very impatient man, Ruth."

"And you shall see my uncle when you please, dear," she said. "You will find him quite as charming as you say your mother is. What will she say?"

"Say? That you are the dearest and sweetest girl in the world, and that I am a lucky fellow. But you are not going off already?"

"Indeed, we must. We have a cab at the door. And I am going to brave the horrors of Longdean Grange and spend the night there. Only I fancy that the horrors have gone forever. I shall be very disappointed if you don't come to-morrow."

Behind a friendly palm David bent and kissed the shy lips, with a vow that he would see Longdean Grange on the morrow. Then Chris caught up Ruth with a whirl, and they were gone.

It was after ten that Bell and Steel managed to convey Van Sneck to the conservatory. The place was filled with brightness, and scent and color and the afterglow of the sunshine. The artistic eye of the Dutchman lighted up with genuine pleasure.

"They say you islanders are crude and cold and have no sense of the beautiful," he said. "But there are no houses anywhere to compare with those of the better-class Englishman. look at those colors blending—"

"Hang those colors!" said Bell, vigorously. "Steel, there is nothing like moisture to bring out the full fragrance of flowers. Turn on your hose, and give your plants a good watering."

"It's the proper time," David replied. "Turn on the tap for me."

A cooling stream played on the flowers; plants drooped their heads, filled with the diamond moisture. Then the air seemed laden with the mingled scent.

"I can smell the soil!" Van Sneck cried. "How good it is to smell anything again! And I can just catch a suggestion of the perfume of something familiar. What's that red bloom?"

He pointed to a creeper growing up the wall. David broke off a spray.

"That's a kind of Japanese passion-flower," he said. "It has a lovely, full-flavored scent, like a mixture of violets and almonds. Smell it."

Van Sneck placed the wet, dripping spray to his nose. Just for an instant it conveyed nothing to him. Then he rose, with a half-triumphant cry.

"Steady, there!" said Bell. "You mustn't get up, you know. I see you are excited. Has it come back to you again?"

"That's the scent," Van Sneck cried. "The air was full of that as I fell backwards. And Henson stood over me exactly by that cracked tile where Mr. Steel now is. Give me a moment, and I shall be able to tell yo uoverything. Oh, yes; the first time I slipped on purpose. I told you I stumbled. But that was a ruse. And as I fell I took the ring from my waistcoat pocket. Let me have another sniff at that bloom. Yes; I've got it now, quite clear!"

"You know where the ring is?" David asked, eagerly.

"Well, not quite that. I took it from my waistcoat pocket and pitched it away from me. I saw it fall on a pot covered with moss, but I can't say which pot or in which corner. I only know that I threw it over my shoulder, and that it dropped into the thick moss that lies on the top of all the pots. I laughed to myself as it fell, and I rejoiced to see that Henson knew nothing of it."

"And it is still there?" Bell demanded.

Van Sneck nodded, solemnly.

"I swear it," he said. "Prince Rupert's ring is in this conservatory."

CHAPTER LV.

Kicked Out.

Reginald Henson had had more than one unpleasant surprise lately, but none so painful as the sight of Lord Littimer seated in the Longdean Grange drawing-room with the air of a man who is very much at home indeed.

The place was strangely changed, too. There was an air of neatness and order about the room that Henson had never seen before. The dust and dirt had absolutely vanished; it might have been the home of any ordinary wealthy and refined people. And all Lady Littimer's rags and patches had disappeared. She was dressed in somewhat old-fashioned style, but handsomely and well. She sat beside Littimer with a smile on her face. But the cloud seemed to have rolled from her mind; her eyes were clear, if a little frightened. From the glance that passed between Littimer and herself it was easy to see that the misunderstanding was no more.

"You are surprised to see me here?" said Littimer.

Henson stammered something and shrank towards the door. Littimer ordered him back again. He came, with a slinking, dogged air; he avoided the smiling contempt in Enid's eyes.

"My presence appears to be superfluous," he said, bitterly.

"And mine appears to be a surprise," Littimer replied. "Come, are you not glad to see me, my heir and successor? Why, if some of your future constituents could see you now they might be justified in imagining that you had done something wrong. Look at yourself."

Littimer indicated a long gilt mirror on the opposite wall. Henson glanced at it, involuntarily, and dropped his eyes. Could that abject, white-faced sneak be himself? Was that the man whose fine presence and tender smile had charmed the sands? It seemed impossible.

"What have I done?" he asked.

"What have you not done?" Littimer thundered. "In the first place, you did your best to ruin Hatherley Bell's life. You robbed me of a picture to do so, and your friend, Merritt, tried to rob me again. But I have both those pictures now. You did that because you were afraid of Bell—afraid lest he should see through your base motives. And you succeeded for a time, for the coast was clear. And then you proceeded to rob me of my son, by one of the most contemptible tricks ever played by one man upon another. It was you who stole the money and the ring; you who brought about all that sorrow and trouble by means of a forgery. But there are other people on your track as well as myself. You were at your last gasp. You were coming to see me to sell the ring for a large sum, to take you out of the country, and then you discovered that you hadn't really got the ring."

"What—what are you talking about?" Henson asked, feebly.

"Scoundrel!" Littimer cried. "Innocent and pure to the last. I know all about Van Sneck and those forgeries of Prince Rupert's ring. And I know how Van Sneck was nearly done to death in Mr. Steel's house; and I know why—good heavens! It seems impossible that I could have been deceived all these years by such a slimy, treacherous scoundrel. And I might have gone on still but for a woman—"

"A lady detective!" Henson sneered. "Miss Lee."

Littimer smiled. It was good, after all, to defeat and hoodwink the rascal.

"Miss Chris Henson," he said. "It never occurred to you that Miss Chris and Miss Lee were one and the same person? You never guessed. And she played with you as if you had been a child. How beautifully she exposed you over those pictures. Ah, you should have seen your face when you saw the stolen Rembrandt back again in its place. And, after that, you were mad enough to think that I trusted you. My dear, what shall I do with this pretty fellow?"

Lady Littimer shook her head, doubtfully. It was plain that the presence of Henson disturbed her. There was just a suggestion of the old madness in her eyes.

"Send him away," she said. "Let him go."

"Send him away, by all means," Littimer went on. "But letting him go is another matter. If we do, the police will pick him up on other charges. There is a certain consolation in knowing that his evil career is likely to be shortened by some years. But I shall have no mercy. Scotland Yard shall know everything."

There was a cold ring in Littimer's voice that told Henson of his determination to carry out his threat. The other trouble he might wriggle out of, but this one was terribly real. It was time to try conciliation.

"It will be a terrible scandal for the family, my lord," he whined.

Littimer rose to his feet. A sudden anger flared into his eyes. He was a smaller man than Henson, but the latter cowed before him.

"You dog!" he cried. "What greater scandal than that of the past few years? Does not all the world know that there is, or has been, some heavy cloud over the family honor? Lord and Lady Littimer have parted, and her ladyship has gone away. That is only part of what the gossips have said. And in these domestic differences it is always the woman who suffers. Everybody always says that the woman has done something wrong. For years my wife has been under this stigma. If she had chosen to keep before the world after she left me, most people would have ignored her. And you talk to me of a family scandal!"

"You will only make bad worse, my lord."

"No!" Littimer cried. "I am going to make bad infinitely better. We come together again, but we say nothing of the past. And the world sneers and says the past is ignored for politic considerations. And so the public is going to know the truth, you dog. The whole facts of the case have gone to my solicitor, and by this time to-morrow a warrant will be issued against you. And I shall stand in open court and tell the whole world my story."

"In fairness to Lady Littimer," said Enid, speaking for the first time, "you could do no less."

"You were always against me!" Henson snarled.

"Because I always knew you," said Enid. "And the more I know of you the greater was my contempt. And you came here over on the same errand—money, money, money. From first to last you have robbed my aunt of something like £70,000. And always by threats or the promise that you would some day restore the ring to the family."

"As to the ring," Henson protested, "I swear—"

"I suppose a lie more or less makes no difference to an expert like yourself," Enid went on, with cold contempt. "You took advantage of my aunt's misfortunes. Ah, she is a different woman since Lord Littimer came here. But her sorrow has crushed her down, and that forgery of the ring you dangled before her eyes deceived her."

"I never showed her the ring," Henson said, brazenly.

"And you can look me in the face and say that? One night Lady Littimer snatched it from you and ran into the garden. You followed and struggled for the ring. And Mr. David Steel, who stood close by, felled you to the earth with a blow on the side of your head. I wonder he didn't kill you. I should have done so in his place. And yet, it would be a pity to hang anyone for your death. See here!"

Enid produced the ring from her pocket. Lord Littimer looked at it intently.

"Have you seen this before, my dear?" he asked his wife.

"Many a time," Lady Littimer said, sadly. "Take it away it reminds me of too many bitter memories. Take it out of my sight."

"An excellent forgery," Littimer murmured. "A forgery calculated to deceive many experts even. I will compare it with the original by-and-by."

Henson listened with a sinking feeling at his heart. Was it possible he wondered, that Lord Littimer had really recovered the original? He had had hopes of getting it back even now, and making it the basis of terms of surrender. Lady Littimer snatched the ring from Littimer's grasp and threw it through the open window into the garden.

She stood up facing Henson, her head thrown back, her eyes flaming with a new resolution. It seemed hardly possible to believe that this fine, handsome woman with the white hair could be the poor demented creature that the others once had known.

"Reginald Henson, listen to me," she cried. "For your own purpose you cruelly and deliberately set to work to wreck the happiness of several lives. For mere money you did this; for sheer love of dissipation you committed this crime. You nearly deprived me of my reason. I say nothing about the money, because that is nothing in comparison. But the years that are lost can never come back to me again. When I think of my past and the past of my poor, unhappy boy, I feel that I have no forgiveness for you. If you—Oh, go away; don't stay here—go! If I had known you were coming I should have forbidden you the house. Your mere presence unnerves me. Littimer, send him away."

Littimer rose to his feet and rang the bell.

"You will be good enough to rid me of your hateful presence," he said, "at once; now go!"

But Henson still stood, irresolute. He fidgeted from one foot to the other. He seemed to have some trouble that he could find no expression for.

"I want to go away," he murmured. "I want to leave the country. But at the present moment I am practically penniless. If you would advance me—"

Littimer laughed aloud.

"Upon my word," he said, "your coolness is colossal. I am going to prosecute you. I am doing my best to bring you into the dock. And you ask me—me, of all men—to find you money so that you can evade justice! Have you not had enough—are you never satisfied? Williams, will you see Mr. Henson off the premises?"

The smiling Williams bowed low.

"With the greatest pleasure, my lord," he said. Any further orders, my lord?"

"And he is not to come here again, you understand."

Williams seemed to understand, perfectly. With one backward, sullen glance, Henson quitted the room, and passed into the night with his companion. Williams was whistling, cheerfully, with his hands in his pockets.

"Is that how you treat a gentleman?" Henson demanded.

"I ain't a gentleman," Williams said. "Never set up to be. And I ain't a dirty rascal who has just been kicked out of a nobleman's house. Here, stop that! Try that game again, and I'll call the dogs. And don't show me any of your airs, please. I' monly a servant, but I'm an honest man."

Henson stifled his anger as best he could. He was too miserable and downcast to think of much besides himself at present. Once the lodge gates were open, Williams stood aside for him to pass. The temptation was irresistible. And Henson's back was turned. With a kick of concentrated contempt and fury Williams shot Henson into the road, where he landed full on his face. His cup of humiliation was complete.

CHAPTER LVI.

White Fangs.

Henson took his weary way in the direction of Brighton. He had but a few pounds he could call his own, and not nearly enough to get away from the country, and at any moment he might be arrested. He was afraid to go back to his lodgings for fear of Merritt. That Merritt would kill him if he got the chance he felt certain. And Merritt was one of those dogged, patient types who can wait any time for the gratification of his vengeance.

Merritt was pretty certain to be hanging about for his opportunity. On the whole, the best thing would be to walk straight to Brighton Station and take the first train in the morning to town. There he could see Gates—who as yet knew nothing—and from him it would be possible to borrow a hundred or two, and then get away. And there were others besides Gates.

Henson trudged for a mile or more over the downs. Then he came down from the summit of the castle he was building with a rude shock to earth again. A shadow seemed to rise from the ground, a heavy clutch was on his shoulder, and a hoarse voice was in his ear.

"Got you!" the voice said. "I know they'd kick you out yonder, and I guessed you'd sneak across the downs. And I've fairly copped you!"

Henson's knees knocked together. Physically, he was a far stronger and bigger man than Merritt, but he was taken unawares, and his nerves had been badly shaken of late.

Merritt forced him backwards until he lay on the turf with his antagonist kneeling on his chest. He dared not struggle, he dared not exert himself. Presently he might get a chance, and if he did it wiuld go hard with James Merritt.

"What are you going to do?" he gasped.

Merritt drew a big, jagged stone towards him with one foot.

"I'm going to dash your brains out with this," he said, hoarsely. His eyes were gleaming, and in the dim light his mouth was set like a steel trap. "I'm going to have a little chat with you first, and then down this comes on the top of your skull, and it'll smash you like a bloomin' eggshell. Your time's come, Henson. Say your prayers."

"I can't," whined Henson. "And what have I done?"

Merritt rocked heavily on the other's breastbone, almost stifling him. "Wot?" he said, scoffingly. The pleasing mixture of gin and fog in his throat rendered him more hideously hoarse than usual. "Not make up a prayer! And you a regular dab at all that game! Why, I've seen the women snivellin' like babbies when you've been ladlin' it out. Heavens, what a chap you would be on the patter! How you would kid the chaplain!"

Mr. O'Pawkins.

Anthony Hope, the writer, is known in society as Mr. Hope Hawkins. Not long ago Mrs. Hugh Reid Griffin, the president of the American Women's Club of London, was party to a most undignified trifling with his most dignified name. The crush was on in full swing at one of the club's receptions, and Mrs. Griffin's powers as hostess were taxed to their utmost. There came the moment's pause in the hum of conversation that follows the appearance of a celebrity. All eyes were turned as the cockney footman announced "Mr. O'Pawkins." The hush deepened, but Mrs. Griffin, amiable and unconscious, extended her hand and welcomed Mr. O'Pawkins, not looking up to see that it was Mr. Hope Hawkins, who was greatly enjoying the flunkey's arrangement of his name.—New York Times.

He Had More Patients.

Dr. Abraham Jacobi, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, believes that too many young doctors are let loose upon an unsuspecting public without giving due study to the diseases of children. Now, pediatrics is Dr. Jacobi's specialty. He tells this story:

A friend entered the office of a young physician and said that he had just been delayed by two funerals.

"And whose funerals were they?" asked the physician.

"They were those of the patients you saw yesterday," replied the friend.

"That can hardly be," said the young doctor. "You remember I had three patients yesterday."—New York Times.

Slightly Changed His Name.

A pious lady of Portland had a husband who was a seaman.

He was about to start on a protracted voyage, and as his wife was anxious as to her husband's welfare, she sent the following notice to the village preacher:

"Mr. Blank, who is going to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation."

As the old lady was quite illiterate, the minister read the following to the congregation from the slip handed to him:

"Mr. Blank, who is going to see his wife, desires the prayers of the congregation."—London Tit-Bits.

The Allusion Not Meant.

The late John P. Altgeld was fond of telling this story, although it was one on himself:

At the time he was governor of Illinois, some distant relatives, farmers in an Eastern state, called upon him. With his usual affability, he did all he could to make their sojourn with him very agreeable.

Some time later his friends, who had killed a pig, sent him a beautiful ham, and a letter in which he read:

"We felt, after all your kindness, that we could not cut up the pig without thinking of you."—New York Times.

A Difference in Gender.

While being shown the sights of Chicago by the mayor of that city, M. Cambon, the French ambassador, expressed his thanks for the mayor's kindness. "But," he added, "I am sorry to so cockroach upon your time."

"Oh," answered the mayor, "don't think of that. But you don't mean cockroach, M. Cambon; it's encroach you mean."

"Oh, is it? I see—a difference in gender."—New York Times.

A Source of Revenue.

"Kunnel," said the colored man, "is dar any chance of dis law foh electin' senators at de polls goin' through?"

"Not immediately," answered the statesman. "Are you interested?"

"Yes, suh. I'se interested vo'y nuhtickeler. If do price of meat an cohn keeps goin' up, I dunno what us folks is gwine ter do unless we gets a few mo' 'lections."—Exchange.

What Is Beauty?

A famous statesman, on being asked what he considered the greatest type of beauty in women, replied:

"The woman who is beautiful and does not know it, and the homely woman who, by her intelligence and graceful bearing, makes you forget it."

Rest Broken.

"He had a job as neight watchman from 10 to 6, but 'twas too hard on 'im."

"Shure, thim hours is short enough for anny wan."

Instant Relief From Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

Here is a case: Mr. T. Shepherd of Whitburn, Sunderland, Ohio, says: "My wife suffered severely from rheumatism, and neuralgia. She could not get one moment's rest and was nearly crazed with pain. Obtained instant relief and a permanent cure by using the contents of one bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. There is no other remedy in the world that will do this. The instantaneous effect which St. Jacobs Oil produces is a part of its half a century record." St. Jacobs Oil is sold in 25 cts. and 50 cts. sizes by all druggists. The words "Acts like Magic," "Conquers Pain," which have been used in connection with St. Jacobs Oil for more than 50 years are wonderfully and truly descriptive.

A Great Man's Small Victory.

Cecil Rhodes was dead and people were saying that Alfred Beit was worth $375,000,000, when a visitor at Ostend noticed an unprepossessing-looking man he knew slightly playing earnestly at "petits chevaux." A little later he met his acquaintance leaving the Casino, and the first thing the little man said was:

"What do you think? I have just won $50!"

It was Alfred Beit, who, while Cecil Rhodes lived, worked tirelessly in the shadow of the greater man and in partnership with him, and who is now the head and front of the South African mine owners. And the incident sums up his career.—Everbody's Magazine.

One of Those "Treasures."

Three women were having an experience meeting on the hotel piazza. The first told how her maid had locked her in the bath room and fled from the house. The second told of a green cook who had boiled the watermelon. The third said:

"Well, my latest treasure has just landed, and did not know ho wto wash windows, so I explained the matter to her. We live on the fifth floor of an apartment house, and I showed her how to wash the outside by sitting on the sill and letting her feet hang into the room. COLE'S COUGH CURE CURES CROUP.

Mrs. C. Mason, Black River Falls, Wis., says: "I know of no remedy for croup that compares with Cole's Cough Cure and I have used many remedies, for my children are subject to severe attacks of this disease. The children like it, it gives immediate relief and it cures. It is a most valuable cough remedy." Every bottle guaranteed. 25 and 50 cents, by all druggists.

How the Coal Miner Progresses.

"I'm twelve years old, goin' on thirteen," said the boy to the boss of the breaker. He didn't look more than ten, and he was only nine, but the law said he must be twelve to get a job. He was one a multitude of the 16,000 youngsters of the mines, who, because miners' families are large and their pay comparatively small, start in the breaker before many boys have passed their primary schooling. From the time he enters the breaker there is a rule of progress that is almost always followed. Once a miner and twice a boy-breaker, the upward growth of boy to man, breaker-boy to miner, the descent from manhood to old age, from miner to breaker-boy; that is the rule. So the nine-year-old boy who is "twelve, goin' on thirteen," starts in the breaker.—Rev. John McDowell, in World's Work.

TROUBLE BEGINS.

Trouble begins with the first backache.

Backache comes in many forms—sudden twinges of pain, sharp stitches, slow, exhaustive aches.

Most backache pains are kidney pains.

The kidneys fail to perform the duties nature intends them to do and the warning of trouble comes through the back.

Neglect the kidney warning, grave complications will surely follow.

Urinary disorders, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, are the downward steps of neglected kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every kidney and bladder sickness and the cure lasts. Read this proof of it:

Mrs. Adam Guntle, residing at 701 South Plum St., Crawfordsville, Ind., says: "I made a public statement in 1897, saying that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured a member of our family after he had suffered for years with a weak back and kidney troubles. He took three boxes of this remedy and was completely cured. Now three years have elapsed since I made this statement and I am only too pleased to reindorse it. I have also used Doan's Kidney Pills myself, obtaining the best results. I have recommended this remedy to my friends and neighbors as one which can always be depended upon."

A FREE TRIAL of this great Kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Guntle will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

The Ass Was Outside.

A good story is told of the quick-witted Irish lawyer, Baron O'Grady. It is told of others, but the sequel to it is, I think, the property of O'Grady.

He was on one occasion trying a case in a country court, outside the walls of which a fair was in progress. Amid the miscellaneous herds of animals were a considerable number of asses, and one of them commenced to bray loudly. At once the chief baron stopped the advocate, who, at that moment happened to be pleading; "Wait a moment, Mr. Bushe, I cannot hear two at once." The court roared and the advocate flushed. Presently, when the court came to sum up, another ass struck in, and the bray sounded through the court. Up jumped Mr Busche at once, with his hand to his ear. "Would your lordship speak a little more loudly? There is such an echo in the court that I cannot hear distinctly."—New York Sun.

The Last of the Flowers.

In the early part of October the beautiful fringed gentian may still be found, while the witch hazel glorifies the thickets of its abode, and, with the seeds of its last year's flowers, bombards the intruder. Late asters and fleabanes also linger, and now and now and then one of the children of the spring—a violet or dandelion—shyly begs notice and a tender caress as a little stranger in an inhospitable world. But for the most part the flowers have departed, leaving in quaint and wondrous seed-pods their pledges of sure return when spring bids them awake. —Country Life in America.

Recourse.

In this quandary the highwayman bethought himself to consult a lawyer.

"Good sir," said he, "on the one hand, my conscience will not permit me longer to do that which is unlawful, while on the other hand it is not practicable for a man, at my age, to change his employment."

"Incorporate under the laws of New Jersey," quoth the lawyer, readily enough, for it chanced that he was learned in the law.—Life.

Child Slavery in Mills of the South.

Boys and girls from the age of six years and upward are employed. They usually work from six o'clock in the morning until seven at night. At noon I saw them squat on the floor and devour their food, which consisted mostly of corn bread and bacon. These weazoned pigmies munched in silence ad then toppled over in sleep on the floor in all the abandon of babyhood. When it came time to go to work the foreman marched through the groups shaking the sleepers, shouting in their ears, lifting them to their feet, and, in a few instances, kicking the delinquents into wakefulness. From a quarter to one until seven o'clock they worked without respite or rest. These toddlers, I saw for the most part did but one thing—they watched the flying spindles on a frame twenty feet long and tied the broken threads. They could not sit at their tasks; back and forth they paced, watching with inanimate, dull look the flying spindles. The noise of the machinery and the constant looking at the flying wheels reduce nervous sensation in a few months to the minimum. Memory is as dead as hope. He does his work like an automaton; he is part of the roaring machinery; memory is seared, physical vitality is at such a low ebb that he ceases to suffer. At a certain night school where several good women were putting forth efforts to mitigate the condition of these baby slaves, one of the teachers told me that they did not try to teach the children to read—they simply tried to arouse the spirit through pictures and telling stories. If the child workers of South Carolina could be marshaled by bugle call, headed by fife and drum, and marched through Commonwealth Avenue, out past the statue of William Lloyd Garrison, erected by sons of the men who dragged him through the streets at a rope's end, the sight would appal the heart and drive conviction home. Imagine an army of twenty thousand pigmy bondsmen, half naked, half starved, yellow, weazoned, deformed in body, with drawn faces that show spirits too dead to weep, too hopeless to laugh, too pained to feel! Would not aristocratic Boston lock her doors, bar the shutters, and turn in shame from such a sight?—Lucinda B. Chandler in Wilshire's Magazine.

Hawthorne Had Little Use For Politicians.

Correcting some inaccuracies in a published statement, George Edwin Jepson of the Boston Custom House, writes to the Boston Herald saying:

"Hawthorne was not a weigher in the Boston Custom House in 1839-41, but a measurer, the two offices at that period being essentially distinct. Nor was he turned out of office by the Whigs in 1841, as you state, and undue odium is thereby cast upon that party. In the Boston Custom House archives is an official copy of a letter from Collector Bancroft, which notifies the Treasury Department at Washington that Nathaniel Hawthorne resigned his position Jan. 1, 1841. The Whigs did not assume power until the following March, and consequently could exert no pressure to force out a Democratic officeholder before that date.

"Hawthorne, in fact, had never been contented in official harness from the first. He felt out of place amid the associations of official life. When scarcely a year in place he writes thus in his private journal: 'I pray that in one year more I may find some way of escaping from this unblest custom house, for it is a very grievous thraldom.' And what he adds exhibits that he is laboring under a sense of suffocation from the vitiated official atmosphere which he was then breathing. 'One thing I have gained by my custom house experience—to know a politician. I want nothing to do with them. Their hearts wither away and die out of their bodies. Their consciences are turned to india rubber or to something as black as that and which will stretch as much. When I quit this earthly cavern where I am now buried' (his office was in the basement of the old Custom House in Custom House street, still standing there), 'men will not perceive, I trust, by my look or the tenor of my thoughts and feelings, that I have been a Custom House officer!' Elsewhere he refers to what he evidently looks upon as if it were an involuntary place of detention in these graphic words: 'My darksome dungeon . . . into which dismal region never comes any bird of paradise.' The official records cited are always available for public inspection."

MYSOPHOBIA THE LATEST.

What This Learned Term Means to the Great Majority.

The medical profession has conferred no small boon on many sufferers by inventing a Greek, or pseudo-Greek, term for their otherwise democratic complaints, says the London Graphic. The last of these inventions is recorded this week. The disease is fussiness, and the medical name is mysophobia. The mysophobe is he who, when seated by his table, lifts his glass to see if it is fingered, and if he detects a smudge uses his napkin to dispose of it. In short, mysophobia is the exaggeration of that respect for cleanliness which convinced Svengali of the madness of Englishmen when he surprised the Laird in his matutinal tub. The lady in the play who seized on everyone's watch chain and began rubbing it with chamois leather was a mysophobe, and the irritating man who begs your pardon and picks some microscopic piece of fluff from your sleeve is another. The servant who insists on dusting papers is another, and the disease is widely prevalent among all housekeepers in the spring. It is nice to know at last what to call it, but the medical press is more inclined to suggest scientific names than remedies.

GLASS YOU CANNOT BREAK

May Be Molded Into Any Form and Used as a Hammer.

Louis Kauffeld, a European glass worker, makes extraordinary claims for a new kind of glass he has just discovered. It is a glass of such nature that will not break, that can be molded into any desired form, that can be hammered without catastrophe—in short, a glass that will be as malleable as lead or any other metal. With an ordinary goblet made of his new material he can hammer a nail into a tough board. He can bore a hole in a glass pane, and then patch it with another piece of the same kind of glass. Coffee pots and tea kettles can be made of the new substance, and will no more crack, even under the most intense heat, than would steel.

While Kauffeld's process is unknown to anybody except himself he recently volunteered the information that the lime and lead that are used in the manufacture of ordinary glass do not enter into the composition of this. "The secret lies," he said, "in the chemicals that are used in making this glass and the proportions in which these chemicals are put into it."

It is the guilty man who is always afraid of his "shadow."

The Wealth of the Bonanza Kings.

Generally speaking, the wealth of "The Four Bonanza Kings" has been much exaggerated. Basing their belief on such movements in the stock market as that of 1874, and the $10 dividends they once received monthly, men have asserted that one or the other of the four was worth $150,000,000. But unless Mackay accumulated great wealth after he left the Comstock mine and the San Francisco stock market, and after his disastrous deal in wheat, not one of them was ever in possession of $25,000,000. But they came up to some such figure as that from nothing, and kept to the end a large part of what they made.

"And with it all, neither California nor Nevada can point to one great institution of art or education or charity and say: "That is an enduring monument to the Big Four."—E. H. Hamilton, in the Era.

Transformed.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt on one occasion took dinner on a British man-of-war, and, a storm coming up, was persuaded by the captain, a very small man, to occupy the latter's stateroom for the night. It had been the captain's custom, each morning, to take a cup of coffee at 6 o'clock, as an eye-opener. The steward was not notified of the arrangement made for Sir William's comfort, and, as usual, knocked at the captain's door at 6 in the morning. Receiving no reply, he pushed open the door, as had been his custom when the captain did not readily respond, and, as he entered, heard Sir William snore and turn over heavily in the berth. He dropped cup and saucer with a smash, and went tearing to the surgeon, to whom he exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, sir, come to the captain's room! He's speechless, and is swollen to ten times his natural size!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Cape and Tunic Effects Modish.

Little cape effects are the novel features of the latest walking suits. A mixed blue and black cloth has a gored skirt hung from a small yoke, and the seams trimmed with black and white braid. The jacket covers the hips, is half-fitted in the back and straight in front, where it is closed with passementerie ornaments. About the shoulders is a flat cape trimmed with braid and passementerie ornaments. The sleeves are slashed on the outside of the arm, to show a ruff of blue silk gathered into a narrow cuff of white linen embroidered in black cotton, and the turnover collar worn over a soft scarf of blue silk is to match.

In shape the tunic is probably the most novel feature of street costumes. It is used over skirts that trail a trifle and fits closely over them, fastening invisible on one side, sometimes under a cluster of up and down pleats or line of trimming. But the tunic, in most cases, is attached to the blouse under an inconspicuous belt, and the whole forms a coat worn over a silk or lace underblouse.—New York Tribune.

A Cure for Rheumatism.

Bridgeport, Wash., Oct. 20th.—Rheumatism and kidney trouble seem to be the prevailing ailments in this territory and particularly in Douglas county.

A remarkable and plainly sure cure has, however, recently been introduced.

It is called Dodd's Kidney Pills and although but a short time on the market, it has already worked many wonderful cures.

One of the most striking of these is that of Mr. John Higgins, who for a long time suffered with rheumatism and kidney trouble. The pains of these diseases had combined to make his life very miserable indeed, and he could get nothing to do him any good till he heard of this new remedy. He tells his experience with it in these words:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have done more for my rheumatism and kidney trouble than anything else I have ever used. There is more virtue in them than in any other medicine, and I will always recommend them to all of my friends highly.

Mr. C. F. Given, Sussex, N. B., Vice President of "The Pastime Boating Club," writes:

"Whenever the cold weather sets in I have for years past been very sure to catch a severe cold which was hard to throw off, and which would leave after-effects on my constitution the most of the winter.

"Last winter I was advised to try Peruna, and within five days the cold was broken up, and in five days more I was a well man. I recommended it to several of my friends and all speak the highest praise for it. There is nothing like Peruna for catarrhal afflictions. It is well nigh infallible as a cure, and I gladly endorse it."—C. F. Given.

A Prominent Singer Saved From Loss of Voice.

Mr. Julian Weisslitz, 175 Seneca street, Buffalo, N. Y., is corresponding secretary of The Sangerlust, of New York; is the leading second bass of the Sangerlust, the largest German singing society of New York and also the oldest.

In 1899 The Sangerlust celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a large celebration in New York City. The following is his testimony:

"About two years ago I caught a severe cold while traveling and which settled into catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and so affected my voice that I was obliged to cancel my engagements. In distress I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had never used a patent medicine before, I sent for a bottle.

"Words but illy describe my surprise to find that within a few days I was greatly relieved, and within three weeks I was entirely recovered. I am never without it now, and take an occasional dose when I feel run down."—Julian Weisslitz.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS,
By John W. Eastman.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

STEENERSON DATES.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson, Republican candidate for congressman, will address meetings in Red Lake county as follows:

Red Lake Falls, Friday evening, Oct. 31.

St. Hilaire, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 1.

Thief River Falls, Saturday evening, Nov. 1.

Mr. Steenerson especially desires the presence of laboring men and farmers as he has something of interest to say to them.

Vote the Republican county ticket. It is time to have a change in affairs of this county.

Give the Republicans a chance, and see if they cannot better conditions in Red Lake county.

Vote for J. J. Weeks for clerk of court and you wil vote for a good, capable and honest man.

The schools of Red Lake county will be in the care of a good man if James Wilson is elected. And he will be, too.

Thomas Crompe, the Republican candidate for register of deeds, is one of the most deserving men on the Republican county ticket. Vote for him.

Red Lake county has paid a Crookston surveyor nearly $5,000 in the past two years. Vote to elect W. C. Smiley and keep the money in Red Lake county.

The Republicans have nominated men because they were capable, and not because they were "good fellows"—although they are, Vote for them. It is time for a change.

Red Lake County has been run by one gang ever since it was organized. It has the highest rate of taxation of any county in the state and no permanent improvements. It is time to vote for a change.

Wilson, Weeks, McIntyre and Smiley, the four candidates on the Republican ticket in this city, are meeting with excellent success throughout the county, and we believe they will all be elected by large majorities.

Be sure and vote "yes" on all of the constitutional amendment, especially the one to increase the gross earning tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent. The corporations would like to see these amendments defeated.

There is not a more honest or fearless man in Red Lake county than Thomas Germo, the Republican candidate for county attorney. If he is not elected it will be simply because the voters of the county have not become acquainted with him.

After the meeting in the school house at Tweet Saturday evening, a prominent Populist of the town of Norden said to the News: "The candidates on the Republican county ticket are an exceptionally bright lot of young men, and I hope they will all win.

The voters of Red Lake county are going to employ an attorney for judge of probate, just the same as they would if they had business to transact before that court. That is one of the reasons why James McIntyre is going to be elected by a majority over both of his competitors.

The Democrats who have been making so much fun of the meetings the Republicans have been holding in the school houses of this county have now changed their minds, and have commenced holding meetings. Frank Jeffers, Frank Grady and H. W. Lee, are the three speakers turned loose.

The Red Lake Falls Courier says that Red Lake county voters should vote for Swanson for senator because he lives in this county, and in the next breath advocates the election of Krohn, a Beltrami county man, for representative, when there is a candidate for that office on the Republican ticket living in Red Lake county.

If Gov. Van Sant's majority is small it will be heralded as a victory for the merger. It will be claimed that the people of Minnesota are not opposed to the great railroad monopoly. If therefore, you stand with the Governor on that question vote for him, get your neighbors to vote and see that his majority is so large that there can be no question as to Minnesota's position on the question of mergers and trusts.

A few of the candidates on the People's Party ticket, it is said, have promised to announce themselves as Democrats as soon as election is over, and thus merge the Polulist party of this county into the Democratic party. It is no secret that some of the candidates on the People's Party ticket are openly advocating the election of a Democratic governor and congressman, while their own party has far more capable candidates for both offices.

Ed Evenson secured a judgment for 10 cents against the Great Northern railroad Tuesday, and if it is not paid inside of ten days he will take possession of the whole system. Mr. Evenson shipped a car load of second hand furiture from Minneapolis to this city, and thought that there was a charge of $47.69 too much and sued to recover that amount. The court held, however, that there was a charge of but 10 cents too much and entered judgment accordingly. The Great Northern was represented by A. C. Wilkinson, of Crookston, and Mr. Evenson by Perl W. Mabey.

J. E. Nash, the Socialist candidate for governor, addressed a political meeting in the city hall Tuesday evening.

Perl W. Mabey went down to Crookston yesterday.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. Otto Olson, Friday, Oct. 31.

P. O. Haggland, populist nominee for county surveyor, is candidate for re-election to the office which he has creditably filled ever since the organization of Red Lake County.

In 1899 he proved himself to be possessed of sufficient brains and backbone to start the first drainage ditch in Red Lake county. This ditch was pushed through to a successful finish and at considerable cost to Mr. Haggland, although he received no personal benefit and very little sympathy. This ditch proved to be a very good thing for the country, and today ditching is considered one of the greatest benefits to the county.

THE MERGER TRIAL

President Hill on the Witness Stand Tells of the Organization of the Great Northern and Its Agency in the Development of the Northwest—Reasons for the Purchase of the Burlington.

The suit brought by the United States government under the Sherman law to prevent the consolidation or so-called merger of the Great Northern with the Northern Pacific and Burlington systems has lead to the taking of a large amount of testimony. The taking of testimony began in New York some little time ago, and was continued in St. Paul this week before Frederick Ingersoll, the special examiner. J. J. Hill was the chief witness in St. Paul, and his testimony tells the whole story of the so-called merger in a more connected way than has heretofore been given to the public. As it required two days to complete it, it was very voluminous. We append a sufficient portion of the evidence to give a connected story of the transaction and the reason for making it.

Mr. Hill told in a general way of the building of a great railway system, of the development of the trade in the Orient, and of the coal situation of the country. Mr. Hill largely told his story in his own way, none of the learned counsel having disposition to throw out a hint that Mr. Hill might better tell it some other way.

He began by relating briefly the organization of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba road, and later its reorganization into the Great Northern road, and admitted without very much pressing that he had very largely determined the policy of the roads, especially the policy of extending the lines. This was, however, he explained, largely due to the fact that many of the other directors had been non-residents.

Built for Keeps.

Explaining how the Great Northern had been pushed through to the coast in 1893, Mr. Hill said that $800,000 had been expended for surveying alone, as he desired to be certain that he was building his road on the best possible locations. He dropped in a little side remark at this point by saying that while riding along the Pennsylvania system once he observed a portion of that system being built on the fourth right-of-way, and, he said, "I wanted to avoid all that sort of thing."

The traffic of the Western country consisted mostly of lumber, and it was essential for the Great Northern to handle this lumber if it was to do business at all. The rate at that time was 90 cents a hundred pounds which was prohibitive.

"I conferred with lumber manufacturers and they thought that if they had a rate of 65 cents they could send lumber East. I knew they couldn't do it with a rate higher than 50 cents, so we made it 40 cents, and the lumber trade began to develop rapidly.

"In order to make a low rate on Eastern lumber shipments it was essential to first have a Western movement of cars to prevent the necessity of bringing empty cars West to ship the lumber in. Within four years we had so developed this trade and trade with Alaska and the Eastern islands that we were enabled to secure Eastern goods for the markets of the Orient, and thus to keep a movement of cars which meant a shipment of lumber East again at a rate making the shipment possible and profitable.

"What steps did you take to secure transportation across the Pacific, and what relation did that have to your purchase of the Burlington road stock," asked Mr. Young.

"We found that the lumber supply of the United States east of the Rockies and north of the Ohio river was more and more dependent upon the Washington and Oregon forests, and that the time was rapidly approaching when the states which were furnishing lumber to the East would not have enough lumber for their own needs (Michigan, for instance, now consumes more than she can manufacture). I was especially interested in the lumber traffic, because if there was no lumber for us to carry from the West there was nothing at all for us to carry on our road. I saw that it was only a question of time when Washington and Oregon would supply all the lumber of the country. It is soon to be so. In order to have a low rate we must have a large tonnage, and have markets to which we could send anything made in the East, and thus have a continual Eastern traffic westward. I influenced the Japanese to purchase a trial lot of American rails instead of the Belgian and English rails, and later I induced them to buy American cotton, on a guarantee that if it was not satisfactory I would pay for it.

"The cotton trade has been growing very rapidly ever since. We chartered ships to take this cotton and these rails to Japan. We can make a rate to Hongkong which will enable the Minneapolis millers to ship their flour to China if they can get the Chinese trade."

Coal Supply.

Q. What advantage if any, did you expect to derive and have you derived from the Burlington purchase in regard to the supply of coal for the country traversed by your line?

Replying to the above question Mr. Hill thought that on the west end they had a local supply of coal and on the east end coal in the past has come from Pennsylvania and West Virginia and some from Ohio, but now it was apparent that they could no longer rely on the previous resources in the east, and it is consequently of vital interest to use the supply they can obtain not only for themselves but for the public as well from the Illinois coal fields. The grades of the Burlington road enabled them to carry an enormous tonnage and the public would soon be compelled to rely upon the bituminous coal supply instead of on the anthracite from the east. This coal is a necessity to the people of the northwest, which would have to abandon the country for five months in the year if they could not get coal at reasonable prices, and they cannot get it from the east at a reasonable price. He did not claim that this was due to the strike and the local situation this year, but this was the permanent situation the northwest had got to face, and in the future they could not bring coal from the western end of their line because the haul was too far to furnish it at moderate prices.

Ore Trade With St. Louis.

Within the last week we had advices of 75,000 or 100,000 tons of iron ore to go through the winter from the iron mines of Northern Minnesota to St. Louis to load the coal cars back. The fact that the coal has to come north or that there is coal to come north makes it possible to make a lower rate on the iron ore, and together the iron ore rates and the coal rate are both affected and are both reduced to the extent that we can load the cars both ways. This is a matter we have under consideration; this iron matter we have had under consideration maybe for a couple of months, but it has culminated within the last week. We hope that it will reach 300,000 tons before spring.

Q. In reference to shipments of cotton especially, and other articles, what disadvantage was there in its being carried over separate lines under a joint tariff which you did not have, where it is carried where both roads are under the same control, for instance, in the matter of breaking bulk or anything of that kind, shifting from cars?

A. Well, it is almost a necessity, if business is to be at all permanent, to be able to control a rate. The rates on the high seas vary according to the supply and demand for ships, and we, in order to take this business west must be in a position to compete to take the traffic, one day with another. It may be that another road—it may be the line between here and St. Louis, if the Burlington was not in a position to work with us and to continue to work with us, they might find some other connection that would give them a larger division than we could of the rate; they might find or feel that it was their interest to work with somebody else. Maybe they would give them some other business in lieu of this, and we would have to hire some other road to haul that business from St. Louis here, at the best rate we could get. We could not control it except through the option of some other road. Might at any time withdraw the rate; might at any time refuse to make a joint rate with us, except on terms that would be prohibitory. And in that way we could not go very far. We would not be in a position to compete for that business. We must either take that business to the coast—we must take all the westbound business we can get to the coast, or else we must advance the rate on the lumber. Now, outside of cotton, take nails, wire, articles of that kind, that business has grown to very large dimensions, but our rate is a very low one from Lake Erie to Hongkong; it is 45 cents a hundred, $9 a ton, on those commodities. A line reaching St. Louis and all the trunk lines of the East between St. Louis and Chicago puts us in a vastly different position; and that is the reason why it was of such importance for us to control the situation. We could not control it unless we could give a market for the production of the line—products raised along our road—whether it was out of the mine or from the farm or out of the forest. If the man who produced it could not sell it, he would stop producing. And that was the problem we had to meet, and with the Burlington we find ourselves able to meet it.

Oriental Trade.

Q. Mr. Hill, are you able to state the comparative growth of that Oriental traffic since its inception up to this time?

A. The growth has been very rapid. In some commodities more rapid than in others. Last year the increase was very large in cotton goods, both raw and manufactured, and in machinery and in some other commodities it fell off. The oil, I think, was considerably reduced. The Patoum oil, by some arrangement, has that market largely and we do not carry the oil we did.

Q. Taking the aggregate of the traffic, the total amount of it.

A. Well, I should say that in 1902—the year ending June 30, 1902—the business was more than twice as great as it was the previous year ending June, 1901. We were in better position to do the business.

Q. Can you give us the quantity of cotton, raw cotton or piece goods, that was carried in 1901 and 1902?

A. I can give it to you exactly by the Great Northern.

Q. Yes, by the Great Northern we are speaking of.

A. In 1901 the amount of cotton piece goods was 13,070 bales; 1902, 84,542 bales. Raw cotton in 1901 was 13,230,000 pounds, against 41,243,000 pounds the next year.

Continuing his testimony, Mr. Hill explained that they made their ships large for the purpose of reducing rates. They could carry a cargo equal to what five ordinary freight steamers could carry with only one crew instead of five crews. In all their movements there was no intention to hinder commerce, but to promote it, and it has greatly increased commerce between the United States and foreign nations. "These arrangements have only been perfected about a year and the business has more than doubled on the Great Northern road. He said he thought the total of tonnage of the Great Northern road will show the increase to be about 33 per cent, and the foreign business is increased over 100 per cent. "We have been able to reduce rates from 10 to 15 per cent in a year on the local business between the Pacific coast and the Twin Cities and Lake Superior," was his answer to the question as to what effect the increase of business had had in the reduction of rates.

Q. At the time of the purchase of the Burlington shares, was there any purpose or intention to restrain or hinder the traffic of the Burlington road itself, interstate traffic?

A. No, sir, none whatever.

Q. What has been the effect of that purchase upon the traffic of the Burlington road? Has it hindered it, restrained it, or has it increased it?

A. I think that the traffic of the Burlington road from Billings to the southwest has been very largely increased, and from here to the south the increase has been considerable.

Q. What is likely to be the future effect? Will it be to restrain or to enlarge the commerce of the road?

A. If the plan as contemplated is carried out, it should make a very large increase in the traffic. For instance, if the iron ore from Minnesota can find the furnaces in Missouri or Southern Illinois or down in that country where they get cheap coal, and bring back coal in the same cars, cars adapted for moving one moving both, that business alone should run very soon into millions of tons. That is one. I know of no place where the business would not be increased; I know of no place where it would not be increased and benefited. I can imagine none.

He further explained that the reason why they had not begun this earlier was because it was a very large undertaking for the Great Northern road alone, and that the Northern Pacific was just emerging from an embarrassment which made it inexpedient for it to join.

The question of a holding company was not part of the Burlington transaction. It was not discussed or thought of; neither was there any purpose at that time to secure control of the Northern Pacific stock.

He said one of the Great Northern directors raised the question that inasmuch as the purpose of the Burlington stock and the creation of a bond to pay for it involved the joint and several liability of the entire amount of the purchase, it was a matter of consequence to the Great Northern to know that the Northern Pacific would not pass into the hands of people who might be interested in other directions.

He did not think that any of the officers of the Northern Pacific company had anything to do with the organization of the Northern Securities company. The Northern Securities company simply bought the stock of the Northern Pacific from the pepole who owned it. The corporation did not own any stock that he was aware of and at any rate, it did not sell any stock to the Northern Securities company. His own sales and those of his immediate friends, the eleven parties he had named, were absolute without any condition or trust or implied agreement or anything else. There was no understanding as to how the Northern Securities company should vote the stock—no condition of any kind attached to the sale. The sale was not the result of any agreement with each other.

Replying to questions as to whether he, Hill, solicited parties to buy the stock of the Northern Securities company, Mr. Hill stated that replying to inquiries, he told them that it was a matter they must determine for themselves—and he had so many inquiries that finally he prepared a circular letter as an answer, in which he explained that the Northern Securities company did not operate and could not operate a railroad, but could only buy and sell shares of railroads, and the value of its stock depended upon the profit made by the railroads the stock of which the Northern Securities company might acquire.

He left each inquirer to act his own pleasure without giving advice.

The Second Day.

On the second day of Mr. Hill's testimony he was cross-examined by the attorneys for the government. It was developed by his testimony that Harriman, who represents the Union Pacific's interests, is the largest individual stockholder in the Northern Securities company. This came about by the large purchase of Northern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific made during the raid in May, 1901. In response to questions Mr. Hill said there was nothing to prevent Mr. Harriman from buying more stock of the Northern Securities company, if he was willing to pay the price asked for it by the owners. He might even buy enough to have control, but he, Hill, did not think the owners would be likely to sell it, and so that though he now has some eighty or ninety millions of the four hundred millions of stock, he did not consider it likely he would ever have control.

He explained that the organization of the Northern Securities company was to prevent any such raids as were made in 1901 and would make it very difficult even if not substantially impossible for any one person or syndicate to get control of the stock of the roads in the hands of the holding company. By having the ownership of the roads stable and not likely to be frequently changed, rates could be reduced. He thought that no more than 10 per cent of the business was competitive between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern roads; that is, interstate business.

Mr. Hill was examined at length regarding the Great Northern mileage. He explained that the Great Northern scarcely, absolutely owned any railroad mileage, but that it operated somewhere from five to six thousand miles of road under leases and that it also owned the large portion of the stock of the old Manitoba road and some other corporations.

He also testified relative to the reduction of rates made on the Great Northern since the purchase of the Burlington system. In response to the question who directed the reduction on the Great Northern, he said it was a matter of conference between the officers and himself. He said the reduction of rates on the Great Northern was not a new thing, but was quite frequent and had been for a number of years. He said the reduction amounted to 10 or 15 per cent. On grain it was 10 per cent. It was nearly that from all places on the Great Northern which were grain shipping points and some places more. He thought the reduction was substantially the same on the Northern Pacific, but was not absolutely informed on that point. He disclaimed having personally made the changes in the traffic rates of freight, but when they were a matter of great moment he had been consulted and advised in the matter. He did not think that the rates had been reduced on lumber, pig iron or coal since the purchase of the Burlington, because those rates were abnormally lower before and much lower than were charged by the Eastern roads.

The gross earnings of the Great Northern per ton per mile were stated to be .839 and the average of the railroads of the United States was .724. He thought that the Northern Pacific was higher, probably in the neighborhood of .900. On the Atchison it was .988. Mr. Hill said that the rates on the Atchison were higher than on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, and thought that if they charged the average rate of the Atchison it would increase their earnings $5,000,000.

Referring to the purchase of a large amount of coal land in Illinois, Mr. Hill said the Northern Securities company did not own this land at the time the present suit was begun. He made this explanation on the coal question

Coal Supply.

Witness: I do not want to be misunderstood, and from the questions I think I have been. The Great Northern Railway company and the Northern Pacific Railway company have an interest in this country and the people living here, and, inasmuch as our winters are cold, it would be difficult for them to live here without fuel, and it is a very serious matter—it is a very serious matter for the railways. We don't know now that we would be able to run our trains to the first day of February, with the lack of supply of coal, without bringing coal from Illinois, and we don't know but we would have to give up a portion of our supply of steam coal to keep people from freezing before spring—and it is not due by any means to the anthracite strike, and I tried to make it plain yesterday that it was not; but it is due to the inability of the railroads between Lake Erie and the mines in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio to move the coal. They are unable to move the coal up to Lake Erie ports, and we are unable to get a supply. At this time we have not been able to get one-half of our purchase for the year, and navigation will close some time next month. That is the importance of the control for us of access to the coal mines of Illinois, which are the nearest coal mines to this country, and the importance of that will be apparent more and more as time goes on.

Mr. Hill further testified that when the Union Pacific desired to get control of the Burlington road Mr. Harriman came to him while they were negotiating and wanted to take a half interest, but the proposition was declined. The purchase of the Northern Pacific by the Union Pacific, he said would have left the Great Northern in a helpless condition because the Great Northern was jointly and severally responsible for two hundred millions, that being the purchase price of the Burlington stock, and if the Northern Pacific owned a joint interest in the deal, they would be responsible for one-half of that amount, but if the Northern Pacific was in the hands of a rival transcontinental line with its interest in San Francisco and from Omaha through the Platte Valley to San Francisco they could influence the Burlington to help their Southern interests and would be in a position to prevent the building up or aiding the development of the Northwest that the Great Northern had worked so long and hard to establish.

The gist of Mr. Hill's testimony during the two days he was on the stand was that the organization of the Northern Securities company was in no sense a restriction to trade. That the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and Burlington were operated separately and independently. That there was no actual merger, but that their working together was of vital interest to the Northwest. That rates had been reduced as the result of this co-operation, and, could and would be still further reduced as tariff increases. That the whole proposition was within the law in every respect. That the purchase of the stock of the Northern Securities company was open to any one who had the money to pay for it and could agree with the owners as to the price. That there was no combination or agreement expressed or implied, but that the corporation was simply a holding company, really for the purpose of making the property it holds have greater stability and not likely to be purchased by parties to use to destroy other property; in fact, that the whole movement would prove most advantageous to the Northwest. Cost of the railroad and equipment having been incurred, the great increase of tonnage and business growing out of the Burlington purchase and protecting it against adverse interests would increase earnings, make lower rates possible and thus induce settlement of the country, and the building up of commercial manufacturing and agricultural interests.

Newspaper Men in Business.

The old idea that the newspaper man is unfitted for business is not confirmed by the facts. There are a large number of former newspaper men now holding high positions in Wall street. Among them is Joseph C. Hendrix, president of the Bank of Commerce, who was formerly a reporter on the Sun. James B. Dill, the corporation lawyer, who holds the record for the organization of new companies, was once a reporter on the Tribune. Daniel S. Lamont, vice president of the Northern Pacific railroad, was in the newspaper business before he became Grover Cleveland's secretary. Vice President Vanderlip of the National City was a few years ago financial editor of the Chicago Tribune. C. A. Conant, treasurer of the Morton Trust company, was a year ago Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce. C. S. Gleed, one of the directors of the Atchison system, had newspaper training. Col. George Harvey, formerly managing editor of the World, and now head of Harper's, has been closely identified with a number of Mr. Whitney's business enterprises. W. R. Corwine, formerly of the World, is trust officer of the Eastern Trust company. Mr. Steiner, one of the largest custom house brokers, was once connected with the Herald. Numerous other instances might be given of newspaper men who have made a success in business. The late Henry Villard was early in his career a Washington correspondent.—New York Letter to the Philadelphia Ledger.

Bending Bottles.

A glass that will not break, that can be molded into any desired form, that can be hammered without catastrophe—in short, a glass that will be as malleable as lead or any other metal is the extraordinary claim that Louis Kauffeld, glassworker, makes for a new kind of glass he has just discovered.

With an ordinary goblet made of the new material he can hammer a nail into a tough board. He can bore a hole into a glass pane, and then patch it with another piece of the same kind of glass. Coffee pots and teakettles can be made of the new substance, and will no more crack under the most intense heat than would steel.

While Kauffeld's process is unknown to anybody except himself, he recently volunteered the information that the lime and lead that are used in the manufacture of ordinary glass do not enter into the composition of this.

There are many legends concerning malleable glass. There is a story that a glassworker in ancient Venice centuries ago discovered the secret. He made glass bottles and jars that he could hammer into flattened strips without breaking them, and rolled the glass into balls, which he could throw against the walls of the town without injuring them.—Answers.

KEEP JOB AT HOME

WELSH MANUFACTURERS WILL LOSE STANDARD OIL ORDERS.

WORKMEN MAKE A CONCESSION

ENABLES AMERICAN TINPLATE COMPANY TO BID FOR THE WORK.

FAIR AGREEMENT IS REACHED

MEN WILL GET FULL WAGE AND GIVE 3 PER CENT REBATE.

Pittsburg, Oct. 26.—Officials of the American Tinplate company and a conference committee of the Amalgamated association held a long session yesterday afternoon after the tin-workers' convention had finally adjourned, and last night adopted an agreement that will allow the American Tinplate company to bid on the tinplate orders of the Standard Oil company that are now being supplied by the Welsh manufacturers. The workers offered a concession to the company and to all manufacturers of a 3 per cent reduction from their wages under the following terms:

That the men should be paid the full rate as at present; that the 3 per cent reduction shall be set aside by the company and placed in the hands of the treasurer of the Amalgamated association as a special fund; that out of this fund the Amalgamated association shall pay back to the American Tinplate company a sum equal to 25 per cent of the cost of the manufacture of all plates that are sold to the Standard Oil company or any other concern now using the rebate on Welsh tin when it is exported in made-up form.

Exceeds the Difference.

It is said that this agreement will provide for the contingency that has caused all efforts of the combine to get a lower wage rate from its men. The 3 per cent will be deducted from the wages of all men and all mills alike, and the total amount, it is estimated, will more than make up the 25 per cent difference required for the 1,500,000 boxes that the Standard Oil company will require at the lower price. The agreement will last as long as the present wage agreement of the workers is in force and will then have to be renewed. It will be extended to the manufacturers generally and is not to be confined to the American Tinplate company. It is claimed that the working of such an agreement will be fairer and will not require any one mill to take less wages than another, while it is working on rebate orders, as would be necessary under the original proposition of the manufacturers.

The agreement was signed last night and the officials of the American Tinplate company left for New York with a copy of it to present to the general officers.

DR. FORBES IN VALLEY CITY.

Suffering From Melancholia, Result of Worry Over Duties of Office.

St. Paul, Oct. 24. — Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district of the Methodist church, has resigned because of ill health, and is now with friends in Valley City, N. D. He resigned a week ago, but it was kept quiet because his friends hoped that his health would be recovered if he took a complete rest for a period. It is said that he is suffering from melancholia as a result of worry over duties of his office, but his friends are planning to give him an outing in the woods of Northern Minnesota, which they hope will give him his health again. His departure without notice led some of his friends to fear that he had disappeared, and a detective was sent to locate him.

LOEFFELMACHER TAKEN IN TOW

Sheriff Investigates the Dynamite Case Near West Newton.

New Ulm, Minn., Oct. 24. — Sheriff McMillan, after spending a couple of days in the vicinity of the scene of the dynamite scare near West Newton, has arrested John Loeffelmacher and taken him to the St. Peter jail. He is charged with attempting to blow up the threshing engine belonging to Mars and Vinegar with dynamite, which was discovered in time to prevent its explosion. The history of the trouble dates back five years, and many lawsuits have grown out of it. It was thought the climax was reached when John Loeffelmacher was arrested on the charge of sending obscene letters to Mars and Vinegar. Loeffelmacher was taken to the United States court at Mankato last spring, where he had his hearing, and was released on bail to have his trial at the November term.

BLOWN HIGH IN THE AIR.

Government Contractor Blown Skyward by Fifty Sticks of Dynamite.

Galesville, Wis., Oct. 24.—What little remained of Warren Shrake after being blown fifty feet into the air was buried at Trempealeau yesterday. Shrake was filling a government contract for stone and was killed by the accidental discharge of a blast. He had fifty sticks of dynamite in the hole and had just poured in nearly two kegs of powder. Grit in the powder or a spark from a stone caused an explosion. The charge was loose and the rocks were not split. The charge went straight up, carrying Shrake with it. His mangled body came down about twenty feet from the hole. The hands and arms were missing and only a part of the head remained.

"The Duties of the Dairy Press to the Buttermakers" was the subject of an address in the afternoon by J. H. Monrad, an editor from New York. An interesting address upon the dairy interests of the country was given by ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard, one of the prime movers in the promotion of the dairy interests of Wisconsin

By Fred M. White

CHAPTER LVI. (Continued.)

"Merritt, you are crushing the life out of me."

Merritt ceased his rocking for a moment, and the laughter died out of his gleaming eyes.

"I don't want to be prematoor," he said. "Yes, you'd make a lovely chaplain's pet, but I can't spare you. I'm going to smash that 'ere wily brain of yours, so as it won't be useful any more. I'll teach you to put the narks on to a poor chap like myself."

"Merritt, I swear to you that I never—"

"You can swear till you're black in the face, and you can keep on swearing till you're lily-white again, and then it won't be any good. You gave me away to Taylor because you were afraid I would do you harm at Littimer Castle. That Daisy Bell of a girl there told me so."

Henson groaned. It was not the least part of the humiliation that a mere girl got the better of him in this way. And what on earth had she known of Reuben Taylor? But the fact remained that she had known, and that she had warned Merritt of his danger. It was the one unpardonable crime in Henson's decalogue, the one thing Merritt could not forgive.

Henson's time was come. He did not need anyone to tell him that. Unless something in the nature of a miracle happened, he was a dead man in a few moments; and life had never seemed quite so sweet as it tasted at the present time.

"You gave me away for no reason at all," Merritt went on. I'm a pretty bad lot, but I never rounded on a pal yet, and never shall. More than one of them has served me bad, but I always let them go their own way, and I've been a good and faithful servant to you—"

"It was not you," Henson gurgled, "that I wrote that letter about, but—"

"Chuck it!" Merritt said, furiously. "Tell me any more of your lies and I'll smash your jaw in for you. It was me. I spotted Scotter in Moreton Wells within a day or two. And Mr. Scotter had come for me. And I got past Bronson in Brighton by the skin of my teeth. I turned into your lodgings under his very eyes almost. Before this time to-morrow I shall be arrested. But I'm going to have my vengeance first."

The last words came with intense deliberation. There was no mistaking their significance. Henson deemed it wise to try another tack.

"I was wrong," he said, humbly. "I am very, very sorry; I lost my nerve and got frightened, Merritt. But there is time yet. You always make more money with me than with anybody else. And I'm going abroad presently."

"Oh, you're going abroad, are you?" Merritt said, slowly. "Going to travel in a Pullman car and put up at all the courts of Europe? And I'm coming as chief secretary to the Grand Panjandrum himself? Sounds an alluring kind of program."

"I'll give you a hundred pounds to get away with it you will—"

"Got a hundred pounds of my own in my pocket at the present moment," was the unexpected reply. "As you gave me away, consequently, I gave you away to his lordship, and he planked down the hundred canaries, like the swell that he is. So I don't want your company or your money. And I'm going to finish you right away."

The big stone was poised over Henson's head. He could see the jagged part; and, in imagination, felt it go smashing into his brain. The time for action had come, he snatched at Merritt's right thumb and drew the knotted fingers down. The next instant and he had bitten Merritt's thumb to the bone. With a cry of rage and pain the stone was dropped. Henson snatched it up and fairly lifted Merritt off his chest with a blow under the chin.

Merritt rolled over on the grass, and Henson was on his feet in an instant. The great stone went down perilously near to Merritt's head. Still snarling and frothing from the pain, Merritt stumbled to his feet and dashed a blow blindly at the other.

In point of size and strength there was only one in it. Had Henson stood up to his opponent on equal terms, there could only have been one issue. But his nerves were shattered, and he was nothing like the man he had been two months ago. At the first onslaught he turned and fled towards the town, leaving Merritt standing there in blank amazement.

"Frightened of me," he muttered. "But this ain't the way it's going to finish."

He darted off in hot pursuit; he raced across a rising shoulder of the hill and cut off Henson's retreat. The latter turned and scurried back in the direction of Longdean Grange, with Merritt hot on his heels. He could not shake the latter off.

Merritt was plodding doggedly on, pretty sure of his game. He was as hard as nails, whereas, good living and a deal of drinking, quite in a gentlemanly way, had told heavily on Henson. Unless help came unexpectedly Henson was still in dire peril. There was just a chance that a villager might be about; but Longdean was more or less a primitive place, and most of the houses there had been in darkness for hours.

His foot slipped, he stumbled, and Merritt, with a whoop of triumph, was nearly upon him. But it was only a stagger, and he was soon going again. Still, Merritt was close behind: Henson could almost feel his hot breath on his neck. And, as he was breathing heavily and distressfully himself, he could hear how steadily Merritt's lungs were working. He could see the lights of Longdean Grange below him; but they seemed a long way off, while that steady pursuit behind had something relentless and nerve-destroying about it.

They were pounding through the village now. Henson gave vent to one cry of distress, but nothing came of it but the mocking echo of his own voice from a distant belt of trees. Merritt shot out a short, sneering laugh. He had not expected flagrant cowardice like this. He made a sudden spurt forward and caught Henson by the tail of the coat.

With a howl of fear, the latter tore himself away, and Merritt reeled backwards. He came down heavily over a big stone, and at the same moment Henson trod on a hedge stake. He grabbed it up and half-turned on his foe. But the sight of Merritt's grim face was too much for him, and he turned and resumed his flight once more.

He yelled again, as he reached the lodge gates, and the only response was the barking and howling of the dogs in the thick underwood beyond. There was no help for it. Doubtless the deaf old lodgekeeper had been in bed hours ago. Even the dogs were preferable to Merritt. Henson scrambled, headlong, over the wall and crashed through the thickets beyond.

Merritt pulled up, panting with his exertion.

"Gone to cover," he muttered. "I don't fancy I'll follow. The dogs in there might have a weakness for tearing my throat out, and Henson will keep. I'll just hang about here until daylight and wait for my gentleman. And I'll follow him to the end of the earth."

Meanwhile Henson blundered on, blindly, fully under the impression that Merritt was still upon his trail. One of the hounds, a puppy, three-parts grown, rose, and playfully pulled at his coat. It was sheer play, but at the same time it was a terrible handicap, and in his fear, Henson lost all horror of the dogs.

"Loose, you brute," he panted. "Let go, I say! Very well, take that!"

He paused and brought the heavy stake down full upon the dog's muzzle. There was a snarling scream of pain, and the big pup sprang for his assailant. An old grey hound came up, and seemed to take in the situation at a glance. With a deep growl, he bounded at Henson and caught him by the throat. Before the ponderous impact of that fine spring Henson went down heavily to the ground.

"Help!" he gurgled. "Help! help! help!"

The worrying teeth had been firmly fixed, the ponderous weight pressed all the breath from Henson's distressed lungs. He gurgled once again, gave a little shuddering sigh, and the world dwindled to a thick sheet of blinding darkness.

CHAPTER LVII.

Hide and Seek.

Bell's professional enthusiasm got the better of his curiosity for the moment. It was a nice psychological problem. Already Steel was impulsively busy in the conservatory pulling the pots down. It was a regretful thing to do, but everything had to be sacrificed. David shut his teeth grimly and proceeded with his task.

"What on earth are you doing?" Bell asked with a smile.

"Pulling the place to pieces," David responded. "I daresay I shall feel pretty sick about it later on; but the thing has to be done. Cut those wires, please, and let those creepers down as tenderly as possible. We can't get to the big pots until we have moved the little ones."

Bell coolly declined to do anything of the kind. He surveyed the two graceful banks of flowers there, the carefully-trained creepers, trailing so naturally and yet so artistically, from the roof to the ground, and the sight pleased him.

"My dear chap," he said, "I am not going to sit here and allow you to destroy the work of so many hours. There is not the slightest reason to disturb anything. Unless I am greatly mistaken, Van Sneck will lay his hand upon the ring for us without so much as the sacrifice of a blossom."

"I don't fancy so," Van Sneck replied. "I can't remember."

"Well, you are going to," Bell said, cheerfully. "Did you ever hear of artificial memory?"

"The sort of thing you get in law courts and political speeches?" David suggested. "All the same, if you have some patent way of getting at the facts, I shall only be too glad to spare my poor flowers. Their training has been a labor of love with me."

Bell smoked on, quietly for some time. He toyed with the red blossoms which had so stimulated Van Sneck's recollection, then tossed a spray over to Van Sneck and suggested that the latter should put it in his button-hole.

"So as to have the fragrance with you all the time," he said.

Van Sneck obeyed, quietly, remarking that the scent was very pungent. The Dutchman was restless and ill at ease; he seemed to be dissatisfied with himself—he had the air of a man who has set out with two or three extremely important matters of business, and who has completely forgotten what one of them is.

"You needn't distress yourself," David said, kindly.

"I beg your pardon," Bell said, tartly. "He is to do that very same thing. Mental exercise never hurts anybody. Van Sneck is going to worry until he puzzles it out. Will you describe the ring to us?"

The Dutchman complied at considerable length. He dwelt on the beauty of the workmanship and the exceeding fineness of the black pearls; he talked with the freedom and expression of the expert. Bell permitted him to ramble on about historic rings in general. But all the same he could see that Van Sneck was far from easy in his mind. Now and then a sudden gleam came into his eyes; memory played for the fragment of a second upon a certain elusive chord and was gone.

"Were you smoking the night you came here?" Bell asked, suddenly.

"Yes," Van Sneck replied, "a cigarette. Henson handed it over to me. I don't deny that I was terribly frightened. I smoked the cigarette out of bravado."

"You went into the conservatory yonder and admired the flowers," Bell observed.

Van Sneck looked up with astonishment and admiration.

"I did," he confessed. "But I don't see how you know that."

"I guessed it. It takes the brain some little time to get level to the imagination. And as soon as you came face to face with Henson you knew what was going to happen. You were a little dazed and frightened, and a little overcome by liquor into the bargain. But even then, though you were probably unconscious of it yourself, you were seeking some place to hide the ring."

"I rather believe I was," Van Sneck said, thoughtfully.

"You smoked a cigarette there. Where did you put the end?"

Van Sneck rose and went into the conservatory. He walked directly to a large pot of stephanotis in a distant corner, and picked the stump of a gold-tipped cigarette from thence.

"I dropped it in there," he said. "Strange; if you had asked me that question two minutes ago I should not have been able to answer it. And now I distinctly remember pitching it there and watching it scorch some of that beautiful, lace-like moss. There is a long trail of it hanging down behind. I recollect how funnily it occurred to me, even in the midst of my danger, that the trail would look better if brought over the front of the pot. Thus."

He lifted the long, graceful spiral and brought it forward. Steel nodded, approvingly.

"I came very near to dropping the ring in there," Van Sneck explained. "I had it in my fingers—took it for the purpose from my waistcoat pocket. Then I saw Henson's eye on me and I changed my mind. I wish I had been more sober."

Bell was examining a pot a little lower down. A piece had been chipped off, leaving a sharp, clean, red edge, with a tiny bit of hair upon it.

"You fell here!" he exclaimed. "Your head struck the pot. Here is a fragment of your hair upon it. It is human hair, beyond a doubt, and the shade matches to a nicety. After that—"

A sudden cry broke from the Dutchman.

"I've got it!" he exclaimed. "You have cleverly led my mind into the right direction. The only marvel is that I did not think of it before. You will find the ring in the pot where the tuberose grows. I am quite certain you will find it among the moss at the base."

David carefully scooped up all the loose moss from the pot and laid it on the study table. Then he shook the stuff out, and something glittering lay on the table—a heavy ring of the most exquisite and cunning workmanship, with a large gem in the center, flanked by black pearls on either side. Van Sneck took it in his fingers, lovingly.

"Here you are!" he said. "Ach, the beauty! Well, you've got it now, and do you take care of it, lest it fall into my hands again. If I got a chance I would steal it once more, and yet again and again. Ah, what mischief those things cause, to be sure!"

The speaker hardly knew how much mischief the ring in question had caused, nor did his companion seek to enlighten him. David wrapped it up carefully and placed it in his pocket.

"I'm glad that is settled," he said. "And I'm glad that I didn't have to injure my flowers. Bell, you really are a most wonderful fellow."

Bell smiled with the air of a man who is well satisfied with himself. At this time a servant came in with a message to the effect that Inspector Marley desired to see Mr. Steel on important business.

"Couldn't have come at a better time," David murmured. "Ask Mr. Marley in here."

Marley came smilingly, yet mysterious. He evinced no surprise at the sight of Van Sneck. He was, doubtless, aware of the success of the operation on the latter. He particularly desired to know where Mr. Reginald Henson was to be found.

"This is a queer place to look for him," said Steel.

"But he was here yesterday," Marley protested. "He had an accident."

"Bogus," said Steel. "We turned him out of the house. Is he wanted?"

Marley explained that he was wanted on three different charges; in fact, the inspector had the warrants in his pocket at the present moment.

"Well, it's only by good chance that you haven't got one for me," David laughed. "If you have ten minutes to spare, between Van Sneck and myself we can clear up the mystery of the diamond-mounted cigar-case for you."

Marley had the time to spare, and, indeed, he was keen enough to hear the solution of the mystery. A short explanation from David, followed by a few pithy, pertinent questions to Van Sneck, and he was perfectly satisfied.

"And yet I seemed to have an ideal case against you, Mr. Steel," he said. "Seems almost a pity to cut a career like Mr. Henson's short, does it not? Which reminds me that I am wasting time here. Any time you and Van Sneck happen to be passing the police station the cigar-case is entirely at your disposal."

And Marley bustled off upon the errand that meant so much for Reginald Henson. He was hardly out of the house before Ruth Gates arrived. She looked a little distressed; she could not stay for a moment, she declared. Her machine was outside, and she was riding over to Longdean without delay. A note had just been sent to her from Chris.

"My uncle is in Paris," she said, "so I am going over to Longdean for a few days. Lord Littimer is there, and Frank, also. The reconciliation is complete and absolute. Chris says the house is not the same now, and that she didn't imagine that it could be so cheerful. Reginald Henson—"

"My dear child, Henson is not there now."

"Well, he is. He went there last night, knowing that he was at his last gasp, with the idea of getting more money from Lady Littimer. To his great surprise he found Littimer there, also. It was anything but a pleasant interview for Mr. Henson, who was finally turned out of the house. It is supposed that he came back again, for they found him this morning in the grounds with one of the dogs upon him. He is most horribly hurt, and lies at the lodge in a critical condition. I promised Chris that I would bring a message to you from Lord Littimer. He wants you and Dr. Bell to come over this afternoon and stay to dinner."

"We'll come, with pleasure," David said. "I'll go anywhere to have the chance of a quiet hour with you, Ruth. So far, ours has been rather a prosaic wooing. And, besides, I shall want you to coach me up on my interview with your uncle. You have no idea how nervous I am. And at the last he might refuse to accept me for your husband."

Ruth looked fondly up into her lover's face.

"As if he could!" she said, indignantly. "As if any man could find fault with you!"

David drew the slender figure to his side and kissed the sweet, shy lips.

"When you are my wife," he said "and come to take a closer and tenderer interest in my welfare—"

"Could I take a deeper interest than I do now, David?"

"Well, perhaps not. But you will find that a good many people find fault with me. You have no idea what the critics say sometimes. They declare that I am an imposter, a copyist; they say that I am—"

"Let them say what they like," Ruth laughed. "That is mere jealousy, and anybody can criticise. To me you are the greatest novelist alive."

There was only one answer to this and Ruth broke away, declaring that she must go at once.

"But you will come this afternoon?" she said. "And you will make Lord Littimer like you. Some people say he is queer, but I call him an old darling."

"He will like me, he is bound to. I've got something, a present for him that will render him my slave for life Au revoir till this evening."

The dew was rising from the grass, the silence of the perfect morning was broken by the uneasy cries of the dogs. From their strange whimpering, Williams felt pretty sure that something was wrong. At most times he would have called the dogs to him and laid into them with a whip; for Williams knew no fear, and the hounds respected his firm yet kindly rule.

But Williams was in an exceptionally good temper this morning. Everything had turned out as he had hoped for and anticipated, and the literal kicking out of Henson the previous evening was still fresh and sweet in his memory. It would be something to boast of in his declining years.

"Drat the dogs!" he exclaimed. "Now, what's the matter? I had better go and see. Got a fox in a hole, haps. We shall have to tie 'em up in future."

Williams darted into the thicket. Then he came full upon Henson lying on his back, with his white, unconscious face and staring eyes turned to the sky, and two great dogs fussing uneasily about him. A big pup close by had a large swelling on her head. By Henson's side lay the ash stake he had picked up when pursued by Merritt.

Williams bent over the stark, still figure, and shuddered as he saw how his clothing was all torn away from the body; saw the deep wounds in the chest and throat; he could see that Henson still breathed. His loud shout for assistance brought Frank Littimer and the lodgekeeper to the spot. Together they carried the body to the lodge and sent for the doctor.

"The case is absolutely hopeless," Walker said, after he had made his examination. "The poor fellow may linger till the morning, but I doubt if he will recognize anybody again. Does anybody know how the thing came about?"

Nobody but Merritt could have thrown any light upon the mystery, and he was far away. Williams shook his head as he thought of his parting with Williams the previous night.

"I let him out and closed the gate behind him," he said. "He must have come back for something later on and gone for the dogs. He certainly hit one of the pups over the head with a stick, and that probably set the others on him. Nobody will ever know the rights of this business."

And nobody ever did, for Henson lingered on through the day and far into the night. At the house Lord Littimer was entertaining a party at dinner. Everything had been explained; the ring had been produced and generally admired. All was peace and happiness. They were all on the terrace in the darkness when Williams came up from the lodge.

"Is there any further news?" Lord Littimer asked.

"Yes, my lord," Williams replied "Dr. Walker has just come, and would like to see you at once. Mr. Reginald Henson died ten minutes ago."

A hush came over the hitherto noisy group. It was some time before Lord Littimer returned. He had only to confirm the news. Reginald Henson was dead; he had escaped justice, after all.

"Well, I'm not sorry," Lady Littimer said. "It is a rare disgrace saved to the family. And there has been trouble and sorrow enough and to spare."

"But your own good name, my dear?" Lord Littimer said. "And Frank's?"

"We can live all that down," my dear husband. Frank will be too happy with Chris to care what gossips say. And Dr. Bell and Enid will be as happy as the others."

"And Ruth and myself, too," David said, quietly. "Later on I shall tell in a book how three sirens got me into a perfect sea of mischief."

"What shall you call the book?" Littimer asked.

"What better title could I have," David said, "than The Crimson Blind?"

(The End.)

AGRICULTURE

Farms and Farm Products.

Census bulletin No. 237 treats of farms, acres, crops and values.

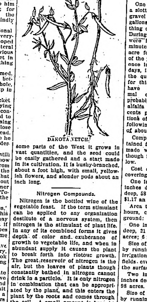
A farm, as defined by the twelfth census, includes all the land under one management used for raising crops and pasturing live stock, with the wood lots, swamps, meadows, etc., connected therewith. It also includes the house in which the farmer resides, and all other buildings used by him in connection with his farming operations.

The farms of the United States, June 1, 1900, numbered 5,739,657. These farms occupied 841,201,546 acres, 414,793,191 acres being improved and 426,408,355 acres unimproved. They were valued at $16,674,690,247. Machinery and farm implements were valued at $761,261,550, and live stock at $3,078,050,041. These values, added to that *of the farms, gives $20,514,001,*838 as the amount of capital invested in farms in this country.

The total value of farm products for the year 1899 was $4,739,118,753, of which amount $1,718,990,221, or 36.3 per cent, represents the value of animal products and $3,020,128,531, or 63.7 per cent, the value of crops, including forest products cut or produced on farms. The total value of farm products for 1899 exceeds that reported for 1889 by $2,279,011,298, or 93.6 per cent. This large increase is partly due to a more complete and detailed enumeration in 1900 than in 1890.

Dakota Vetch.

Herewith we illustrate Dakota Vetch (Lotus Americanus). This is a plant native to Dakota, Kansas, and other states of the Northwest. It is one of the valuable forage plants of the ranges. The United States Department of Agriculture has made a thorough investigation of this plant and recommends it for cultivation. In some parts of the West it grows in vast quantities, and the seed could be easily gathered and a start made in its cultivation. It is bushy-branched, about a foot high, with small, yellowish flowers, and slender pods about an inch long.



DAKOTA VETCH.

Nitrogen Compounds.

Nitrogen is the bottled wine of the vegetable feast. If the term stimulant can be applied to any organization destitute of a nervous system, then nitrogen is the stimulant of plant life. In any of its combined forms it gives depth of color and exuberance of growth to vegetable life, and when in abundant supply it causes the plant to break forth into riotous growth. The great reservoir of nitrogen is the air, but the leaves of plants though constantly bathed in nitrogen cannot drink in a particle. It is only nitrogen in combination that can be appropriated by the plant, and this enters the plant by the roots and comes through the soil. A small amount is brought to the soil by the rain, washing out the ammonia and nitrates of the air, but the amount is not large and entirely inadequate to supply a crop. A large amount of active nitrogen in the form of nitrates is yearly formed in every well cultivated field, and this is the cheapest way of securing a supply of this costliest element of plant growth. The raising of leguminous crops, like the clovers, is the next cheapest way of securing a supply. Combined nitrogen is purchased in three forms; salts of ammonia, nitrate of soda, and organic nitrogen in the form of dried blood, fish scraps, cotton seed meal, etc.—Bulletin 202, Michigan Station.

Some Potato Experiments.

At the Missouri Experiment Station experiments have been carried on to determine the relative value of seed potatoes raised in that locality and of seed potatoes brought from the North. In the agricultural museum, in tall glass jars, are shown the results. They represent three distinct sets of experiments with three varieties of potatoes. The results are quite uniform. In each case the yield from the Northern-grown tubers was double that of the yield from Southern-grown tubers. This seems to prove the case, but Prof. Waters thinks that it does not prove it, but that more experiments are necessary. It does, however, prove that with seed potatoes as ordinarily handled the Northern potatoes are far more valuable for planting in the South than are potatoes grown in the same latitude. The professor says that possibly the Northern-grown potato possesses more vitality than does the Southern-grown potato, even when the latter is produced and kept in the most ideal manner, but this remains to be demonstrated. He suggests that other factors than the vitality of the seed may be at the bottom of the wide difference in results. The Northern-grown seed has been matured more slowly and is kept in a lower temperature than is the Southern-grown seed. When spring comes it is taken out of its cold storage, of whatever kind, and is crisp and fresh. All its vigor has been kept over from the previous season, and it goes to work to send up stalks and form new tubers. On the other hand the Southern potato grows quickly and matures early in the season. It is taken out of the ground while the weather is still warm and is not put into cold storage. It begins to evaporate moisture and to lose vigor. By mid-winter it is sprouting, and when planted in the spring generally has had a number of sprouts removed. Missouri is too far north to permit of using the "second crop" potatoes, which are used for seed further south. It is suggested that by planting potatoes in Missouri much later than they do at present the crop might be brought to maturity just before frost, and these potatoes might be kept over in good condition till spring. At the present time the preponderance of testimony seems to be in favor of the Northern-grown seed. It would be an interesting experiment to have potato crops grown from both Northern-grown seed and seed from the "second crop" at the South. The South has never been able to grow white potatoes in large quantities. It may yet be found that the fault is in the condition of the seed. If either from better-kept Southern seed or from seed brought from the North, the South can double the yield per acre of its white potatoes, it may greatly stimulate the growing of this crop there.—Farmers' Review.

Irrigating With Steam Pumps.

Some very important experiments in irrigating by means of pumps have been recently made at the Arizona station. The water was pumped from a well six inches in diameter and 48 feet deep. A communication from the station says:

One six-inch well 48 feet deep, with a slotted strainer located in a 12-foot gravel stratum, furnished over 800 gallons of water per minute, or something over 6,400 cubic feet per hour. During this run 6 3-10 acres of alfalfa were irrigated in 23 hours and 45 minutes at a cost of about $1.30 an acre for fuel. Since at this season of the year alfalfa is usually irrigated once in from fourteen to twenty-one days, it is quite probable that twice the quantity of water was required for this irrigation that would have been required under normal conditions. Taking this as probably true, the cost of irrigating alfalfa would amount to about 65 cents per acre under normal conditions of dryness and frequency. The following figures are based on a cost of about $2.25 a cord for wood.

Computations from the data obtained from the tests that have been made will no doubt be of interest, though incomplete, and are given below.

Cost of fuel for irrigating alfalfa, covering the surface of the ground:

One inch deep, 19 1-2c per acre; 2 inches deep, 39c per acre; 3 inches deep, 58 1-2c per acre; 6 inches deep, $1.17 an acre.

Area that could be irrigated in 24 hours, covering the surface of the ground:

One inch deep, 42 acres; 2 inches deep, 21 acres; 3 inches deep, 14 acres; 6 inches deep, 7 acres.

Size of farm that could be irrigated by running 24 hours each day if an irrigation be given to the successive fields every fourteen days, covering the surface of the ground:

Two inches deep, 294 acres; 3 inches deep, 196 acres; 6 inches deep, 98 acres.

Size of farm that could be irrigated by running 10 hours each day if an irrigation be given to the successive fields every 14 days, covering the surface of the ground:

Two inches deep, 132 1-2 acres; 3 inches deep, 81 2-3 acres; 6 inches deep, 40 4-5 acres.—J. J. Vernon.

Potash Manure.

The best and cheapest is that neglected home product—wood ashes. These contain an average of five per cent of potash, besides a sensible amount of phosphate, and a very large amount of carbonates of lime and magnesia; they are an all-round plant manure so far as mineral matter is concerned, supplying each ash element. Unless the farmer can bring into active form the great store of potash in his soil, he will then have to buy the German potash salts, the muriate or sulphate. These salts are yearly coming into greater prominence as potash fertilizers, but their sale in Michigan in separate form has not been large. The influence of potash on plant life is masterful; no plant can grow without it, and its influence in developing the carbohydrates, and maturing fruits, is marked and apparently controlling.

It pays to keep the barns in good condition. A farm can be kept up only by constant attention. A little work must be done year by year.

LEADER OF WOMEN

MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON DIES AT HER HOME IN NEW YORK.

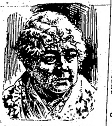
OLD AGE THE CAUSE OF DEATH

WELL KNOWN SUFFRAGIST WHO DEVOTED YEARS TO THE CAUSE.

SUCCUMBS TO A BRIEF ILLNESS

SHE CALLED FIRST WOMAN'S RIGHTS CONVENTION IN THIS COUNTRY.

New York, Oct. 28.—Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the well known woman suffragist, died yesterday at her home in West Ninety-fourth street, this city. Old age was given as the cause of death. She was conscious almost to the last. About a week ago Mrs. Stanton began to fail rapidly. This became more noticeable later in the week and then it was known to the family that her death was only a question of days or hours. The children with Mrs. Stanton when she died were Mrs. M. F. Lawrence and Mrs. Stanton Blatch of New York, Henry and Robert L. of New York, lawyers; Theodore, of Paris, and G. Smith, a real estate broker at Wardencliffe, Long Island. The funeral will be held on Wednesday, but the hour has not been set. The interment will be at Woodlawn cemetery.



Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

Mrs. Stanton was born at Johnstown, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1815. Her father was Justice Daniel Cady of the New York supreme court, and her mother was Margaret Livingston, a daughter of Col. James Livingston of Washington's staff. She was educated at Johnstown academy and at Miss Emma Willard's school in Troy, where she was graduated in 1832.

For half a century Mrs. Stanton has labored unceasingly for women's suffrage and equal rights. To her belongs the honor of having called the first woman's rights convention in the United States, and the still greater honor of having formulated the principles which for nearly fifty years have guided this great movement for the advancement of women. Mrs. Stanton was self-reliant as a child and received an excellent education. She was married in 1840, and though she has led a rather public life, has always been a true home-loving woman. At one time Mrs. Stanton spoke two hours before the legislature of New York on the married woman's property bill, which afterward became a law. She has never relaxed her zeal in the cause to which she was devoted.

WOMAN CAPTURES A THIEF.

Mrs. Timothy L. Woodruff Saves Parcel of Jewelry.

New York, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Timothy L. Woodruff, wife of the lieutenant governor of New York, was robbed of $330 worth of jewelry while out shopping recently and recovered the package, which she had just purchased, after an exciting chase in the shopping district. Mrs. Woodruff drove in her Victoria to a Broadway jeweler's and purchased a gold bracelet in which a watch was set and a diamond pendant, and then drove to a department store, where she alighted to do some shopping, leaving the box containing the jewelry on the seat of the open carriage. The package was immediately snatched by a thief who was loafing on the sidewalk. He fled, but was pursued by Mrs. Woodruff and her coachman. He was caught and forced to return the jewelry, after which Mrs. Woodruff preferred charges against him at the police station.

THIEVES GET DIAMONDS.

$8,000 Worth Taken From Vaults of a Jewelry Firm.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Diamonds valued at $8,000 were stolen from the vaults of the jewelry firm of Wecher & Weineman some time during Saturday night or early yesterday. There is no clue to the robbers. The store is located in the Masonic Temple, where a watchman is on duty all night, but he claims to have seen no trace of the robbers. The robbery was discovered late last night by a member of the firm who visited the store by chance.

BY SPLENDID BRAVERY

White Officers Save Troops From Terrible Disaster.

Aden, Arabia, Oct. 28—Details of the fighting in Somaliland Oct. 6 between the British expeditionary force and the followers of the Mad Mullah show that a more serious disaster was only averted by the splendid example of the few white officers. As it was the British force lost a Maxim gun and 70 men killed, while 62 of their enemies (dead) were counted close to the firing line.

SENATOR IVES PASSES AWAY.

Death Follows Soon After Apoplectic Stroke.

St. Paul, Oct. 28.—John Harris Ives, Democratic state senator from the Thirty-fifth district, embracing the Fifth and Sixth wards, and candidate to succeed himself, died at 5 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 275 Harrison avenue, as the result of a paralytic stroke. He was stricken Thursday afternoon near the postoffice, and after receiving medical attention he was taken to his home. He was conscious at that time and assured the members of his family that the trouble would soon pass away. He lapsed into unconsciousness at 9:30 o'clock Thursday evening and sank slowly until his death.

BURGLARS START BIG FIRE.

Minot Suffers the Worst Blaze It Has Had for Years.

Minot, N. D., Oct. 28.—Early Saturday morning burglars entered the office of the Kulaas Lumber company on First street and blew open the safe, secured the contents, set the building on fire and made good their escape. The fire was the worst this city has had for years, and the loss is estimated at $20,000. A light wind from the west gave the flames a good start toward the east and the whole block was consumed. The city is without fire protection. The city water works were practically useless. The Daily and Weekly Optic plant was burned. The only fire-fighting done was by a bucket brigade. The Optic plant is in total ruins. A heavy rain kept the fire from spreading more.

MRS. LUDINGTON WINS.

Will Secure One-Third of the Estate of Millionaire Husband.

Milwaukee, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Emeline Ludington won a complete victory in Judge Ludwig's court, when a decision was handed down denying Executor James E. Patton of the will of ex-Gov. Harrison Ludington the right to recover the one-third of the estate recently set over to her by the court. Mrs. Ludington had previously accepted a private settlement as her share of the estate, but later claimed she did not know the real value of the estate and preferred her dower right; which by the decision she will receive. Gov. Ludington was a millionaire at the time of his death.

COONS IN THE LURCH.

City Treasurer Arrested on Showing Made by Expert Accountant.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 28.—A. L. Coons, city treasurer of East Grand Forks, was arrested on complaint of the auditing committee of the city council. The complaint charged him with being a defaulter. The shortage alleged is $4,300. The checking of the books by the bonding company expert is completed, and his footing shows a discrepancy of that sum. Coons was immediately arrested, and his bail was fixed at $3,000. This was not obtained, and Coons is in the custody of the chief of police.

Too Many Outlets.

Tyndall, S. D., Oct. 28.— When the new city artesian well started to flow the pressure of John Bouza's well went down five pounds at the Tyndall flouring mills. The artesian basin has been tapped in so many places that the flow is being lessened. These two wells are about one-half mile apart. The well drillers have shipped their apparatus to Wagner, where they will put down a well, and later they will go to Springfield.

Dying in Chicago.

Lead, S. D., Oct. 28. — Walter E. Smead, purchasing agent for the Homestake Mining company and next to Supt. Grier in local authority, is at the point of death in Chicago, and has summoned R. H. Driscoll, cashier of the First National Bank of Lead, to bring his two sons and consult with him on important business matters before his death. Mr. Smead is manager of the Smead hotel. A third son is at Annapolis naval academy.

Seven Cars Ditched.

Spring Valley, Minn., Oct. 28.—An east-bound extra freight, John Samaby, conductor, was ditched five miles east of here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Seven cars left the track and were piled up in a heap, delaying traffic several hours. No one was hurt. The accident was caused by a broken flange.

Iron Mine Lease.

Duluth, Oct. 28.—The Eastern Minnesota has an option to purchase the lease of the Messaba Chief mine, situated west of the Stevenson. The old explorations showed up a big deposit of low-grade ore, and present explorations, which extend below the taconite, reveal a deposit of much better ore.

Mysterious Poisoning.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 28.—A. G. Parker and C. A. Woolley, employed at the Milwaukee depot, were taken ill with poisoning. Their condition was quite serious for some hours, but careful attention carried them through the crisis. There is absolutely no clue to the poisoning.

Killed by Fall From Train.

Ames, Iowa, Oct. 28.—P. I. Kimberly of West Liberty, a student in the Iowa State Agricultural college at this place, has been killed by falling from a Northwestern train while stealing a ride from the city to the college grounds.

South Dakota Pioneer Dead.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 28.—Mrs. H. A. Van Demark, one of the pioneers of Minnehaha county and South Dakota, died at her home at East Sioux Falls. She was ninety years of age. She came here in the early seventies.

Severe Storm at Stanley.

Stanley, Wis., Oct. 28. — A severe electric storm passed over Stanley last night at midnight, the lightning playing havoc with many electric lighted residences, several of them being damaged by fire from the wiring.

Demolished by Lightning.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Oct. 28.—Lightning struck the big barn at the soldiers' home, completely destroying it. Twenty tons of hay burned but the horses were saved. The loss is about $5,000; no insurance

WHIP THE MOROS

GEN. SUMNER IS PREPARING HIS PLANS FOR AN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN.

EXPECTS SOME LIVELY OPPOSITION

REBELLIOUS SULTAN OF BACOLOD WILL FIRST RECEIVE ATTENTION.

TRADE PROSPECTS ARE GLOOMY

WRETCHED AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS CAUSE SOME WORRY.

Manila, Oct. 28.—Gen. Sumner has returned to Camp Vicars, Island of Mindanao, where he is preparing for the campaign against the rebellious sultan of Bacolod. He anticipates a lively opposition. He will carry on the campaign on lines similar to those of the operations against the Maciu Moros, using his artillery whenever possible and saving his infantry. The Moros in the vicinity of Lake Lanao now express friendship for the Americans, and are offering to work on the military roads that Gen. Sumner is constructing. The constabulary, under the leadership of an army signal man, during the absence of the inspector, discovered a plot and raided the headquarters of the Katipunan, killing the so-called general and colonel and capturing a captain. All the records of the society and lists of the members in the province of Pampanga, Batan and Bolocan were seized.

Cholera Gains Strong Foothold.

The cholera is gaining a strong foothold on the Island of Mindanao. It is expected to spread there, as it has elsewhere in the islands. The disease continues to be bad in the province of Iloilo, Island of Panay, but it is light elsewhere. It has disappeared from Manila. The cases reported up to date exceed 100,000.

Agriculture in the islands, already impaired on account of the war, rinderpest and the cholera, has been further injured by locusts. These insects have appeared in many places and are working serious injury to the crops. The advent of locusts, together with the fall in the price of silver, renders the business and industrial prospect in the Philippines gloomy.

The Chinese now control the rice situation and are smashing the English and Spanish pool with the aid of China guilds. The wretched agricultural conditions are causeing for next year. The Philippine commission has decided to devote the sum of $66,000, the profit of the government sales of rice under Gen. Bell's administration, including the profits derived from the concentration villages in Batangas, La Guna and Mindoro, to the purchase of food to be distributed to the poor through the agency of the civil officials in the provinces mentioned. The general suffering among the natives is the natural result of the war and pestilence. Permanent relief cannot be expected until 1904, when it is thought agriculture will revive. Gen. Bell, with the aid of the chief of the agricultural bureau, has secured an appropriation for the purchase of seeds and machinery, and is taking great pains to instruct the natives in American methods of farming. His soldiers have discarded their guns for plows.

WHAT A CHILD IS WORTH.

Iowa Court Says Three Thousand Dollars Is the Limit.

Des Moines, Oct. 28.—In a case from Webster county the supreme court decided that in this state the recovery of damages for the loss of life of a child under five years of age cannot exceed $3,000. In the original trial of the case before Judge S. M. Weaver, who is now a member of the supreme bench, the jury returned a verdict of $8,000. This, Judge Weaver cut to $6,000. The supreme court reversed the judgment, stating that the damages to the parents from the loss of the child could not exceed $3,000. Mrs. A. W. Hively of Webster county is the loser. The suit was against the county.

BAD FOR COLFAX.

Mill Containing Electric Light Plant Is Destroyed.

Menomonie, Wis., Oct. 28.—The flour and feed mill at Colfax, this county, owned by James Anderson, was burned Saturday night, also the office and warehouse. The mill was a large structure recently built and the electric light plant of the village was installed in it. The long distance telephone was also in the office and the warehouse contained much stock. The loss is about $25,000; partly insured.

WRECK ON NORTHERN PACIFIC.

Light Engine Collides With Double-Headed Freight Train.

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 28.—As a result of a collision on the Northern Pacific between a light engine eastbound, crashing into a double-headed freight train a few miles west of Hope, Idaho, P. Sayers of this city and Engineer A. L. Bussey of this city were severely injured and the three engines badly wrecked.

TRAINMEN CENSURED.

Cause of Recent Fatal Wreck in Montana.

Billings, Mont., Oct. 28.—The coroner's jury that investigated the recent wreck at Rapids, Mont., in which two persons were killed and a number were injured, have found that the crew of the east-bound Northern Pacific train were running on the time of the Burlington train. The Northern Pacific dispatcher also was censured for orders he had given the trains as to their passing place.

Proposed Amendments

—TO THE—

Constitution of Minnesota

Hon. Peter E. Hanson, Secretary of State—Sir:

Pursuant to Chapter 157 of the General Laws of 1887, I herewith file in your office synopses of Amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota as proposed by the General Laws of the State of Minnesota enacted at the General Session of the Legislature in 1901 and the Extra Session in 1902, as well as a synopsis of Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, being an Act involving the taxation of railroad property, to be submitted to the electors of the State for adoption or rejection at the next General Election.

Yours respectfully,
W. B. DOUGLAS,
Attorney General.

SYNOPSES OF AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE SAID STATE AT THE GENERAL SESSION IN 1901 AND THE EXTRA SESSION IN 1902, AS WELL AS A SYONPSIS OF CHAPTER 150 OF THE GENERAL LAWS OF 1901, PROPOSING AN INCREASE OF THE GROSS EARNINGS TAX UPON RAILROAD PROPERTIES.

I.

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 32a, of Article IV of the State Constitution, the Legislature by Act approved April 6, 1901, known as Chapter 150 of the General Laws of 1901, present to the electors of the State for rejection or approval, the following, to wit:

Section 1. That every railway company owning or operating any line of railway situated within, or partly within, this state shall, during the year 1903, and annually thereafter, pay into the treasury of this state, as taxes upon all property within this state owned or operated for railway purposes by such company, including equipment, appurtenances, appendages and franchises thereof, a sum of money equal to four (4) per cent of the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state; and the payment of such taxes shall be in full and in lieu of all other taxes upon the property and franchises so taxed. The lands acquired by public grant shall be and remain exempt from taxation until sold or contracted to be sold or conveyed as provided in the respective acts whereby such grants were made or recognized.

Sec. 2. The term "the gross earnings derived from the operation of such line of railway within this state," as used in section one (1) of this act, is hereby declared and shall be construed to mean all earnings on business beginning and ending within the state, and a proportion of earnings on all interstate business passing through, into or out of the state as the mileage operated within the state bears to the entire mileage operated by such company.

Sec. 3. All acts and parts of acts not inconsistent herewith regulating the payment, collection, time of payment, enforcement, or reports involving the amount of taxes upon the gross earnings of railroad companies within this state, or providing penalties for the non-payment of such taxes, are hereby made applicable to this act so far as may be; and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. Upon failure to pay the amount of such taxes legally due upon the dates heretofore provided by law for the payment thereof, in addition to existing remedies, collection may be enforced in a civil action brought in the name of the State of Minnesota in the district court of any county.

Sec. 5. This act shall be submitted to the people of this state for their approval or rejection at the next general election for the year 1902.

(The omitted provision refers to the method of printing the ballot and submitting the act for ratification.)

This act provides for an increase of the amount of taxes collected by the State upon the property of the railroads situated within the State, from three per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway within the State, to a sum of money equal to four per cent upon the gross earnings derived from the operation of such lines of railway therein.

Under the terms of the Constitution above referred to, this Act of the Legislature must be submitted to legal voters of the State, and will become operative if adopted by a majority of such electors voting at the next general election.

II.

By an Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved February 28, 1901, and known as House File No. 100, it is proposed to amend Article Eight (8), Section Six (6) of the Constitution.

This Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this State may be invested in the purchase of bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this State, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this State; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the issue of which the same in part would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed seven per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or indebtedness be made at a lower rate of interest than three per cent per annum nor for a shorter period than five (5) years nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the town, school district, village, city or county lines shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city, in this state at the time of issuing of such bonds from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

It is proposed by said act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 6. The permanent school and university fund of this State may be invested in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town or village of this state, but no such investment shall be made until approved by the board of commissioners designated by law to regulate the investment of the permanent school fund and the permanent university fund of this state; nor shall such loan or investment be made when the bonds to be issued or purchased would make the entire bonded indebtedness exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property of the county, school district, city, town or village issuing such bonds; nor shall such loans or indebtedness be made at a lower rate of interest than three (3) per cent per annum, nor for a shorter period than five (5) years, nor for a longer period than twenty (20) years, and no change of the town, school district, city, or of county lines, shall relieve the real property in such town, school district, county, village or city in this state at the time of the issuing of such bonds from any liability for taxation to pay such bonds.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the investment of the permanent school and university fund of this state for a period of not less than five (5) or more than twenty (20) years, at an interest rate not less than three (3) per cent per annum, in the bonds of any county, school district, city, town, or village of this state, when the bonds to be issued or purchased will not make the entire bonded indebtedness of such municipalities exceed fifteen (15) per cent. of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property contained therein.

The substantial change proposed by said amendment is to authorize such investments when the entire indebtedness, including the loan in question, does not exceed fifteen (15) per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property in such municipalities; whereas, under the existing Constitution loans are permitted only where such total indebtedness does not exceed seven (7) per cent of the assessed valuation.

III.

By An Act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota Approved April 13, 1901, and known as House File No. 353, it is proposed to Amend Section Sixteen (16) of Article Nine (9) of the Constitution.

The Section as now existing reads as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "state road and bridge fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-twentieth (1-20) of one (1) mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The legislature is also authorized to provide for the appointment by the governor of the state of a board to be known as the "state highway commission," consisting of three (3) members, who shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by law, without salary or compensation other than personal expenses.

Such commission shall have general superintendence of the construction of state roads and bridges and shall use such fund in the construction thereof and distribute the same in the several counties in the state upon an equitable basis. Provided, further, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that no more than one-third (1-3) of such fund accruing in any year shall be expended for bridges, and in no case shall more than one-third (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund.

It is proposed by said Act to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the "State Road and Bridge Fund." Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the interest derived from the investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund however provided.

The legislature is authorized to add to such fund for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of the state, and providing in its discretion for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any one year one-tenth (1-10) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

The existing Constitution authorizes legislation providing for a levy of a state tax of 1-20 of one mill for the purpose of building roads and bridges, and provides for its use under the direction of a State Highway Commission in such counties as shall contribute at least double the amount of the State moneys expended by said Commission for such purpose, subject also to certain other limitations.

By the proposed change, a tax of 1-10 of one mill is authorized to be levied for this purpose; the Highway Commission is abolished, and the result, if the proposed amendment is adopted, will be to place the distribution of such funds in the hands of the Legislature, without limitation or restriction.

IV.

By an act of the legislature of the State of Minnesota, known as chapter one (1) of the Laws of the Extra Session of 1902, it is proposed to amend sections one (1), two (2) and three (3) of article nine (9) of the constitution.

The sections as now existing read as follows:

"Section 1. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation, and be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided, that the legislature may, by general law or special act, authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon the property to be benefited by such improvements, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, and in such manner as the legislature may prescribe; and provided, further, that for the purpose of defraying the expenses of laying water pipes and supplying any city or municipality with water, the legislature may, by general or special law, authorize any such city or municipality, having a population of five thousand or more, to levy an annual tax or assessment upon the lineal foot of all lands fronting on any water main or water pipes laid by such city or municipality within corporate limits of said city, for supplying water to the citizens thereof, without regard to the cash value of such property, and to empower such city to collect any such tax assessments, or fines, or penalties for failure to pay the same, or any fine or penalty for any violation of the rules of such city or municipality in regard to the use of water, or for any water rate due for the same.

And provided further, that there may be by law levied and collected a tax upon all inheritances, devises, bequests, legacies and gifts of every kind and description above a fixed and specified sum, of any and all natural persons and corporations. Such tax above such exempted sum may be uniform, or it may be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum tax of five per cent.

Sec. 2. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated (ordinary) expenses of the state for each year; and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses of the state for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year, the legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency of the preceding year, together with the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 3. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money; but public burying grounds, public schoolhouses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property used for religious purposes, and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property to an amount not exceeding in value two hundred dollars for each individual, shall, by general laws, be exempt from taxation.

It is proposed by said chapter to amend the same so as to read as follows:

Section 1. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated ordinary expenses of the state for each year, and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year the legislature shall at its next general session provide for levying a tax sufficient to pay such deficiency. And whenever the income of the state from other sources shall be sufficient to defray all of its ordinary expenses without the levy of any annual state tax, such tax levy shall be omitted. All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be and shall be levied and collected for public purposes only; and all property on which taxes are to be levied, except as herein otherwise provided, shall have a cash valuation, and shall be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided that whenever the levy of a tax for state purposes is omitted as above provided, the taxes levied for local purposes shall be upon a valuation of the property within the several counties and the subdivisions thereof, which shall be equalized and uniform throughout each county. The legislature may by general or special law authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon property benefited thereby, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe. There may be levied and collected an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on the real property and other personal property of the person or corporation holding such franchise; or in lieu of a tax on such franchise alone, or in lieu of a tax on such franchise and the personal property used in connection with the exercise of the same, there may be imposed such tax upon the gross earnings of the person or corporation holding such franchise as the legislature may determine; and said tax shall be apportioned between the state, counties and municipalities where such franchise is exercised, in the same manner as real estate taxes are apportioned. There may be levied and collected a transfer tax not to exceed 5 per centum upon the estates of decedents, above a fixed and specified sum, which tax may be uniform or graded or progressive. There may be levied and collected a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages which shall be in lieu of all other taxes on the debt secured by such mortgages; and a tax upon the income from all credits owned by persons or corporations, as such credits are now or may be hereafter defined by law, and also on the income arising from all personal property, and also upon the income of all persons or corporations above the sum of $1,000 per annum, not arising from such credits or from such personal property, or from property otherwise taxed in this state. Such income tax shall be uniform throughout the state, and may be graded or progressive or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed 10 per centum upon the income from such credits, and upon the income from personal property, and at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum upon such other income. Laws shall be passed taxing all real and personal property; provided that credits and personal property shall not be subject to other taxation than the income or registry tax herein authorized, while the law imposing such income or registry tax shall be in force; provided, public burying grounds, public schools, public hospitals, public library associations, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches and church property used exclusively for religious purposes, and institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for public purposes, and personal property to an amount not exceeding $300 to each individual shall be exempt from taxation, but such personal exemption shall not be allowed to more than one member of the same family. Provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

The effect of the above amendment, if adopted, will be to amend the existing Constitution, as follows:

1st. To prohibit the legislature from surrendering or contracting away the power of taxation.

2nd. To provide that whenever the income of the State derived other than from direct taxation upon real and personal property shall be sufficient to defray all the expenses of the State, and the direct tax levied for such purpose is omitted, taxes for local purposes shall be levied upon the taxable property of the county, which shall be equal and uniform throughout the county as distinguished from being equal and uniform throughout the State.

3rd. To authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements under and pursuant to special, as distinguished from general, laws.

4th. The Legislature is authorized to provide for the levy and collection of an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on real and personal property of the person or corporation holding the same.

5th. The Legislature is authorized to provide a tax upon the gross earnings of any person or corporation holding such a franchise, conditioned that such gross earnings tax may be in lieu of a tax upon the franchise or upon the franchise and personal property as well.

6th. Authority is conferred upon the Legislature to provide for the levy and collection of a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages which shall be in lieu of all other tax on the debt secured by such mortgage.

7th. The Legislature is authorized to provide for a tax upon incomes in excess of $1,000 per annum, not arising from credits or personal property or from property otherwise taxed in this State, and also a tax upon the income derived from credits as well as from personal property. Such tax shall be uniform throughout the State and may be graded, or progressive, or both, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed ten percentum upon incomes derived from credits and personal property, and at a rate not exceeding four per cent per annum upon such other income. In case of the imposition of the registry tax above referred to, or of an income tax arising from credits or personal property, all credits and personal property owned by the party against whom such registry or income tax is imposed is exempted from all taxation while the law imposing such income or registry tax is in force.

In other words, where an income tax upon salaries or earnings of individuals is provided for, all personal property and credits must still be subjected to taxation, while in case of the imposition of an income tax arising from credits and personal property or of a registry tax such credits and personal property are exempted from taxation.

8th. The Legislature is authorized to exempt personal property of each individual to the extent of $300, provided the same shall not apply or be allowed to more than one member of the same family.

9th. Other provisions of the existing constitution involving the subject of taxation are preserved and continued in force.

W. B. DOUGLAS,
Attorney General.

A Costly Cabin.

On Warren's island, off the coast of Maine, is being erected what is properly described as "a palatial log cabin." It is composed of spruce logs, and costs the tidy little sum of $75,000. The entire island on which this summer palace is erected was purchased by the late William H. Folwell of Philadelphia. Mr. Folwell died before the completion of the house. The work is now superintended by his son, William H. Folwell, Jr. Some idea of the size of the "cabin" may be gained from consideration of the fact that there are twenty-two sleeping rooms on the second floor. On the ground floor there is a fireplace of brick and granite, the mantelpieces being of marble, twelve feet in length, three in width and nine inches thick, the whole piece of work weighing some forty tons.—New York Tribune.

A Kansas mule balked the other day, and thereby contributed to the fund of real life romance. How? Well, the long eared quadruped was being driven by an angry father in chase of his eloping daughter and the mule stopped to think it over long enough to let the anxious couple have the knot tied.

He—How charmingly you sing. She—Do you really think so? He—Oh, yes, indeed. I never listen to you without wishing you were where my folks in Colorado could hear you.—Chicago American.

VAN SANT WINS WORLD-WIDE FAME

Valiant Fight for the Rights of the People Makes His Name a Household Word Throughout the Whole Nation.

Fearlessly Braves Bitter Opposition of Great Railroad Combine That Is Now Doing All Money Can Do to Defeat Him.

Will Be Re-elected by an Overwhelming Majority as an Indorsement of His Action and a Rebuke to Monopoly.

Few men are as well known today in the United States as is Samuel R. Van Sant, governor of Minnesota. There are not many people in this great land who cannot give the name of the governor of this state; and yet there are but few other governors of all the states in the union whose names even the best informed citizens know. To be one of the distinguished men of a nation of 80,000,000 of people is an honor not to be lightly treated; it is a matter of great pride to every loyal Minnesotan that our governor is known and honored throughout our country. No citizen can but feel a thrill of satisfaction to have those of distant states speak in high words of praise of the official head of our state.

Gov. Van Sant deserves this honor and this distinction, for he has won it by being true to the people. That he is a man of courage every incident in his life shows. Never has he winced in the face of danger, never has he turned his back on a public or private duty. He is every inch a man and a fighter. Yet full of fighting blood as he is, he never seeks for trouble, and there is not in his nature one trace of the vindictive or of the spirit of revenge. He is as gentle as he is brave, and as kindly as he is courageous. Indeed, it has often been said of him that if he has a fault it is his too big-heartedness. He will often do himself injury or injustice in an endeavor to help others, or to avoid doing others a possible hurt. He is eminently a man of the people, and like that other great champion of popular rights, President Roosevelt, he never hesitates in the face of an emergency, no matter what the personal result may be to himself.

> The Democratic campaign is not a campaign for Rosing, but is against Van Sant. No reasons are being given why Mr. Rosing should be elected; he outlines no policy, and has no record. But every effort is made to discredit Gov. Van Sant and personal abuse is the chief weapon used.

When the question of the merging of the three great railroad systems, the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington, came to his official notice he did not shirk or temporise. He grappled at once the situation and the danger to our state. He saw that two-thirds of Minnesota, the territory now most rapidly developing, was completely in the grasp of two of these roads; that in all that vast portion of our state there are no other means of railway transportation. He saw that the combination of these two roads meant a shutting out of all other roads and an absolute monopoly of the transportation business of two-thirds of the state. He saw that it was the death of railroad competition. He knew, too, the power of such a combination to wreck the political future of any citizen, but he never faltered or wavered. As on the field of battle he saw before him only his country's flag and the state's welfare. He was elected to stand between the people and just such a danger, and he instantly decided upon action. The letter of the law of the state was plain. There could be no question as to its intent, and the legislature had passed it to meet just such an emergency. The only question was the ability of the state to break down the barriers of technical law points raised by keen corporation lawyers, and so force the matter to the plain issue. The machinery of the state's law department was at once set at work on behalf of the people. The governor grappled the problem, and not discouraged by temporary failure, nor deterred by threats, he pushed the suits until he has now the satisfaction of knowing that there are three well under way against the merger company, the Northern Securities Company of New Jersey. That these suits will be fought to a finish is a certainty if Gov. Van Sant is re-elected. He has braved the bitter opposition of the railroad combination, and it is doing all money can do to defeat him; but he has not, and he never will, hesitate to do his duty and enforce the law. The people know this. They know that if he is re-elected the state's suit, the one most feared by the railroads, will not be dropped. And they are going to elect him by an overwhelming majority as an indorsement of his action in their behalf, and a rebuke to monopoly that seeks to control not alone the transportation of the state, but its politics.

Mr. Rosing says that the railroad merger question is no longer a political issue, that it is in the courts and the courts may be trusted to take care of it. Through his committee, however, he says that there is not a case now pending in courts on the merger question. How easy it would be for Mr. Rosing, if elected governor, through the support of these same merger railroads, to repay them by having the suit brought by the state, which is the suit most feared by the roads, dropped. The people will take no chances on that.

LOOK OUT FOR THE ROORBACKS

Democrats Resort to Despicable Tactics Early in the Campaign—More False and Startling Tales May Be Expected.

This next week will doubtless be full of Democratic roorbacks. They have been using this sort of argument freely even early in the campaign, and will probably fill the last week with them. A roorback is simply a falsehood used for two purposes: First, to keep the other side denying, and, second, with the hope that some people will believe it. It is safe to take it for granted that any startling tales, sprung late in the campaign, are absolutely false, or they would have been used earlier.

As samples of a Democratic roorback up to this time is the interview used by the Globe, in which Gov. Van Sant was represented as being opposed to the striking coal miners. The Globe did not stop to ask if this interview was true or false, though Gov. Van Sant's well known friendly feeling toward labor and his many public and private acts in behalf of labor, marked it as false to all who knew him. The Globe published the fake interview, and sent out a large extra edition. It was compelled to retract the next day, and to apologize editorially; but was careful that no extra edition of the retraction was sent out.

> There are two men in the United States who stand out conspicuously in public life for the protection of popular rights; those two men are Theodore Roosevelt and Samuel R. Van Sant.—Oscar Hallam, St. Paul.

Next was the assertion that the anti-merger suits were all "bluster," and that not a suit was pending in the courts against this railroad combination. At this same time everyone knew that there were three suits pending, and are well advanced in the course of trial in the courts.

Next was the tale that Gov. Van Sant and the Republican leaders had taken an "oath" not to give office to any Swedes. This was put in a Swedish paper, and 100,000 circulars containing it have been sent out. Yet Peter E. Hanson, secretary of state, was Swedish-born, and is on the ticket with Gov. Van Sant. Gov. Van Sant gave E. A. Nelson the office of state librarian, and made Mr. Schulz assistant superintendent of public instruction, and a dozen other offices in the capitol building are held by Swedish-Americans, while a hundred or more are employed in the grain inspection and weighing departments, with Mr. Quist as chief weighmaster, and every institution in the state employs many more. Mr. Fullerton, state game warden, alone, has had as many as seventeen Swedish-Americans under his employ at one time this season at the state fish hatchery.

Again, the Democratic railroad organ springs the startling statement that the proposed gross earnings amendment will lessen, and not increase the tax on railroads. The impotence of this statement and its truth is sufficiently shown by the ownership of the paper which makes it, the St. Paul Globe.

Such are some of the Democratic roorbacks thus far in the campaign. Look out for more of them, even more absurd and ridiculous than these.

SENATOR NELSON'S TRIBUTE.

Van Sant Among Best Governors the State Has Had.

Samuel R. Van Sant is among the best governors this state has had. At a great and momentous juncture he stood guard, like the true soldier he is, for the interests of the people of this state. When an attempt was made to consolidate two great transcontinental railroads, he raised his voice to this menace to the welfare of the state. He did not remain an idle spectator to this attempt. At first he was the object of ridicule by some; but when our great President Roosevelt took up the battle against the trusts and applied the Sherman anti-trust law, the people began to appreciate the manly stand and the fearless policy of our own great Van Sant. If we lay down our arms now, it will give these great corporate interests a taste of blood, and they will feel strengthened to make an onslaught on our young and vigorous president.—Senator Knute Nelson.

FARMERS SOLID FOR VAN SANT

Even more than on account of his merger stand, the farmers of the state indorse Gov. Van Sant because of the record of his administration in regard to the prison binding twine and the state grain inspection. These two issues are sweeping the rural vote into the Republican column. It is almost the irony of fate. It was upon these identical issues that the Democrats won their single victory in Minnesota. Under the Lind administration, the grain inspection department lost over $3,000. Under the first year of Gov. Van Sant's administration, the department showed a profit of $9,493.82. Under the second Van Sant year the profit was $35,458.67. No other argument is needed.

The prison twine plant, since 1894, has made a net profit each year ranging from $20,000 to $70,000, with the single exception of the year 1900, under the Lind administration, when the plant made less than $16,000, after forcing the farmers to pay 2 cents per pound higher than trust figures, where in all other years it has ranged from 2 to 4 cents lower than the trust price.

These two facts alone defeat every claim that the Democrats might put forward in behalf of their candidates.—St. Paul Dispatch.

GOV. S. R. VAN SANT.

FRIENDLY TO LABOR

VAN SANT'S ATTITUDE ON STRIKE

Governor's Sympathy Was With the Miners—Refutes Bogus Globe Interview.

For the first time in the history of our country organized labor has received national recognition. President Roosevelt distinctly stated that he took part in the settlement of the coal miners' strike merely as a private citizen, but the fact remains that he accomplished his purpose by virtue of his high office as president. The presidents of the coal-carrying roads refused to meet or treat with Mr. Mitchell, the representative of the miners' union, but the president of the United States did not hesitate to consult with him, and they held many private conferences. Organized labor, therefore, can well feel that it has had a higher recognition than that from more railroad presidents, and that a Republican president of their country has reached out the hand of sympathy and fellowship to them.

> President Roosevelt and Gov. Van Sant stand for the same political principle—that the rights of the people must come first.

The settlement of this great strike, which threatened positive disaster to the people, shutting off from them one of the necessities of life, has been a distinct triumph for Republican government. It marks an era in our labor history, and goes far toward settling what is to be the great problem of this century—the harmonizing of the relations of capital and labor, under the tremendous development of our industrial and commercial interests. The rights of the employer, the rights of the employed, and outside of and even above these, the rights of the people at large, are all to be considered. In this strike the sympathy of the great mass of the people was with the miners. This feeling was tersely stated by Gov. Van Sant in his interview refuting the bogus interview published in the St. Paul Globe. The governor says:

> Gov. Van Sant stands as the champion of the people against railroad monopoly.

"The refusal of the operators and the willingness of the miners to arbitrate, when in conference with President Roosevelt, has justly enlisted public sympathy on their side, and I share it to the fullest extent.

"A great public calamity threatens the nation, and I believe that the president would be justified in using heroic measures to open the mines, and I trust that he will find some method to do so."

NEW ERA IN TAXATION

PLACE MINNESOTA IN VANGUARD

Constitutional Amendment on Taxation a Long Stride Forward — Van Sant Unjustly Criticised.

One of the grounds on which it is sought to incite opposition to Gov. Van Sant is his agency in procuring the passage of the law creating a tax commission to revise the tax laws, and in calling an extra session of the legislature to pass the code prepared by that commission. Nothing could be more unjust. There has long been an urgent demand for a revision of our tax laws. The governor in recommending and the legislature in taking steps to that end, were in entire accord with public sentiment. The gentlemen he appointed on the commission were well qualified for the task. But when they came to deal with the knotty problem of taxing personal property they ran afoul of the constitutional provisions that made any radical change in the existing system impossible. They recognized this fact in their report, which was a very luminous and intelligent treatise on the whole question of taxation. They framed a law excellent in most of its provisions. The legislature enacted some of the provisions of their bill, which were a great improvement on the old law. After a long discussion, the chapters relating to personal property were defeated; but the discussion resulted in the framing and passage of the constitutional amendment now before the people, which, although far from perfect, embodies the most advanced principles of taxation, and will, if adopted, place Minnesota in the vanguard of the states in the liberal power it confers on the legislature to place our tax laws on a sound and just economical basis. So that the final results of the governor's initiative in this tax reform movement were worth many times the cost of the extra session. The educative value of the discussion in and out of the legislature cannot be overestimated, and one of the men it served to educate was the governor himself, who finally became and is now an ardent champion of the constitutional amendment. That amendment is one of the great achievements of the Republican party, and its adoption will mark a new era in the tax legislation of the country.—St. Paul Pioneer Press

> President Roosevelt and Gov. Van Sant stand for the same political principle—that the rights of the people must come first.

> Be sure to vote for the constitutional amendments; they are in the interests of the people.

BID FOR SUPPORT OF THE RAILROADS

Democratic Party Comes Out Strongly Against an Increase in Gross Earnings Tax on Railroads.

The St. Paul Globe, the Absolute Property of J. J. Hill, Wages Fierce Warfare Against Proposed Amendment.

Utter Fallacy and Inconsistency of the Arguments Put Forth by the Democratic Organ Against the Amendment.

The expected has happened. The Democratic party is opposing the amendment providing for an increase of the railroad gross earnings tax, and this is a part of the bargain of its leaders, to gain railroad support and railroad money. The campaign against this amendment was naturally started in the Democratic railroad organ, the St. Paul Globe. The Globe is owned absolutely by James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad company.

Knowing the source of this attack on the gross earnings amendment, there is little more that need be said to the people as to the merits of this opposition. The Globe argues that if this amendment is adopted, the tax paid to the estate of the railroads will be decreased, rather than increased. If this were true, would the official organ of the Great Northern, a newspaper owned and wholly controlled by the president of that company, oppose its adoption by the people? Do the railroads in general oppose a measure that will decrease their taxes? Would Mr. Hill's paper oppose a law that would decrease the tax of his merger railroads? Yet this is just what the opposition to this amendment asserts, in Mr. Hill's own paper.

Moreover, for the past ten years this same issue has been before the people. Every attempt to have this law for an increase of the gross earnings tax on railroads adopted by the legislature and submitted to the people, has been fought by the railroads. Paid attorneys of the roads have appeared before committees to argue against it; paid lobbyists of the roads have used their peculiar system of argument against it, and money has been lavishly used to defeat it. If it was to reduce the tax of the railroads, why have they fought it so bitterly for the past ten years, and spent thousands of dollars to defeat it? Why have they used every argument and every means to keep the people from getting a chance to vote on it? Why, then, does the only newspaper in Minnesota owned wholly by a railroad president, take the lead against it, and tell the people they should not vote for it? One thing is absolutely certain, it is not because it will reduce the tax of Mr. Hill's railroad.

What, in brief, is the history of this proposed law, making the increase in the gross earnings tax? It was drawn shortly after Gov. Van Sant came into office, at the request of Attorney General Douglas, by ex-Attorney General Childs. The first draft of the bill was then thoroughly reviewed by Mr. Douglas, in consultation with Mr. Childs. Both these gentlemen spent a great deal of time and much labor in investigating the law bearing upon the subject; and after the bill was drafted, Mr. Douglas requested ex-Gov. John Lind, who had then gone out of office, to give his opinion upon the law as drawn. Mr. Lind spent an entire day in the state library looking over the cases suggested by Mr. Douglas, and made several minor changes in the bill as submitted to him; but the language of the bill, covering interstate commerce was not changed, and was fully agreed upon by these three gentlemen. Mr. Douglas has in his possession not only the bill drawn by Mr. Childs, but the bill as changed by himself, and as separately drafted by Mr. Lind; and as to this clause covering interstate commerce, the three absolutely agree.

PRAISED BY ALL ALIKE.

Labor Bureau Under Republican Management Accomplishes Great Work.

There is one department of Gov. Van Sant's administration which has been praised alike by Democrats and Republicans and which will add great strength to the Republican ticket in certain circles. That is the labor bureau. John O'Donnell, himself a laboring man, took hold of the office that, since its inception had been run in a routine manner, and in one year made it the most-talked-of labor department in the United States. Such men as Carroll D. Wright have manifested great interest in the new lines of work undertaken by Mr. O'Donnell, and labor commissioners of other states have been wondering how Minnesota's bureau accomplished so much. It is not too much to say that, for the first time in the state's history, Minnesota really has a labor bureau that is worthy the name. Gov. Van Sant was interested in labor, and placed a practical, earnest man at the head of the department, and labor will not forget the benefits derived from the efficient operation of its own bureau under the past administration.—St. Paul Dispatch.

> Single-handed and alone S. R. Van Sant is making a fight against all the enormous wealth of that great railroad monopoly, the Northern Securities company, which is being poured out to the Democrats. He is the champion of the people, and the people will stand by him.

KIND OF "BLUSTER" THE PEOPLE WANT

Democrats Brazenly Declare That Van Sant's Anti-Merger Action Has Been All "Bluster"—Clever Scheme That Will Not Work.

The Democrats, by their speeches and in circulars, have openly declared that the anti-merger action of Gov. Van Sant has been all "bluster." They have had the effrontery to say:

"What have we to show for all the bluster about the merger? After all the talk and the lapse of a year, there is not a case even pending against the merger in the courts. There have been difficulties, we are told. All the parties have not been summoned and the cases fall flat. If the law had been violated any lawyer with sufficient knowledge to secure a certificate entitling him to practice knows that all the parties to the suit must be brought into court. Anything short of this is subterfuge.

While this is what the Democrats say, what are the facts, and then what do the people think of a party and its candidate that will make such statements? Not many people in this state can fail to know that suits are pending in the courts against the Northern Securities company. The daily papers this last week were full of the testimony of President Hill and others, taken before Examiner Mr. Fred G. Ingersoll, at St. Paul, in the suit ordered by President Roosevelt, under the Sherman anti-trust law. This was the continuation of the testimony taken in New York the first of this month. Solicitor General Richards of the United States; Assistant United States Attorney Beck and Associate Counsel Judge Day were in St. Paul in charge of the case in behalf of the United States. Mr. Grover, general counsel of the Great Northern; Mr. Bunn, general counsel of the Northern Pacific; ex-United States Attorney General Griggs, special counsel for the Northern Securities company, and Judge Young, the personal counsel of President Hill, appeared for the defense, making the most notable array of lawyers that ever were in court in any case in this state. If this case was not in court, and if it was not considered a very serious case and a menace to the securities company, what were all these lawyers doing in our state?

Mr. Ingersoll has also been appointed examiner in the case brought by the State of Minnesota against the merger company, and the testimony will soon be heard by him in it. As a matter of fact, this is the suit of which the Northern Securities company is most afraid, and undoubtedly the purpose of the Democrats in endeavoring to make it appear that no merger suits are pending in the courts is a part of their bargain with the Northern Securities company. How easy it would be if the people could be made to believe this, and Mr. Rosing should accidentally be elected governor by the liberal use of railroad money, for him to quietly drop the state's suit against these roads. It is a very clever scheme on their part, but it will not work. The people know what Gov. Van Sant will do, and they know that as long as he is governor this suit will not be dropped, but will be pushed vigorously. Moreover, a third suit is pending against the merger, brought by the State of Washington, through the influence of Gov. Van Sant, and it has been held good by the supreme court of the United States.

> Last winter at Washington the great trust magnates declared openly that there were two men in public office who would never be re-elected; these two men were President Roosevelt and Gov. Van Sant.

With these three cases, not only pending, but so far advanced in the courts, what do the people think of this bold and false statement of the Democrats, scattered broadcast over the state, and what other purpose can it have than to make it possible for the state's suit to be dropped if the railroad candidate could be elected?

"We feel grateful to you, Mr. President, for the patriotic efforts which you have made to bring about an honorable settlement of the strike; efforts which you continued despite the remarkable spirit and conduct which you at first found in the company's managers."—John Mitchell, President of the Coal Miners' Union, to Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States.

THE PEOPLE VERSUS THE RAILROADS

Real Contest in the Present Campaign Is Between the People and the Great Northern Securities Company.

It is time the people of Minnesota knew who the real contestants are in this state campaign. On the ballots they will find the names of "S. R. Van Sant, Republican," and "L. A. Rosing, Democrat," as candiates for governor. But they are not the actual contestants, and it is time this fact was brought right home to the citizens of this great state. The real contest to be settled November 4th is not between Mr. Van Sant and Mr. Rosing, it is not even between the Republican party and the Democratic party, it is between the people of Minnesota and the Northern Securities Company of New Jersey. The issue to be settled is whether the people of this state are to run their own affairs or whether they are to be managed by this New Jersey corporation; whether the people of this state shall say who shall be their governor or whether the Northern Securities Company shall name him. This is said not haphazard nor for political effect, but advisedly and the facts show the truth of the statement.

Mr. Rosing, in his opening address, said of the anti-merger suits brought at the request of Gov. Van Sant, that while the governor had done what was right, that this merger question was now in the courts and was not a political issue; that the court would take care of it and that further agitation of the matter would waste time. At that time it looked as though Mr. Rosing might be in a sense right, but it is now a most important political question, and has been made so, not by Gov. Van Sant, but by the Northern Securities Company itself, which has made Mr. Rosing its candidate, and by every means in its power has been attempting to defeat Gov. Van Sant, until today the question for the voter to decide is not if he will vote for Mr. Van Sant or Mr. Rosing, but if he will vote that the people of Minnesota continue to be their own masters, or for turning the state over to a foreign railroad corporation.

Soon after the Democratic headquarters were opened evidences were shown of a generous campaign fund. The committee did not take headquarters at the Merchants' Hotel, they could not get rooms enough, they said. They evidently needed much more room for the work to be done, and they engaged most of the upper floor of a business block. At once machinery was set to work that meant a most expensive campaign, and ever since then money has been used by the Democrats with a liberality never before known in Minnesota politics. Newspapers have been subsidized, Republican newspapers have been paid for publishing the Democratic bulletins and Democratic speeches as advertising. Two Republican dailies were each offered $750 to publish Mr. Rosing's speech, and $500 to publish his biography, and it was refused. A Swedish Republican newspaper was offered $1,500 simply not to support Mr. Van Sant, and refused it. Paid articles have been published in Chicago and Milwaukee newspapers, and these papers sent out by the tens of thousands to the voters of the state. Circulars and pamphlets have been sent out by the one hundred thousands. A force of from fifteen to twenty stenographers and typewriters have been kept busy for weeks. Expensive lithographs have plastered the state, and hired workers have everywhere been sent out in the guise of peddlers, spectacle venders, book canvassers, and even tramps. These things are but a few of the evidences of a lavish use of money. Where did this money come from? The Democrats do not now have the grain inspection department to assess monthly, as two years ago, and they have no state officials to voluntarily contribute to the campaign. Where, then, do they get their money?

Again, every source from which the Republicans might get active support in the campaign has been cut off wherever these railroad interests have had the necessary influence. Every Republican speaker, every Republican committeeman and worker traveling on these merged railroads has paid his fare. Gov. Van Sant himself pays for every mile he rides on their trains. Yet the Great Northern "Flyer," which is supposed to stop for no one, is stopped, to accommodate Democratic speakers.

The St. Paul Globe has for weeks been filled with personal abuse of Gov. Van Sant and other Republican candidates. The governor has been cartooned in the most insulting manner by that paper. He has been accused of paying no tax on his steamboats in Minnesota, when it is well known that he personally does not own a single boat. The boats that he is interested in belong to a company organized in Iowa, a great many years ago by Gov. Van Sant's father, who lived in that state and died there but a few months ago, and being an Iowa company of course it pays its taxes there. But Gov. Van Sant's own personal tax is very large, larger than some men who are supposed to be millionaires. The Globe has also attacked Mr. Ray Jones, candidate for lieutenant governor, and Mr. Jacobson, who for years has fought the battles of the people in the legislature, because he is supporting Mr. Van Sant. It has ridiculed the proposed tax code, aimed at concealed wealth, and has in one day had as many as four leading editorials abusive of Republicans. No other newspaper in the state on either side has shown one-tenth of the activity in this campaign that the Globe has. Who owns the St. Paul Globe? Mr. James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway Company and of the Northern Securities Company.

The Globe, moreover, has openly opposed the constitutional amendment for the increase of the railway gross earnings tax, and it is significant that the Democrats receiving financial support for their campaign wholly from the railroads has made no effort to bring this amendment favorably to the attention of the people. Is not this part of the bargain, a payment by the Democrats for the railroad money to run their campaign? The Globe claims that this amendment will reduce, not increase, the tax on railroads. If this is true why did the railroads move heaven and earth and pour out their money to defeat the passage of this amendment in the legislature and so keep the people from a chance to vote upon it?

The leading Democratic speaker in the state, in an address at St. Paul, has sought to belittle the anti-merger suits, calling them bluster and asserting that there was not then a single case pending in the court on this subject. Yet at that time three cases were actually pending and being pushed against this merger company, and testimony in one of them was being taken in New York city. Which side, let us ask, is shown to be interested in pushing and which in killing these merger suits? If the people could be convinced that not a suit was really pending, how easy it would be if Mr. Rosing were accidentally elected governor for him to quietly drop the Minnesota case, the one most feared by the merged railroads.

Is, then, the merger out of politics? Which candidate is the merger supporting? Which candidate is it opposing?

It is time, we say, that the people know that the merger railroads are supporting Mr. Rosing by every means in their power and opposing Gov. Van Sant. It is time that it was known that the contest is between the people and the merged roads, and that a vote against Gov. Van Sant is not so much a vote for Mr. Rosing as for the Northern Securities Company, of New Jersey.

DANGER LIES IN OVER-CONFIDENCE

Only One Thing Gov. Van Sant Has to Fear in Coming Election Is That Too Many Friendly Voters May Stay at Home.

This Is the People's Fight and Every Man Must Do His Share to Ensure a Sweeping Victory for the Anti-trust Forces.

Gov. Van Sant has but one thing to fear in the coming election. That one thing is that two many voters who wish to see him re-elected will not go to the polls next Tuesday and vote. There is no question but that his acts as governor are approved by the people. They want him re-elected, but such has been the confidence that he would have an overwhelming majority, that there is a feeling that he does not need votes.

There is always a light vote in the years when there is not a presidential election, in the "off years" as they are called. This is an "off year" and there is danger that the voters, although friendly to Gov. Van Sant, will not take the trouble to go to the polls. This supplement is published to show to you plainly the issues that have come up in this campaign. It is to show you the tremendous power of combined wealth that Gov. Van Sant is facing. The power of money in any cause, however unjust, is well known. As we have said, there is no question as to where the sympathies of the people are, they are with Gov. Van Sant, and he needs the vote of every friend he has in Minnesota. He needs it not only that he may be elected, but that he may have such a majority that the great railroad interests and trusts will not again try to dominate the politics of Minnesota and dictate to its people who they shall elect as governor. This is your fight, and you should see to it that you are at the polls next Tuesday and cast your ballots.

Gov. Van Sant is one of the largest personal property taxpayers in Winona county. The boat company of which he is president, however, was organized by his father under the laws of Iowa, that being his father's home until his death a few months ago, and naturally it pays its taxes there.

There are 2,724 voting precincts in Minnesota. If but ten voters in each precinct stay away from the polls, that will mean 27,240 votes less for Gov. Van Sant, for you may be sure that every opposition vote will be cast, as they have the money to take the voters to the polls. Every stay-at-home vote will be a Van Sant vote. He cannot afford to lose them and you cannot afford to have him lose them.

The following table of the Republican vote in 1898 an "off year" and 1900 a presidential year shows a loss of twenty votes to the precinct or over 41,000. Can you afford to have Gov. Van Sant lose that this year? Let us urge you not only to go to the polls yourself, but to take your neighbors and to make this indeed a glorious victory.

WHO HAS FILLED THE DEMOCRATIC "BARREL?"

The campaign for L. A. Rosing, Democratic candidate for governor, is the most lavish Minnesota has seen in recent history. Democratic managers are spending dollars where they used to spend dimes. Speeches and circular letters are sent out in lots of a hundred thousand. Workers have been hired by the dozen and special speakers to reach every nationality.

There has been a general suspicion that the bulk of the Democratic fund is furnished by the same interest that gives all these speakers and workers free transportation. No such fund could have been raised by individual subscriptions. No such fund has been available in recent years.

Information now at hand confirms the general suspicion. It seems that the financial center of the nation is taking an interest in Minnesota politics this year. Promoters of the Northern Securities merger have persistently declared that public sentiment in the Northwest supported Mr. Hill, and that Gov. Van Sant's position was not popular. There is nothing that dealers in railroad stocks fear so much as hostile legislation, and the Wall street brokers are anxious to see whether Minnesota is going to permit the merger to go on unmolested. Gov. Van Sant's defeat would prove to them that Mr. Hill's influence was paramount in Minnesota, and able to unmake a governor who opposed him. Gov. Van Sant's election would mean a drop in Northern Securities.

So Wall street is watching the Minnesota campaign, and the "tip" down there is that Rosing will be elected, and elected by the influence of the merger railroads. This is stated with positive faith that the railroad influence is paramount in this state.

The Democratic campaign is centered on Rosing. The other candidates on the state ticket are working for him. All the literature is booming him, and the workers mention no other name. In half the counties there is no local Democratic ticket, and all the work is being done for Rosing.

The fact is, and all Minnesotans know it, that popular opinion is strongly behind Gov. Van Sant. Railroad influence is not paramount, unless it is exerted secretly. The danger is that the mass of voters will not realize until too late the nature of the fight being waged.

The sole purpose of the Democratic campaign is to get the scalp of Gov. Van Sant. Anything else they get will be a gift, as they are working only to beat Van Sant. If he cannot be defeated, the interests opposed to him want to cut down his lead to a ridiculously small figure.

Republicans seem to be waking up, and Gov. Van Sant's success is as sure as anything ever is in politics. This strenuous effort of the Democrats, however, may make his margin much closer than it should be. A "bar'l" is powerful in politics, especially if it is deep enough. It takes a good deal of enthusiasm on the other side to counteract the effect of a "liberal campaign."—Minneapolis Journal.

THE TWO CHAMPIONS

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND GOV. VAN SANT.

These Two Men Stand for the Same Principles—The People Before the Trusts.

Every voter who admires President Roosevelt should vote for Gov. Van Sant. These two men stand for the same principles in public life, and this fight in Minnesota now being waged by the trusts against Gov. Van Sant is but the forerunner of the fight to be made against President Roosevelt. When the governor began the now-famous merger suits, he aroused the bitter opposition of that great combination of wealth, and when President Roosevelt, at the request of the governor, had the suit brought under the Sherman act, that hatred and opposition descended to him. Balked in its gigantic scheme of stock-jobbing, Wall street vowed vengeance on both of them. Railroad presidents and Wall street magnates freely made the threat in Washington that they would defeat both President Roosevelt and Gov. Van Sant for re-election. They will doubtless now be joined in the effort by the coal barons. It is well known that the merger railroads made every effort to prevent Gov. Van Sant's renomination. Utterly failing of even getting a candidate against him in the Republican party, they determined to beat him at the polls, if money could do it. The money has been forthcoming and is being freely spent; but if money can beat Gov. Van Sant, money without limit will be used to corrupt and debauch the voters of this entire country to defeat President Roosevelt.

Voters of Minnesota, there is more in this campaign than the mere re-election of Gov. Van Sant. Here is an opportunity to rebuke the arrogance of wealth, and to teach it that Minnesota stands with President Roosevelt and S. R. Van Sant and against combined wealth.

FALSE STATEMENTS.

JAMES J. HILL'S ORGAN AGAIN GRINDING.

Desperate Campaign Against the Railroad Gross Earnings Tax Being Waged.

The St. Paul Globe, owned by James J. Hill and operated in the interests of the Democratic state ticket, has opened a desperate campaign for the defeat of the railroad gross earnings bill.

The bill was passed by the legislature of 1901, in spite of a powerful railroad lobby, and is submitted to the people at the coming election. It increases the gross earnings tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent.

Now the organ of the Great Northern, which made such strenuous efforts to defeat the bill, says the amendment, if adopted, will save the Great Northern money.

The situation would be farcical were it not evident that the Globe is making a desperate effort to beat the bill by misleading the voters.

The opening article is a tissue of mis-statements from start to finish, most of them apparent on their face.

The Great Northern has shrewd attorneys and good bookkeepers, and when the bill was introduced it was carefully analyzed. The Great Northern knew what was in the bill then as well as it does now. Yet its lobby fought the bill before the legislature, and its newspaper now opposes it before the people.

The Democratic campaign in the state is inevitably connected with the campaign against the gross earnings bill. The Globe has turned over both its editorial and its news columns to the Democratic state committee, who is using them for all it is worth. The Globe's attack on the bill is evidently made with the knowledge of the Democratic committee, and "tips it off" to the public that the Great Northern influence is behind the campaign against Gov. Van Sant.—Minneapolis Journal.

VAN SANT AND UNION LABOR

In His First Message to the Legislature He Recommended That the Laborer Should Be Protected by Legislation.

Union Labor Was Recognized When He Appointed a Member of the Union to the Head of the Bureau of Labor.

Gov. Van Sant is recognized by labor as one of the strongest most sincere and earnest friends it has ever had in this state. He never has missed an opportunity in his public or private life to do everything in his power to help the laborer, and organized labor has always had recognition at his hands.

Almost his first act as governor was to include in his first message to the legislature the following recommendation:

"Of all the triumphs of our American civilization, there are none to compare with the advanced position of the laboring classes and no one thing has so much contributed to our wonderful progress as the condition of our working people. Where labor is well paid and enjoys equal rights there will you find not only a wealthy and prosperous state, but also an intelligent and progressive people.

"Minnesota takes a front rank among states in labor legislation. To our bureau of labor are we indebted for many wise laws. Upon our statute books you will find enactments guaranteeing to wage earners the right to organize and protecting them against blacklisting; laws for the regulation of child labor; those requiring healthful sanitary conditions and protecting them against accidents in their places of employment. These and other laws have rightly placed Minnesota in a high rank. I would suggest one more law and urge its passage—a law making eight hours a legal day's work on all public works authorized by the state.

"We must take no backward steps but must continue the legislation necessary to open to labor new safeguards of protection and other fields of employment."

This was followed by such effective efforts on his part that the eight-hour law was passed at that session of the legislature.

Moreover, he appointed to the head of the labor bureau a thoroughly qualified member of union labor; a man who was a wage earner, a man of recognized ability and information of this department without fear or favor to any person or class and without regard to politics. This has made Minnesota's bureau of labor no practical and so progressive along new lines of investigation that it has won a national reputation. Moreover every assistant employed in the department is a practical workman in some branch of labor and is in touch with the needs and rights of his fellow wage-earners. For the first time therefore, the bureau of labor is fully in sympathy with working men and is operating conservatively but efficiently along those practical lines which will be of the greatest help to the working man and most fully protect the rights of labor.

The new gross earnings tax law is fair, it is constitutional, it is simple. It lets the state keep close watch that it gets what is its due, it stops all leaks and will very largely increase the tax on railroads. That is why the railroads oppose it.

RAILROADS BACK OF IT.

Origin of Attack on Gross Earnings Amendment.

The Dispatch can only regard with suspicion the origin of the attack upon the amendment to increase the tax upon the gross earnings of the railroads. It so plainly comes from railway sources, whence came the opposition in the legislature, that the hypocrisy of the warning that the effect of the law will be a great decrease in revenue from that source, as John Randolph once said of some act of Clay, "shines and stinks, and stinks and shines, like a rotten mackerel in the moonlight." There is a Pecksniffian sniffle about such protestations from such a source.

Not a Democratic speaker and not a Democratic paper has had a word of fault to find with the grain inspection department, the state's prison twine, the state labor bureau, the department of public instruction, the food and dairy commission, or any other department under Gov. Van Sant's administration.

The proposed amendment has the further merit of substituting certainty for uncertainty, simplicity for complexity, and removes both temptation and opportunity for suppression of facts and juggling with accounts by which the companies might escape taxes. Any other method demands accounting for earnings made upon each separate article carried over more than the State of Minnesota. One has but to contemplate the immensity of the work of such a method, with the impossibility of detecting suppressions, to make desirable a simpler plan, such as the proposed bill provides.

Even the Democrats admit that the Republicans did well when the extra session of the legislature passed the proposed tax amendment. This amendment prepares the way for a new tax law covering personal property. This is the hardest class of property to reach for taxation, as all know, and under the constitution, as at present, much of it cannot be reached. The provisions of the amendment have been fully explained by the Republican press, and all voters are urged to vote for it. It will permit an income tax, provides for two methods of taxing public franchises, for a registry law on mortgages, for a tax on inheritances, and, indeed, places Minnesota first among all the states in modern methods of taxation.

DARING HOLD-UP

LONE BANDIT PULLS OFF A SUCCESSFUL TRAIN ROBBERY.

TACKLES "NORTH COAST LIMITED"

KILLS THE ENGINEER, DYNAMITES MAIL CAR AND ESCAPES.

REWARD OF $5,000 OFFERED

ARMED POSSES WITH BLOODHOUNDS PUT ON TRAIL OF DESPERADO.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 26.—The most daring as well as successful train robbery in the history of Montana was committed by a lone highwayman three miles east of Bearmouth, sixty-four miles west of Helena, early yesterday morning.

The train held up by the bold highwayman was the east-bound "North Coast Limited" on the Northern Pacific, and to accomplish his object the robber found it necessary to murder the engineer, Daniel O'Neil of Missoula, which he did without the least compunction, because the latter would not stop his train as commanded. The robber then seized the throttle lever and stopped the train, showing that he was acquainted with the mechanism of the engine. The combination baggage and express car with dynamite and all the registered mail was taken. It is believed the robber boarded the blind baggage when the train stopped for water near Bearmouth. After the robbery the bandit, taking one of the train crew, named Berry, for a companion, marched down the track without molesting the passengers.

After going about a mile and a half he told Berry good bye and took to the woods. The robber is described as a short, heavy-set man, stoop shouldered and dressed like a laboring man, but wearing a light cap and light shoes.

No trace has yet been found of the man. Bloodhounds from Deer Lodge penitentiary which were taken to the scene of the hold-up were unable to get the scent, and as yet the daring murderer has not been heard of since he took to the brush along the track. While the identity of the

it is believed from a remark that he made that he was implicated in the Southern Pacific robbery near Portland, Or., last year. The amount of booty secured is as yet unknown.

Details of the robbery were received in this city by a telegram from Supt. H. J. Horne to General Agent A. D. Edgar. This is the dispatch:

"Train No. 2, Conductor Quinn, Engineer O'Neil, was held up this morning three miles east of Bearmouth. Quinn reports that baggage car 239 was blown to pieces. Engineer O'Neill was shot and has since died. The robber went through the mail car, taking all the registered mail, but got nothing else. He dynamited the combination baggage and express car. Ready to start special from Deer Lodge with bloodhounds as soon as we can locate direction taken by robber. Have posses at Deer Lodge, Missoula and Anaconda of robbers. Think our chances are good. So far as seen there was but one man, who told the train electrician if any one wanted to know who he was to say he was the fellow that held up the Southern Pacific train south of Portland a year ago."

Big Reward Offered.

Later in the day General Agent Edgar received the following telegram:

"The Northern Pacific railway will pay a reward of $5,000 for the capture and delivery to the authorities, dead or alive, of the train robber who robbed No. 2 this morning. Should it have been committed by one man the reward will be $5,000 for his capture. If committed by two men the reward will be $5,000 for the two or $2,500 for the other; if committed for more than two men the reward will be $5,000 for the capture of all or $2,500 for the capture of any one."

CAN GET GOOD TITLE TO CANAL.

French Government Guarantees Every Point.

Washington, Oct. 26. — Attorney General Knox and Assistant Attorney Russell are giving their whole time to the preparation of their report on the legal status of the Panama canal title. They expect to be able to lay that report before President Roosevelt tonight or Monday. The report will cover all the details of the French company's title to the canal and the power to transfer that title to the United States government. It will show that the title can be transferred and that this government will assume no risks in making the purchase of the canal. The French government is willing to safeguard every point so there can be no claims from the old Panama company presented against the United States. The only doubts as to the construction of the Panama canal now rest with Colombia, and the delay of that government in accepting the amendment of Secretary Hay to the proposed treaty for a new canal concession to the United States. These doubts may be cleared away before congress meets in December and the delays of the Colombian government have encouraged Nicaragua to redouble her efforts to secure the canal.

MARRIED SECOND TIME.

Thirty-Nine Years After First Wedding Couple Is Again United.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 26. — A strange wedding occurred at Menominee last week, when a couple already married were again united in the bonds of wedlock. The groom was fifty-nine and the bride sixty-one. Thirty-nine years ago they were married by a priest and have lived as one ever since. However, they have lost their certificate, the clergyman is dead and the witnesses have disappeared, and the couple desiring to have some record of their marriage, went to Menominee to again have the nuptial knot tied and the fact properly recorded. The couple are from Pensaukee, Wis. Their name is Laduron.

KING OF SIAM COMING.

The Rumor to This Effect Has Again Been Received.

New York, Oct. 26.—Interest in the crown prince of Siam was somewhat overbalanced yesterday by the news that his father, the king of Siam, is soon to visit this country as the guest of the nation. A renewal of the rumor to that effect, printed several months ago, was current aboard the United States dispatch boat Dolphin, on which the crown prince and his suite went to West Point, and the approaching visit may be safely referred to as a fact.

FOR LAZY PEOPLE.

Device for Whipping Horse Without Exertion of Driver.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 26.—A Calumet man has invented a whip socket attachment for buggies which ought to be a great hit for tired people who drive horses. The device works automatically, and by means of it the driver can by the movement of the right foot force the whip down on the back of the horse, and make it hit the horse without the driver stirring in his seat. Either a light or a sharp cut with the whip can be given.

HURT IN A WRECK

COLLISION BETWEEN A TROLLEY CAR AND AN AUTOMOBILE.

TWENTY-TWO ARE INJURED

NOT BELIEVED THAT ANY OF THE UNFORTUNATES WILL DIE.

CLOSE CALL FROM WORSE FATE

AUTOMOBILE HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM GOING OVER PRECIPICE.

New York, Oct. 28. — Twenty-two passengers on a trolley car were injured yesterday, but none, it is believed fatally, in a collision between the car and an automobile. The accident occurred in front of Greystone, the home of the late Samuel J. Tilden, at Yonkers. Those most seriously hurt and who were taken to a hospital were:

Miss Merle MacClintock of Mount Vernon, torn and lacerted scalp, bruised and cut by glass.

Miss Wenonah Bailey, New York, neck and shoulders and body cut and bruised.

Kate Callahan, Yonkers, scalp wound and bruised.

Others of the injured had their wounds dressed and went to their homes.

A man and two women who occupied the automobile and whose names could not be ascertained, together with the chauffeur, escaped injury.

The cauffeur said he was running along the track of the trolley line when the car ran into him from behind. The motorman says the automobile, which was going down grade, swerved onto the track and before it could again get off, his car bore down upon and hit the machine. When the car struck the automobile it left the tracks and turned over in the direction of Greystone. Had it gone to the other side of the road it would have been thrown over a precipice eighty or ninety feet, to the New York Central tracks. The automobile was but slightly damaged.

MITCHELL'S CASE READY.

He Lays His Plan Before District Presidents, Who Approve.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 28. — President Mitchell was in conference with the district presidents, Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy, for several hours yesterday. He outlined his case as he will present it to the board of arbitration in behalf of the miners, and the same received the approval of the district presidents. Yesterday afternoon President Mitchell was presented with a gold badge and gold watch by the Polish, Lithuanian and Slavish members of the United Mineworkers. The badge bears his monogram, "J. M." in diamonds just underneath the bar containing the pin by which it is fastened to the coat lapel. Below this is the button of the United Mineworkers of America, from which hangs a pendant—a tiny pick and shovel with miner's lamp in the center, underneath which is a medallion. The seal of the organization in the center is in the form of a breaker boy standing in the midst of a bank of coal. The presentation took place at President Mitchell's headquarters and a large crowd listened to the speeches of presentation and acceptance.

A large force of men were at work yesterday clearing up the mines for general resumption to-day. It is said nearly all the collieries are now in shape for work and that there will be a heavy output of coal to-day.

DISREGARDED THE SIGNAL.

Collision Results in Injury of Several Persons.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 28.—A Belt railroad locomotive drawing seven freight cars, collided with an electric car outside the city limits yesterday. Seven persons were injured. Dr. J. L. Eaton and Charles Harris, both of this city, seriously. It is claimed the Belt road engineer disregarded the signal that a rapid transit car had the right of way and kept on the main track instead of taking the siding. The engineer and fireman jumped, leaving the throttle open. Fireman Ramsey remounted the engine and closed the throttle, not, however, until the collision had occurred. The electric car was demolished.

WHOOPING COUGH CURE.

Young Physician of Brussels Claims to Have Discovered a Serum.

London, Oct. 28.—A young Brussels physician of the name of Loureaux claims to have discovered the serum of whooping cough which is injected under the skin in the abdominal region. From the experiments which he has conducted hitherto the injection appears to be quite harmless. The first effects are apparent about forty-eight hours after the inoculation. The serum produces an early cessation of the coughing fits and a considerable diminution of the period of illness. If the injection is made immediately on the manifestation of the usual symptoms the malady can be cured in eight or ten days. The usual course is from six to eight weeks.

Peculiar life insurance cases are pending at St. Cloud on a change of venue from Morrison and Hennepin counties. Albertina Kowalski, of Turtle Lake, Wis., is plaintiff in one, and Herman Smith, of Minneapolis, is the other. The Modern Woodmen of America is defendant in both cases. A little over a year ago Albert Smith was killed in the woods. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen. On joining he was asked whom he wished to name as his beneficiary, and he specified his sister. But he did not know her married name. Her first name, he said, was Tina, so the name was written in the policy as Christina Johnson, as that was the name he believed she then bore. It developed that the sister's name is Albertina, and her husband's name Kowalski. Herman Smith, father of the decedent, began a suit for the recovery of the amount of the insurance, alleging that no beneficiary was named in the will. His suit was brought in Hennepin county, while that of his daughter was brought in Morrison county. The society refused to pay the amount until the courts determined which was the beneficiary.

THE MISSING FACE.

"Ah, Mary, at thy window be,"
So sang the poet heart of old.
But, oh, no bright face smiles for me
From out a casement framed in gold.
Go, serenade the voiceless stars
That dream like music overhead,
But never from love's window bars
Will sound the lost voice of the dead.
Oh, Mary, at thy window be,
When busy day draws to a close,
And from thy casement smile on me
As from some lattice smiles a rose.
I cannot pass for looking up,
To see your face against the pane,
What tears then brim fond Memory's cup
To know that skyward glance is vain.

A Pardonable Deception.

BY JENNIE EDDIE.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There was dire consternation in athletic circles of the University of Michigan when Stubby Shaw's resignation from the ball team came in just two weeks before the Cornell game. Moreover, this young man remained firm as adamant in the face of entreaties, expostulations, threats. "It's my own fault," he insisted. "Father wouldn't have said a word if I had passed my exams. But as it is, I've got to brace up in Math or go home, and baseball is strictly ruled out." Thompson, who was manager of the team, was the brother of a very pretty girl whom Stubby had adored for three years. Their engagement was but a few hours old when sentence was passed upon Stubby's sporting career by his hitherto indulgent father.

The Rev. John Shaw loved his only son with all the strength of his earnest, strong heart, and because of that love he was ambitious that John Jr., should make a success of life from start to finish. He had sent him proudly to his own Alma Mater and had watched his progress with tender solicitude, hoping, longing for some evidence of especial brilliancy, yet ever patiently content with his mediocre attainments. "He hasn't found himself yet," the fond father would say, "but when he does——" and the pleasant old gray eyes would light up with an almost divine fire as his mind pictured the roseate future of his son.

On a perfect spring morning Mr. Shaw received a letter from his boy. It was a frank, manly letter, telling of his love for Margaret Thompson, her promise to be his wife, and asking his father's approval of the engagement. The maid interrupted his reverie. "A telegram for you, sir." He tore it open and read it with a puzzled smile.

"Do you consent to John's engagement to Margaret? Telegraph reply.
"R. Thompson."

"Rather singular," said Mr. Shaw. "I never had such an experience before. But then it's a good many years since I knew anything about love affairs. This must be the latest formality."

Two hours later Thompson burst into Stubby's room waving a bit of yellow paper. "I've got it," he shouted, holding it still long enough for Stubby to read, "I give my consent. John Shaw." "What does it mean?" gasped Stubby. "Mean? Why it means that you agreed to stay on the team until after the Cornell game if I got your father's consent, and here it is." The famous shortstop was speechless with joy, but he wrung his friends hand until Thompson winced and drew it away.

The practice weeks were gone before anyone realized it and the morning of the great day dawned clear and crisp. Hundreds of students loaded the special for Detroit. That city was in gala attire. College enthusiasm was fairly saturating the atmosphere and nowhere was greater loyalty shown than in the ranks of the alumni—the "old grads." Was it Fate that induced the Rev. John Shaw to leave his cozy study on that great day and take the suburban for Detroit? He certainly knew nothing about the game until the flaunting streamers of yellow and blue stirred something warm in the depths of his heart and brought a mist before his eyes.

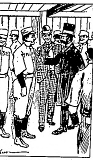
"Well, well, Shaw. Down for the game, I suppose," said a jolly voice as a pair of big hands grasped his own heartily.

"God bless my soul if it isn't Jack Thornton," exclaimed the minister. "What game is it?"

"Why, don't you know? Cornell and Michigan. Best game of the year. You used to be better posted on these things in our day, eh, Shaw?" Visions of his long forgotten triumphs on the diamond made him smile reflectively, and when Jack Thornton hailed a car headed for the ball grounds, he followed mechanically. They took a front seat in the grand stand among unfamiliar faces. There was the usual chatter as the teams took the field for their preliminary practice. Mr. Shaw recognized anecdotes of Stacey and Leaming and a good deal was said about some one they called Stubby, but this was evidently a new member whom his son had never mentioned. He began to grow a trifle jealous of this same Stubby when they told of his splendid form, his boundless popularity, his inexhaustible good-nature. He started once to ask who this young paragon was, but just then the game was called.

Cornell came to bat first. Three



"I'm proud of you, my boy."

men were struck out in quick succession. The Michigan pitcher was certainly starting well. A murmur of delight went up from the crowd of partisans, but when Michigan also failed to score the outlook was not so promising. Eight innings were played rapidly with no score on either side. Then Cornell again lined up. A whizzing sound, a well aimed stroke, and Cornell had a man on first. There was a perfect storm of applause from the little group of New Yorkers who had accompanied their team. Whether this inspired their men or rattled the Michigan pitcher, the result was the same. The game was now Michigan 0, Cornell 1. To say that the crowd was now mad with excitement is utterly inexpressive. There was a death like stillness when Stacey came to bat. "Strike one. Strike two. Strike three." It was Warren's turn. "Strike one! Strike two! Strike three!" A groan of despair told the story of shattered hopes. Then a third man steped to the plate. The entire responsibility of the day lay on those broad shoulders. He did not seem aware of the seriousness of the situation or was he indifferent to it? Suddenly, whizz! came the ball on an incalculable curve. A firm, strong blow, directed as carelessly as though the whole world were not waiting breathless its result, and the ball skimmed the ground at the pitcher's feet, slipped through his hands and bounded across the field. The man that sent it did not stop to look. He was half way to his base before the crowd realized that he had made a hit. On, on, would he ever get to second? Yes, and he dares to try for third. Now the outfielders are after the ball as it skims the ground. The right fielder has caught it! No, he fumbles. He turns swiftly but the man is past third and running for dear life. The ball has started on its long journey home. It is almost in the catcher's grasp. The runner sees it. He is so near, but will he ever make the goal? The catcher jumps back a foot to get the ball. The runner drops to the ground, slides his full length and stretches a long muscular arm to the plate. His fingers touch it a full second before the catcher has the ball and the announcement of the umpire that Michigan has a home run is drowned in the thunderous roars from the grand stand. Everybody is jumping up and down, yelling like mad. The Rev. John Shaw is swinging his hat and pounding the floor with his best umbrella. "Rah! Rah! Rah!" he finds himself yelling, and then a magnificent howl breaks forth from a thousand throats, "Stubby! Stubby! Stubby!"

"That's a boy to be proud of," said Jack Thornton to John Shaw.

"Indeed, he is!" returned that gentleman enthusiastically. "If that was my boy, I'd rather have him make that run than take the Latin scholarship!" Another tally for the U. of M. was added by the good plays of the succeeding ten minutes, but the wild fever with which they continued to cheer Stubby remained unabated. When the game ended with Michigan 2, Cornell 1, the Rev. John Shaw bent over a lad of ten who had been one of the wildest enthusiasts. "Can you tell me, my boy, what Stubby's other name is?" The child looked at him in disgust. "Stubby? Don't you know Stubby Shaw? Why, everybody knows him!"

Down in the dressing room Mr. Shaw found a mob of young men fairly tumbling over each other in jubilant glee as they shook hands with everybody again and again, pounded each other on the back, and hurrahed for Stubby. It was with difficulty that the elderly gentleman made his way to the inside of this room where the hero sat perched on the shoulders of his vociferous admirers, but the crowd parted like magic at his words, "I am Stubby's father." "I'm proud of you, my boy," he said. "That play atones even for your disobedience." Thompson interrupted. "I deceived you both, Mr. Shaw," he said humbly, "but you see we just had to have Stubby play. He thought your telegram concerned the game——" "That's all right, I'm much obliged to you, Thompson."

"What's the matter with Mr Shaw?" shouted the captain of the team. "Fellows, here goes, three cheers for him." The people outside thought it was another edition of the same old story. "Listen," said one. "They're cheering Stubby again." But the Rev. John Shaw and the team knew better.

SEABROOKE AND HIS "Q."

Where the Comedian Got the Initial in His Name.

Those who have been worrying their young lives away in a vain effort to find out what the "Q" stands for in Thomas Q. Seabrooke's name need trouble no longer. The comedian settled the matter last week himself.

"The 'Q' in my name," said he "stands for 'Qurika.' It is an Indian name. When I was barely a year old, my father had some government business which took him to Fort Thomas, Ariz., among the Apache Indians. He took mother and baby with him. The Indians who loafed around our place took a great fancy to me: they patted me on the cheek and called me 'Qurika.' My father was greatly amused at it and after awhile began to call me 'Q' for short. The name stuck to me as I grew up, and as I had no middle name I finally took this pet family name for my middle name, as it harmonized euphoniously with the rest of my cognomen."

"But what in the world does 'Qurika' mean?" he was asked.

"Oh, that's Indian for 'pretty boy,'" replied Seabrooke.

And the comedian looked daggers when someone laughed.—New York World.

The Shepherd of the Sea.

I am a mighty shepherd, and many are my flocks;
I lead them, I feed them among the weedy rocks.
My shepherd's crook is fashioned out of a Norway pine,
And there's no sheep dog in the world will herd these flocks of mine.

My fold is wide, and day and night the walls shift of my fold.
No upland, no lowland my lambing ewes withhold
From the cry of their shepherd, the beckoning of his hand;
For my own desert places they leave the pastureland.

With wild white fleeces surging about me to my knee,
I go about my herding, the Shepherd of the Sea;
I call to the rock pastures the white sheep of the waves,
For they but find their grazing where sailors find their graves.

I am a mighty shepherd, and mighty flocks have I;
I lead them, I feed them while stars are in the sky;
And when the moon is waning on sheltered shore and lee,
I rest not nor slumber, the Shepherd of the Sea.

Japanese Music.

Corea is coming on, having organized a brass band. As a rule the modern band is not popular among the orientals, the Chinese having none and the Japanese giving it but slight encouragement. A Japanese regiment marches on parade to the monotonous toot-toot of two bugles, eschewing even the drum as an accompaniment. During the war in 1894-95 there was but one band connected with an army corps and that one was attached to headquarters, where it played music that few of its hearers understood or really wanted to like. For musical inspiration on the march the troops relied on their own voices, a sergeant starting up a strident wail and the men coming in on the chorus.

The only place in the world where that form of carbon known as the black diamond, or bort, is found in marketable quantities is in Bahia, in South America. Curse Said to Rest on Possessor of Diamond.

The large diamond which Mr. Kruger took with him when he left South Africa has a very curious history. It originally belonged to Meshhesh, a Basuto chief, from whom it was extorted by T'Chaka, the Zulu king. T'Chaka's brother killed him and stole it. The brother came to grief, and the gem passed into the possession of a Zulu chief, who soon afterwards was assassinated. The natives say that no less than sixteen of the successive possessors of the diamond either were killed or driven out of the country. The diamond was then seen by white men, who set out to get it. A party of whites attacked the natives who had the stone and a fierce fight ensued, in which 300 lives, mostly native, were lost.

Memela, a native chief, took the gem and concealed it in a wound which he had received in battle. Afterwards Memela was caught by the Boers and set to work as a slave. Kruger, hearing his story, released him, and in gratitude Memela gave the stone to his liberator. Some years passed, and then Kruger shared the fate which had overtaken all the former possessors of the diamond who had not been killed—he was driven from power and forced to leave his native country. Where the fatal diamond is now is not certain, though it is known that the ex-president of the Transvaal has parted with it. Some say that it is in the coffers of the Vatican, and some that it was sold to the Emperor of Austria, and is among the crown jewels at Vienna.

It is said to be 200 carats in weight, but is not perfect. Its history is one which would not recommend it as a talisman to anyone of a superstitious turn of mind. It is almost as gruesome a possession as that hideous little Indian idol, the destruction of which Mme. Carnot ordered in her will. This idol was given to President Carnot by a friend, who laughingly told him a legend attached to it, which was to the effect that its possession would attain supreme power and then die by the knife. The idol had belonged to the Rajahs of Khadjurao, of whom five certainly—perhaps more—died by the knife of the assassin.

Accident on Gallows Looked On as an Omen.

"Although I never saw but one hanging, I witnessed a sight that even professional hangmen have not seen," said A. A. Albrechton of Columbus, Miss. "It was at my home. A young Mississippian named Purdy had been convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to hang. The evidence was wholly circumstantial, and before he was accused of that crime the young man had borne an excellent reputation. He was also connected by marriage with some of the best people in the state.

"Nevertheless, he was sentenced to hang and the governor would not reprieve him. There were two factions in the community, one believing him guilty, and the other considering him innocent. The latter talked of rescue, but it was all talk.

"The scaffold was not inclosed and when young Purdy ascended the gallows he walked erect and fearless. He denied his guilt, and all who saw him were compelled to admit his bearing was that of an innocent man. The black cap was pulled over his face, the sheriff pulled a lever, and the next we saw was a man getting up from the ground, snatching the black cap from his head and declaring dramatically: 'God has proved my innocence.'

"The rope had broken. That was enough. Former enemies turned into adherents, and before the sheriff could again take his prisoner to the gallows and get another rope he was in the center of a crowd of thousands of people, all of whom were swearing there were not sheriffs enough in Mississippi to hang an innocent man.

"Purdy was taken home, and an escort of 250 armed and determined men went with him and remained until there was no danger of any further proceedings being taken. Without any legal formalities the matter was allowed to drop and Purdy is living eighteen miles from Columbia, respected and happy.

"Joy almost killed his wife when she saw him alive at the time she expected his corpse to be brought home. To say Purdy is guilty is now almost as much as a man's life is worth down there."

Circus Giant the Cause of Destructive Flood.

"The greatest of all giants," said the old circus man, "was a great feller for goin' in bathing; he never neglected a chance for that.

But at the same time he had to use some sort of gumption, or we had to use it for him, about where he went in, on account of the danger there was from overflows caused by his displacement of the water. I well remember how we first came to realize this.

"About twenty rods or so below the show's winter quarters there was a little pond formed by damming a brook that ran through our place. There was a small grist mill on this pond, turned by one of those old-fashioned overshot water wheels.

"The giant walked down to this little pond one warm spring day just before we took the road that year, never thinking for a minute of what must happen if he jumped into a small body of water like that suddenly and plunged in.

"Snakes and alligators! The pond overflowed all around, and started the grist mill off its foundations and carried away the old wheel—it was like a flood you know, of course, down there at that end—and done about $750 damages.

"Well! That opened our eyes you know, to the necessity of using some sort of caution about where to let the giant go in swimmin'. Obviously, it wouldn't do for us to let him jump in anywhere, into any little bit of a pond that we might come across; it would cost us too much money.

"And so he and the old man had an understanding that he wouldn't go in any where without the old man's permission; and we used to keep him out of the water all we could after that, except when we showed at towns on the Great Lakes, or at places on the coast."

FIREPLACE AS A MONUMENT.

In the old Smith graveyard, in the town of Windham, Me.—which contains eighteen graveyards—Charles H. Hunnewell has set up an extraordinary monument. In the middle of the lot he has set up on a brick case a large iron open fireplace, with the long crane hanging in the upper part. "This fireplace did duty for years in the old Hunnewell house, which is still occupied by Mr. Hunnewell and his family" says the Kennebec Journal. "The old bricks in front of the fireplace are the ones originally used in the house, as are the andirons which impart to this strange monument such a—if the word is permissible in this connection—hospitable look. The frame which is inserted in this great open fireplace contains a printed record of eight generations of Hunnewells, or from 1654 to Nov. 1, 1901, a period of 247 years. In addition, the frame contains—surrounding the family record on all sides—pictures of some of the oxen, sows, hogs and poultry owned by Mr. Hunnewell and which drew prizes at the fairs. There is also a large picture representing a farm scene in winter. The frame contains pictures of seven hens, two hogs, four cows, six oxen in seven pictures, and one group picture of various domestic animals.

A New York Police Captain.

A police captain who was dismissed from the force this week was responsible for many amusing stories based on his use—or misuse—of words, says the New York Evening Post. Once he asserted that he "never paid any attention to unanimous letters." On another occasion he is said to have referred to his possession of a "veracious" appetite. Third avenue, he told a man one day, "runs paralyzed to Lexington avenue." At another time, one story goes, he was reading to an outgoing platoon a list of some clothing that had been reported stolen. One item was a kersey coat. "Next on the list, men," he announced, in his rich brogue, "is a kerosene coat." It was this captain who directed a patrolman to open a window in the station house and "putrefy the air."

It was not this captain, but a sergeant now dead, who, while testifying in a trial at police headquarters, asked permission of the commissioner to correct his testimony, saying:

"Mr. Commissioner, I wish to retract the veracity of my former statement."

He was a player of the intuitive sort and could never be induced to take up the profound theoretical studies in which most German chess players delight.

CASE NO. 30,611.

C. E. Boles, Dealer in Grain and Feed; Address, 505 South Water Street, Akron, Ohio—Cured in 1896.

Mr. Boles says: "Ever since the Civil War I have had attacks of kidney and bladder trouble, decidedly worse during the last two or three years. Although I consulted physicians, some of whom told me I was verging on Bright's disease, and I was continually using standard remedies, the excruciating aching just across the kidneys, which radiated to the shoulder blades still existed. As might be expected, when my kidneys were in a disturbed condition there was a distressing and inconvenient difficulty with the action of the kidney secretions. A box of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Lamparter & Co.'s drug store, brought such a decided change within a week that I continued the treatment. The last attack, and it was particularly aggravated, disappeared."

Cure Confirmed Four Years After.

Four years later Mr. Boles says: In the spring of 1896 I made a public statement of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy cured me of terrible aching in the kidneys, in the small of my back, in the muscles of the shoulder blades, and in the limbs. During the years that have gone by I can conscientiously say there have been no recurrences of my old trouble. My confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills is stronger than ever, not only from my personal experience, but from the experience of many others in Akron, which have come to my notice."

A FREE TRIAL of this great Kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boles, will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A Philosophical Maiden.

Philosophy may not be a feminine gift, but there is one tiny maiden who is never content unless she knows the "Cause why" of things. She endeavors, as a rule, to solve the small problems which come within her range of vision herself, and does not ask until she has given up all hope of answering the question herself. Greatuncle Robert, who was at the small maiden's house the other day, is a great favorite, with a shining bald head, a long beard and a pleasant smile. He had been lying on the couch for some time, and the little girl had been sitting near him in deep meditation. Finally, she drew a deep sigh, as of great disappointment, and drew near the couch, evidently preparing to ask a question.

"Well, what is it, little one?" asked Uncle Robert.

Red Snow.

In the arctic regions early explorers were astonished to find large quantities of red snow; but the phenomenon is now familiar to men of science, who know that red snow, like a green garden fence, is due to the presence of unicellular algae, the only difference being in the coloring matter of the protoplasm. It is said that acres of snow are frequently covered in a single night by these tiny plants.—Good Words.

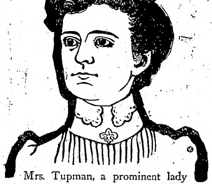
ST. JACOB'S OIL.

In cases where bronchitis has become chronic from want of proper treatment in the earlier stages, there is nothing so good as Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, in conjunction with which is strongly advised the use of St. Jacobs Oil as an outward application along the front of the throat, from close up under the chin to well down to the top of the chest; the one remedy assists the other and as intended, they work in complete unison. The wonderful penetrating power of St. Jacobs Oil enables it to reach the adhesion of foreign matter, which lines the bronchial tubes and which makes breathing more and more difficult. As these adhesions become inflamed and enlarged St. Jacobs Oil causes such adhesions to break away, making expectoration easier and more free. Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, drank slowly and very hot, soothes and heals the parts, is comforting and quieting, stops the cough and relieves the breathing. This manner of treatment (and there is no other two remedies that will work together so successfully), reaches the difficulty from the outside and the inside at the same time. St. Jacobs Oil reaches the roots of the adhesion and assists Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea in clearing them; then both remedies act in unison in healing and curing. The above remarks apply with equal force in cases of asthma, croup, whooping cough, enlarged tonsils and all bronchial affections. Every family should have St. Jacob's Oil and Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea always in the house in order that they may be promptly used in the first stages. Often the maladies develop with wonderful rapidity and complications take place with equal suddenness.

Women are fond of bargains, yet a cheap man is never popular with the fair sex.



Mrs. Tupman, a prominent lady of Richmond, Va., a great sufferer with woman's troubles, tells of her cure by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For some years I suffered with backache, severe bearing-down pains, leucorrhœa, and falling of the womb. I tried many remedies, but nothing gave any positive relief.

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in June, 1901. When I had taken the first half bottle, I felt a vast improvement, and have now taken ten bottles with the result that I feel like a new woman. When I commenced taking the Vegetable Compound I felt all worn out and was fast approaching complete nervous collapse. I weighed only 98 pounds. Now I weigh 109½ pounds and am improving every day. I gladly testify to the benefits received."—MRS. R. C. TUPMAN, 423 West 30th St., Richmond, Va.

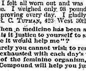
When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me"?

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Mrs. W. H. Pelham, Jr., 108 E. Baker St., Richmond, Va., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must say that I do not believe there is any female medicine to compare with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I return to you my heartfelt thanks for what your medicine has done for me. Before taking the Vegetable Compound I was so badly off that I thought I could not live much longer. The little work I had to do was a burden to me. I suffered with irregular menstruation and leucorrhœa, which caused an irritation of the parts. I looked like one who had consumption, but I do not look like that now, and I owe it all to your wonderful medicine.

"I took only six bottles, but it has made me feel like a new person. I thank God that there is such a female helper as you."



Be it, therefore, believed by all women who are ill that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they should take. It has stood the test of time, and it has hundreds of thousands of cures to its credit. Women should consider it unwise to use any other medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women. Perhaps she has just the knowledge that will help your case—try her to-day—it costs nothing.

This business is not an undeveloped prospect. It is a demonstrated dividend payer. This is the largest business in the world producing Men's Goodyear Welt (Hand Sewed Process) shoes, and has always been immensely profitable. There has not been a year in the past twelve when the business has not earned in actual cash much more than the amount necessary to pay 7 per cent annual dividend on the preferred stock of $1,000,000.

The annual business now is $5,500,000, it is increasing very rapidly, and will equal $7,000,000 for the year 1903. The factory is now turning out 7,500 pairs of shoes per day, and an addition to the plant is being built which will increase the capacity to 10,000 pairs per day.

TO SETTLE LIBERIA

MANY AMERICAN NEGROES PROPOSE TO EMIGRATE.

Well Organized Movement for Colonization of That Country on Foot—Thorough Investigation of Possibilities Being Made.

Some new ideas relating to the transplanting of American negroes in Liberia have been introduced by Rev. P. J. Harris and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Green, three Mississippi negroes of intelligence and business capacity, who expect to reside permanently in Liberia, and give all their time to the interests of the emigration of their race to that country. These agents before any negroes are invited to go to Liberia are to make a thorough study of various parts of the country to ascertain what locations in elevated and healthful sections of the republic, away from the coast, are desirable as homes for Americans. The effort will be made to build up vigorous and self-supporting settlements, whose chances for success will be greatly improved by the fact that favorable conditions are to be found before Americans are invited to go to the new regions.

Mr. Green reports that about 1,000 negroes, substantial farmers, artisans skilled in various trades and other persons who will make desirable colonists are ready to start for Liberia as soon as they are informed that suitable regions have been secured. No negroes except those who are qualified to do good and skillful work will be permitted to emigrate to the proposed settlements. The information obtained by the agents in Liberia will be circulated among the members of the African league, as the emigration company is called, so that at all stages of progress everyone interested may know just what is being done to start them off successfully and just what conditions they will meet in the new country.

Liberians are very desirous to encourage immigration from America. There is no doubt of the large agricultural resources of the country and of the fact that American negroes can make comfortable homes there, but the conditions in the republic are different from those in this country. A great deal of the emigration thus far has been haphazard and badly planned and on the whole the various colonizing enterprises have not been very successful. It remains to be seen what measures of success will be attained by this better organized and apparently well-planned movement to provide suitable opportunities to a large number of black Americans to return to the land of their fathers.

New Substitute for Coal.

A St. Louis man, says the Globe-Democrat, claims to have hit upon a substitute for anthracite coal, which will render sections contiguous to bituminous coal fields forever independent of strikers and similar disturbances in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and the hard coal regions. Tests conducted scientifically, and under all variety of conditions have demonstrated, it is claimed, that briquettes manufactured from soft coal slack, first subjected to a cleaning process, then molded into bricks by the use of a patent binder under high pressure, have all of the good qualities of hard coal. Briquettes are manufactured from slack, or, rather, the refuse which comes from bituminous coal mines, and can be produced at about $7.50 a ton. Scientists have been trying for years to discover a process by which this product could be made.

The Longing for Savagery.

The white pariah is one of the most difficult problems by which the great powers owning colonial dependencies in Asia, and in Africa are confronted. It is a problem that has come home to the United States since the latter has added the Philippine islands to its possessions. For now and then the American authorities in the Orient find themselves called upon to deal with some white man who has allied himself to the Philippine insurgents. In almost every instance, when captured, deserters have given the same explanation of their conduct, namely, that they had yielded to the temptation held out to them of a life where they would be free to follow every instinct of their nature, without any regard for the restrictions, the prejudices and the laws of civilized society.

Did Carlyle Have a Bad Temper?

Poor crochety old Thomas Carlyle has been so much belabored as a man of violent temper that it is interesting and just to note the words of Mrs. Broadfoot, his housemaid, in reference to his temper. The Cornhill Magazine quotes the former maid as saying: "I could have lived with him all my days, and it always makes me angry when I read, as I sometimes do, that he was 'bad tempered,' and 'gey ill to get on with.' He was the very reverse in my opinion. I never would have left him when I did had I not been going to get married."

The Conjugal Paradox.

"We don't seem to be really one, Bella," complained the young husband. "You insist on having your own way and your own notions about things, just as you did before we were married."

"Don't you know, dear," said the young wife, leaning over the back of his chair and smoothing the hair over his temples with her soft hand, "that the more distinctively we are two the more completely we are one?"

And she crooned to him till he was almost convinced.—Chicago Tribune.

The conversation turns on people notorious for telling falsehoods.

"Well, that makes the fourth," said her husband, skeptically.—Judge.

The Teacher Was Quick.

Chicago once had as its superintendent of city schools a bachelor named Howland, whose gruffness of manner and love of neatness were proverbial. Going into the room of a young and attractive teacher one day, Mr. Howland took notice of an untidy desk and a carelessly-arranged book shelf, and, pointing his finger at them, queried, brusquely:

"What kind of a housekeeper do you think you would make?"

"Why, Mr. Howland, are you looking for one?" was the humorously-quizzical reply.—New York Times.

No Need for Money.

Standing at the corner of Thirty-sixth street and Broadway one warm evening was a stolid-looking man. He was gazing intently at the windows of the recently-opened branch of the Eastern Trust company. After looking over the large letters, he spoke right up—unconscious of the fact that he had a listener—reading from the lettered windows:

"'Capital, $1,000,000; surplus, $1,000,000; interest allowed on deposits.' Sure, and what do they want deposits fer, with all that money?"—New York Times.

Helped Everybody.

Gainesville, Tex., Oct. 27th.—Mrs. L. E. Burton, formerly of Eureka, Kansas, has been at 507 Gladstone street, this city, for some time. While here Mrs. Burton has been the means of doing much good by introducing to her sick friends a remedy which it seems is very popular in Kansas, but which has not been very much heard of in this neighborhood. It is called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in every case where it has been used it has produced wonderful results.

Mrs. Burton has good reason to speak well of Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they have done much for her and her family. She says: "I must tell everybody what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me and for as many of my friends as have used them.

"I had a very bad case of kidney trouble, for which I had been doctoring for a long time without benefit. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills recommended. I tried them and was completely cured. My mother and my brother were ill, and they took them and were soon well again.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have done much for us."

Too Strong a Negative.

"It's pretty hard to select a wife nowadays," remarked Mr. Con Sect; "the average girl of to-day doesn't know enough."

"I've found," replied Mr. Mittens, "that they 'No!' entirely too much."—Philadelphia Record.

GOVERNOR OF OREGON Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family For Colds and Grip.

CAPITOL BUILDING SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From the Executive Officer of Oregon.

Pe-ru-na is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Pe-ru-na as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every State in the Union. Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan, the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Pe-ru-na is the catarrh remedy of the age. The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Pe-ru-na is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Pe-ru-na not only cures catarrh, but prevents. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Pe-ru-na. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SALEM, May 9, 1898.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Dear Sirs—I have had occasion to use your Pe-ru-na medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Yours very truly, W. M. Lord.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Pe-ru-na for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Pe-ru-na to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

STEENERSON DATES.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson, Republican candidate for congressman, will address meetings in Red Lake county as follows:

Red Lake Falls, Friday evening, Oct. 31.

St. Hilaire, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 1.

Thief River Falls, Saturday evening, Nov. 1.

Mr. Steenerson especially desires the presence of laboring men and farmers as he has something of interest to say to them.

Let's have a change!

A new broom sweeps clean.

Don't forget to vote next Tuesday.

J. J. Weeks is a home man. Vote for him.

Vote for men qualified to fill the offices to which they aspire.

James A. Wilson will receive almost a unanimous vote in the country.

A vote for James Wilson is a vote for good government in school affairs of this county.

It is time to have a change in Red Lake County. Vote the Republican county ticket.

Give the Republicans a chance in this county and see if they cannot better conditions.

Vote for Smiley for county surveyor, and have a Red Lake county man do the surveying for this county.

John King, who is telling all the people how to vote, has not been in this county for so very long, either.

If you think Jim Hill should be entitled to special privlages vote for his candidate, L. A. Rosing, for governor.

There is no doubting the fact that Jim Hill has done a great deal for the Northwest, but he is not the only one.

Next Tuesday is election day. The polls will be open from 9 in the morning until 5 in the evening. Be sure and vote.

Candidates who go around abusing their opponents do not do their own cause any good or their opponents any harm.

If the big corporations should succeed in defeating Gov. Van Sant, they will then attempt to defeat Theodore Roosevelt.

Jim Hill's attack upon Senator Nelson makes him more popular with the people of Thief River Falls than ever before.

For the benefit of a few timid citizens, we will state that John King is not the whole population of Red Lake County. There are others.

Vote for James Wilson for county superintendent of schools. He is the man for this position and should receive your support regardless of politics.

"Watch out for roorbacks," says the Red Lake Falls Courier. As the Courier is the only paper in the county trying to influence opinion by lying, the advice is timley.

Wilson, Weeks, McIntyre and Smiley, the four candidates on the Republican ticket who reside in this city, should receive your support. Stand by the home candidates.

The Red Lake Falls Courier abuses every candidate on the Republican state and county ticket, and then appeals to Republicans to vote for Ford for county auditor. Nufsaid.

There is no good reason why one gang should run the affairs of this county for ever—especially when the only thing accomplished is increased taxation and no improvements.

Vote for Van Sant and Steenerson and against the merger and trusts. Also vote for the candidates on the Republican county ticket who are loyally supporting these men.

Vote for E. J. Swedback for for state sentaor. Mr. Swedback will stand with Gov. VanSant, and also vote to return Moses E. Clapp to the United States senate.

Now is the time for people to throw aside politics and be patriots. Stand by the man who believes James J. Hill has no more right to break the laws of this state than a common man.

Red Lake county has been run by the Populists since its organization. The rate of taxation here is higher than in any other county in the state. Don't you think it is about time for a change?

Where does all the money come from that the Democrats are using in this campaign and why is it being poured out so lavishly? It comes from the Northern Securities Company. There is no other possible source.

The issue before the people of Minnesota is whether they will have S. R. Van Sant as governor or turn over the state to the railroad merger monopoly that is pouring out its money to defeat him.

The Democrats of Thief River Falls have promised to give Frank Jeffers a majority of the votes in this city. Turn out and do your duty next Tuesday and see that James A. Wilson receives a handsome home majority.

Owing to sickness in his family J. J. Weeks has not been able to do any campaigning during the past week. That, however, should not prevent his friends from turning out and giving him a handsome majority on election day.

Every person in the city of Thief River Falls should feel grateful to Senator Moses E. Clapp for the work he has done in endeavoring to secure the opening of the Red Lake reservation. If you wish to indorse Senator Clapp, vote for E. J. Swedback, the Republican candidate for state senator, who goes upon record as favoring the election of Mr. Clapp for another term.

The last issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette contains an excellent picture of Thomas Germo, Republican candidate for county attorney of Red Lake county. Mr. Germo is a former Blue Earth Co. boy, graduate of the law department of the State University, and withal a man who can be relied upon. The voters of Red Lake county will make no mistake in selecting a man of Mr. Germo's make-up and well-known ability. Blue Earth County Enterprise.

There is no question but that the Democrats are carrying on in Minnesota the most expensive campaign ever run here by any party. No one in the state questions this, it is admitted even by the Democratic committee itself. In one of the smaller cities, a division point on the Great Northern road, which is one of the merger roads, there is a good reason to believe that $10,000.00 has been placed at the disposal of the local workers.

Vote for James McIntyre.

It is time that the people knew what this fight in Minnesota has become. Mr. Rosing is no longer to be considered. It would not matter who he was, nor where his birth, nor who his ancestors, nor what his ability. The fight now being carried on is not to elect him but to defeat and humiliate and punish Governor Van Sant, who has stood for the people's interests against a giant railroad monopoly. It is between Governor Van Sant and the Northern Securities Company representing the merger railroad. On which side are the voters?

L. A. Rosing, the Democratic candidate for governor, is a very nice fellow whom we all esteem as a gentleman, but as a candidate of the railroad and corporate interests, it would be very bad public policy to elect him governor of this great common-wealth. There may have been some excuse for voting for John Lind, who even his enemies admit had some of the characteristics of a statesman, but there is no comparison between Rosing and Lind in that respect. If you wish to be on the safe side and vote for a man who has been tried and found not wanting, vote for that grand old man of the people, Gov. S. R. Van Sant.—Elk River Star—News.

James McIntyre, the Republican candidate for judge of probate has not made a personal canvass of this city, having put in most of his time in other parts of the county where he is not so well known, and it is gratifying to know that he has everywhere met with a very cordial reception. He believes that all in this city are acquainted with the aspirants for the office of judge of probate, and that they can do their duty without being "button-holed." Mr. McIntyre has conducted a very clean and honorable campaign, which has won for him the respect of all. He has not gone around abusing his opponents or their friends, but has confined his remarks to the points at issue. He will be elected, so his friends confidently think, by one of the largest majorities of anyone on the ticket.

Here are two items taken from the Wylie correspondence to the Red Lake Falls Gazette, and indicate how the vote in that section will go:

The Republican Rally Friday night was well attended. Speeches were made by Messrs McIntyre, Germo, Simons, Wilson and Smiley. The music furnished by a mixed choir from Thief River Falls was very good. Both speakers and singers received an ovation which they certainly deserved.

The Populists held a rally here Monday night. The Red Lake Falls band furnished excellent music, and speeches were made by Jeffers, Grady and others. The music was enjoyed very much and while the arguments presented by the speakers were somewhat shopworn and dry this was remedied by liquid refreshments being served after the entertainment was over.

Thos. Germo is meeting with much encouragement in his campaign for County Attorney. The farmers like Tom. He is a farmer's son. He has followed the plow, husked corn, split rails and generally followed the career of a husky farmer boy. After dark when the family had retired, Tom was seen under the evening lamp, studying. He studied and worked all the time, and finally secured by his own unaided efforts a fine education. He is, however, still plain Tom Germo, and the humblest farmer who meets him is given the hand-clasp of fellowship. Everybody acknowledges his ability and his unimpeachable honesty. The voters of Red Lake County will honor themselves if they elect Tom Germo county attorney on the 4th day of November next.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

DEMOCRATIC FALSEHOODS LAID BARE!

Personal Abuse and Villification of Governor Van Sant Their Only Campaign—Republican Campaign of State Issues Impregnable and Unassailed.

The state campaign is about to close and we briefly review the contest.

On the Republican side it has been straightforward, manly and above board and along lines of clean and honorable politics.

The Republicans have frankly and openly given an account to the voters of what the party has done while managing the business of the state, and Governor Van Sant has asked re-election on his record—a record so good that the Democrats have not been able to find a flaw in it.

On the other hand, the Democrats have made their three months' campaign on canards, roorbacks, personalities and straightout willful and malicious lying.

The word "lie" is a strong one. It is a good old Anglo-Saxon word, however, and no other fits the occasion. We use it advisedly and propose to prove that it applies to the stuff the Democratic committee have been publishing and that they are now sending out broadcast over the state in big posters.

WHY MERGER RAILROADS HATE REPUBLICANS.

Soon after the campaign opened the Republicans found that they did not have Mr. Rosing to fight, nor the Democratic party, but the merger railroads as represented by the Northern Securities company of New Jersey. This foreign corporation simply made a tool of Mr. Rosing and his committee with which to try to punish Governor Van Sant and the Republicans for opposing their great stock-jobbing scheme whereby they were adding $200,000,000 of water to the stock of these railroads and proposed to make that much more clear profit out of the already burdened producers of the Northwest. When men are prevented from stealing $200,000,000, they naturally curse the law, and all there is in this merger scheme is not "love of the people" but an attempt to turn $200,000,000 of water into two hundred million gold dollars.

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN DICTATED BY NORTHERN SECURITIES CO.

The Northern Securities company put itself in the place of Mr. Rosing as the candidate for governor of the state of Minnesota. Its organ, the St. Paul Globe, owned solely by the president of the company, became the Democratic organ. One of its reporters, paid by the president of the Northern Securities company, wrote the full page biography of Mr. Rosing. A man paid by the president of the Northern Securities company has for weeks accompanied Mr. Rosing all over the state as his confidential adviser and to send in glowing accounts of his meetings.

This paper, directly representing and personally owned by the president of the Northern Securities company, has descended to the politics of the gutter. Its methods would make a highwayman blush and for replying to its attacks, we perhaps owe an apology to the people of the state. But we wish to appeal from the villification and assassin-like methods of this trust-owned organ to the sense of fairness of honor and right of the people.

A BOGUS INTERVIEW.

This Democratic trust organ opened its attacks with lie No. 1: It was a bogus interview in which Governor Van Sant was quoted as opposed to the Pennsylvania coal miners. A large extra edition was sent out and they were prepared to plaster the state with it. Governor Van Sant's prompt and vigorous denial and demand for a retraction, forced an apology but no extra papers containing it were sent out.

PUBLIC FRANCHISE ASSESSMENTS.

Lie No. 2 accused the governor of voting against an increase of the Twin City Street Railway assessments, but the records show just the contrary and that he did vote for an increase of $822,000 on the assessment of last year, making the street car company's total assessment $5,572,941 and increasing its taxes about $25,000. In 1896 this assessment was but $1,875,000, and this immense increase was made possible by the law passed in 1897 by the Republican legislature permitting the state board of equalization to raise individual assessments. Because of this Republican law passed to reach just this case this great increase has been made. Moreover the record shows that the governor voted to increase the Minneapolis Gas company's assessment $250,000, making a total of $900,000, and the St. Paul Gas company's assessment $125,000, making a total of $800,000. So much for that lie.

THE RAILROAD GROSS EARNINGS TAX.

Lie No. 3 was the statement that Governor Van Sant and the Republican committee so worded the proposed gross earnings tax law that it would reduce the tax on railroads. This opposition to railroad taxation was a part of the bargain whereby the Democrats got railroad money to run Mr. Rosing's campaign. But when it was shown that ex-Governor John Lind was one of the men who drew the law and who approved of its wording they were obliged to drop this effort to keep down the tax on railroads.

VOL. XIX. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1902. NUMBER 44

BIG VICTORY

Red Lake County Goes Republican for the First Time.

Both Van Sant and Steenerson have Majorities.

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Latest returns from all parts of the state indicate that Van Sant is elected by about 70,000 majority.

Crookston, Nov. 6.—Halvor Steenerson is elected congressman by about 8000 majority. The whole Ninth District was carried by Van Sant.

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Eight of the Republican congressman in the state were elected: John Lind, Democratic, was elected congressman in the Minneapolis district.

E. J. Swedback was elected senator in this district by a small majority over Swanson.

A. D. Stephens was elected senator in the Polk county district by about 1,000 majority.

L. C. Simons carried Red Lake county for representative and is elected by a large majority.

The vote in Thief River Falls by wards is as follows.

	1st	2nd	3rd
Steenerson	99	62	61
McKinnon	32	63	39
Moen	49	20	..
Swedback	99	55	50
Swanson	77	83	53
Simons	92	67	56
Krohn	79	64	41
Peters	43	21	17
Ford	83	61	40
Zeh	56	63	53
Tanberg	130	82	85
Hatten	40	39	20
Sampson	53	24	23
Kelly	121	117	98
Crompe	82	59	45
Gibeau	95	82	50
McIntyre	87	41	43
Tarrant	87	95	62
Germo	115	91	59
Grady	62	63	48
Weeks	146	82	65
Perroult	30	48	39
Smiley	122	103	68
Hagglund	54	34	35
Wilson	181	98	96
Jeffers	95	94	86

The county ticket elected is as follows:

James E. Ford for Auditor by about 300 majority.

O. T. Tanberg for county treasurer by a large majority.

Charles E. Sampson for sheriff by about 100 plurality.

Sam Gibeau for register of deeds by a about 200 majority.

N. W. Tarrant for Judge of Probate by about 175 plurality.

F. A. Grady for county attorney by about a majority of 14. This may be changed by the official count.

For clerk of court Joseph Perrault by a good sized majority.

For county surveyor W. C. Smiley by a large majority.

For superintendent of schools Frank Jeffers is elected by a good majority.

The new county commissioners elected are as follows: Ole J. Johnson, James Sutor and Louis Falardeau.

Van Sant's total vote in Red Lake county was 1203, while Rosing received but 852, a gain for Van Sant of over 1400 from the vote of two years ago.

Steenerson's total vote in this county was 1303, while McKinnon received but 428 and Moen 389.

Swedback carried Beltrami county for state senator over Swanson by 1100 majority and is elected by a majority of 650.

Ohio went Republican by over 100,000, and Tom Johnson was defeated.

Odell, Republican, was elected governor of New York state.

The next congress is Republican by a safe majority.

Massachusetts gives a Republican majority of about 40,000.

New Hampshire and Rhode Island both go Republican, but by reduced majorities.

The Republicans carried Pennsylvania by 165,000

Indiana went Republican by about 25,000.

Wyoming went Republican by a large majority.

The four propositions submitted to the people of Minnesota seem to be defeated. The 4 per cent gross earnings tax will not muster half the votes cast, unless later counties greatly increase the vote. After the strenuous campaign for it in two legislatures, and the great interest apparently manifested all over the state, hardly half the voters touched the proposition at all, and from 10 to 20 per cent of those voting aga inst it. It must have a majority of all the votes cast at the election to become a law A similar fate seems to have overtaken the taxation amendment to the constitution. In most of the counties reported it got less votes than the gross earning's bill.

The result in Nebraska is quite close.

Iowa elected all the Republican candidates for congress.

White, the Republican candidate for governor was elected governor of North Dakota by about 6,000.

The Republicans carried South Dakota by over 20,000 majority.

Connecticut is Republican by 10,000.

Robert La Follette, governor of Wisconsin, and Samuel R. Van Sant, governor of Minnesota, now know, if they did'nt before, that there are no tricks in politics that can make votes so fast as fearless devotion to the right.

James C. Haynes, Democrat, was elected mayor of Minneapolis by a large majority.

SUDDEN DEATH

Senator W. B. Dickey Died Saturday Night.

Senator W. B. Dickey, of Zumbrota, who purchased section 16 in the town of Numedal of the state at the sale of school land held last fall, and has since been engaged in farming, died very suddenly last Saturday night of heart failure. Mr. Dickey had been around and at work all day as usual, and died while in bed at night. The remains were taken yesterday to Zumbrota for burial.

Mr. Dickey was a member of the last senate and the blue book contains the following regarding him:

"Wm. B. Dickey (Republican) was born in Smithfield, Madison county, N. Y., in 1843; came to Minnesota in 1859. Served in the Civil War three years and five months; was discharged as first lieutenant. He has also held several offices of trust at Zumbrota, where he now resides and is engaged in the mercantile business.

Notice.

The Post Office Department has issued and advertisemen inviting proposals for carrying the mail on all star routes in Minnesota for the term of four years commencing July 1st, 1903.

Two new features are incorporated, viz: limiting consideration of bids to those persons who will agree to reside on or contiguous to the routes and give their personal attendtion to the same, thereby placing the service in the hands of local men so they may receive the entire amount paid the Department. They will also be required to deliver mail into boxes along the routes.

Full information relative to the advertisement and the conditions under which such box delivery can be made may be obtained from any postmaster.

The following is a list of the routes in this vicinity. For schedule, frequency, amount of bond etc., see advertisment on file in the post office.

Thief River Falls to Germantown, 21 miles and back six times a week; Thief River to Breeze 27½ miles and back 3 times a week Tweet to Thief River Falls, 8 miles and back six times a week; Strip to Thief River Falls 8.5 miles and back 3 times a week.

Proposals will be received by Second Assistant Postmaster General at Washington, D. C. until 4. p. m. Dec. 2 1902.

He's a Favorite.

A candidate for county office in Ohio has introduced a novel and what seems to be a very useful plan of electioneering, says an exchange. In his rounds he takes with him in his buggy a ploughman. When he hails a farmer in the field the ploughman takes the plough or cultivator and the work goes right on while the farmer stands in the shade of a hedgerow and listens to the tale the candidate tells. It works like a charm.

The North, for Education.

The astounding statement is made by the census bureau that a comparison of native-born and foreign-born children shows the greatest percentage of illiteracy among the former. This is explained, by the fact that the majority of the foreign born children live in the northern states, where the public school system is vastly superior to that of the south

Albertina Kowalski, of Turtle Lake, Wis., is plaintiff in one, and Herman Smith, of Minneapolis, is the other. The Modern Woodmen of America is defendant in both cases. A little over a year ago Albert Smith was killed in the woods. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen. On joining he was asked whom he wished to name as his beneficiary, and he specified his sister. But he did not know her married name. Her first name, he said, was Tina, so the name was written in the policy as Christina Johnson, as that was the name he believed she then bore. It developed that the sister's name is Albertina, and her husband's name Kowalski. Herman Smith, father of the decedent, began a suit for the recovery of the amount of the insurance, alleging that no beneficiary was named in the will. Peace Is in Sight.

Washington, Nov. 2. — The reports from Panama that Gen. Herrera, the revolutionary leader, had arranged for a conference with Gov. Salazar with the view of bringing about peace caused no surprise to the Colombian legation here. The legation officials, however, are nevertheless gratified at the early prospect of peace and hope for a speedy resumption of normal trade conditions.

THE OLD HERB GATHERER.

Stiff-jointed, wrinkled, old and wan,
Once fair perhaps; ah, me, who knows!
Gliding graceful as a swan,
Breaking hearts. Ah, me, who knows!

Her husband died long years ago;
Does she still mourn? Ah, me, who knows!
Three children—headstones in a row—
Has time stilled grief Ah, me, who knows!

In summer, she roams o'er the hills,
Light heart or heavy? Ah, who knows!
She gathers herbs to cure all ills;
Can aught cure heartache? Ah, who knows!

Do scent of flowers and song of birds
Bring comfort to her? Ah, who knows!
Silent and chary of her words—
If depths are stirred. Ah, who knows!

Mrs. Hyssop's First Boarder.

BY ALBERT J. KLINK.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The Algonquin was not so pretentious a hostelry as its name might lead one to believe. It was a modest two-storied affair, placed well back from the street, and presided over by a rather spacious example of the gentler sex, who lived simply and happily under the pungent name of Mrs. Winifred Hyssop. This estimable lady had been a widow now for two years, during which time the Algonquin had been planted, had taken root, and branched into a cosy, comfortable boarding house. From its very inception the rooms were always taken, and the table always held its limit of satisfied eaters. Mrs. Hyssop was a model landlady in more senses than one.

She was now sitting enthroned on the front veranda—enthroned, because no other word fits so aptly when she chooses to adorn the front veranda.

"I do believe he's taking up with both the girls," was her soliloquy, the "he" being the boarder who was the first one domiciled under her humble roof. "And I wonder which will get him? My, but it is exciting! Oh, here comes Fanny now."

Fanny looked worried as she came up the steps. She drew a chair up to Mrs. Hyssop and sat down.

"Are you tired, Fanny?" the latter asked. "And did you meet with much success to-day?"

Fanny's success depended upon disposing of gaudy fancywork made by her own nimble fingers, which, to judge from her work, numbered more than the allotted supply of thumbs.

Fanny sighed. Mrs. Hyssop knew well what this meant.

"It is hard, I know," she sympathized, "to get along in this world. Especially when one is alone," she ended, casting a side glance at the perturbed Fanny.

Mrs. Hyssop hoped this would tow Fanny into the matrimonial channel. And a prologue in this direction did sprout, for the girl sighed again, and said:

"I would lose hope altogether if it wasn't for—for——"

Fanny's face went red. Then she said in a stage whisper:

"For Mr. Barnston."

"Ah!" breathed Mrs. Hyssop, very much as if she had had a drink of some refreshing beverage.

"You must have noticed," resumed Fanny, "that he has been attentive to me—quite attentive. As I have no mother, I thought all along that I would some day come to you, who have been so very kind to me, and confide in you and ask your advice. You know more about Mr. Barnston than I do. He told me he had been boarding here for two years."

"Yes, for two whole years," put in Mrs. Hyssop. "Ever since I opened up."

"You must have had a rare chance to study him," Fanny said. "You must know if he has any—any qualities that are not—not—good."

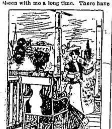
Mrs. Hyssop sat more erect. She turned her head to one side pensively.

Fanny now came to the point with almost superhuman abruptness, asking:

"Do you think I ought to marry him, Mrs. Hyssop?"

The suddenness with which the question came made the landlady wince. Then she beamed upon her fair boarder.

"Yes," she began, "Mr. Barnston has been with me a long time. There have been many chances to study him, and I have taken advantage of them. You haven't known him so long as I have, and of course are not so able to judge. I appreciate very much your coming to me. And taking everything into consideration, and to make a long story short, I would advise you not to marry him under any circumstances."



Fanny looked worried as she came up the steps.

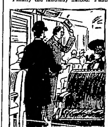
A cyclone seemed to strike Fanny and her fancywork, for both went to pieces—Fanny on her chair, and the fancywork on the floor at her feet.

"Oh, Mrs. Hyssop!" she gasped.

"I know what I am talking about, Fanny," the landlady went on. "In this case no one than myself could give such intelligent advice."

Mrs. Hyssop talked on. It was a way she had. She went into details, explained at almost marvelous length. And poor Fanny listened.

Finally the landlady halted. Fanny rose from her chair and gathered up her fancywork.



"Mr. Horton, allow me to introduce you to my wife."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" Mrs. Hyssop asked.

"I'm going to do my best to win Mr. Barnston."

"I hope you are not angry with me?" Mrs. Hyssop asked.

"Oh, no, not in the least," was the reply. "I thank you very much for your advice."

Two days later Mrs. Hyssop was again sitting upon the front veranda. A frail creature in white, with a last year's sailor on and a music-roll in her lap, sat beside her. Both were gazing absently across the street.

"I don't see how I shall get through the summer," the frail creature said. "Almost all of my pupils have now gone to the country to stay for the summer. I must make a living somehow."

"You poor dear," solaced the feeling widow. "No one knows that better than I do. When my dear husband died he left me almost destitute. But I thought at once of starting a boarding house, and the first thing I knew Mr. Barnston——"

The frail creature suddenly raised her eyes. She was the other girl with whom Mr. Barnston was "taking up," as his landlady put it.

"Mr. Barnston came, and before long I got more boarders than I could accommodate," ended Mrs. Hyssop.

Again she had set the ball rolling Barnstonward, and again her hopes rose, for the frail creature with the music roll at once plunged headlong into the subject of Mrs. Hyssop's first boarder.

"Of course," she said, "you must have noticed that Mr. Barnston has been paying attention to me of late. He seems to be very nice. He is always so gentlemanly."

"He is indeed," put in the landlady.

"There have been times," went on the girl, "when I felt as if I just must come to you for advice about Mr. Barnston. If any one could give it, I knew you could. Do you think he would make a good husband?"

Having had experience, this time Mrs. Hyssop's calm was something to wonder at.

"My dear Louise," she began, "I feel deeply the honor you put upon me. Yes, I have studied Mr. Barnston very closely for the past two years. And of late I have noticed that he thinks very well of you. But Mr. Barnston is—is—well, Louise, dear, I wouldn't marry him if I were you."

For a moment there was silence on the front veranda. Then Louise burst out:

"I believe you are in league with that cat Fanny. I know you are, just because she gave you that doiley for your parlor table. I suppose if I had things to give to you, you'd say it was all right for me to marry Mr. Barnston. I won't ask you to tell me what you have against him, because you'd make up things. But you just bet Fanny'll have a hard race to win. From now on I am going to do my utmost to cut her out."

The greatest day in the Algonquin's history dawned bright and clear.

"Just a perfect wedding day," came from all sides.

From early morning there was constant bustling. Everybody was willing and did lend a helping hand. The boarders could hardly await the coming event. The wedding supper was to be a most sumptuous culmination.

By noon the house began to take on its decorations. The boarders who came for their midday meal were loud in their praises of the excellent taste manifested. And when evening at last came and they began to assemble in the parlor, there was a veritable buzz of talk about things in general. Finally the guests had been ushered in, all but one, and that one would not witness the ceremoney. In an upper room she sat alone at an open window, with a handkerchief to her eyes, weeping. She could hear the minister's voice as he made them man and wife. Later, when she heard the hilarity below, she knew that it was all over. But she still sat at the window. She saw the carriage drive up and halt at the stepping-stone. She heard loud talking out on the sidewalk. She saw figures scurrying back and forth. Then she heard a chorus of shouts. A moment later the sound of rice thrown against the carriage, more shouting, and then the sharp bang to of the carriage door. Afterward the patter of horses' feet, and the sound of wheels on the cobblestones. Then more shouting.

Within the vehicle sat two very happy beings. The ride to the station was short, and when they entered their train Mr. Barnston was surprised to see, seated at the other end of the car, a former chum of his.

Barnston and his bride had hardly got comfortably seated when his friend left his seat to go to the smoker. As he came abreast of the newly wedded couple he recognized Barnston and halted:

"Jove, but I am glad to see you." Barnston said, raising and taking his friend by the hand, "Mr. Horton, allow me to introduce you to my wife, formerly Mrs. Winifred Hyssop, of the Algonquin."

A Mormon Family Reunion.

A Salt Lake City correspondent sends us a clipping from a Mormon newspaper describing the family reunion of Grandfather Merrill. This prolific gentleman, an apostle of the Mormon church, is the father of forty living children, and his living grandchildren number 126. Nearly all of these honored the occasion with their presence. The newspaper correspondent delicately suggests the harmonious relations which subsist among the various wives of the patriarch. "From the many expressions of love and esteem it was evident the kindliest and best of feeling exist in the hearts of all members of the family. Many tears of joy were shed when the different mothers narrated the experiences of the early days." Incidentally one is reminded by this story of the strange fact, substantiated by all observers, that the Mormon women, who have suffered the most from polygamy, and gained the least advantage, are the most fanatical and incurable adherents of this abominable doctrine.—Chicago Standard.

Illustrating the Point.

"You see," said the young man who was explaining the mimic war, "the attack is carried on the same as in actual warfare, except that the missiles are only technical. Now, suppose that I am commanding a brigade and I should be charged by a regiment of the enemy——"

"Technically?" asked the young woman.

"Certainly. And suppose they fired upon us——"

"Technically?" repeated the young woman.

"Yes; yes. And I should be encouraging my men to make a last stand——"

"Technically?"

"Of course. And I should get in range of the enemy's fire, and should be shot through the brain——"

"Oh," interrupted the fair damsel, "I know that would have to be technically, too!"

Reason for Child's Answer.

Bishop Brewster of Connecticut tells this story illustrative of his wife's cleverness. One day they visited a mission school, and in kindly catechising the children he asked:

"Who is your neighbor?"

A dead silence followed the question. Finally one little girl raised her hand and made the most unexpected and amazing reply, "God."

On the way home the Bishop said to his wife:

"Now, what do you suppose that child had in mind to give such an answer?"

"I suppose," replied Mrs. Brewster, "that she was following that rule of a great many older people, 'when in doubt play trumps.'"

Was It Indeed but a Dream?

I dreamed that you kissed me, dear—
Was it indeed but a dream?
To my heart you lay very near—
And can so much happiness seem?

In the rush of the night you came;
My hair was stirred by your breath,
And my blood would have leaped into flame
Had my sleep been the slumber of death.

And when you had kissed me, love,
A rose you laid on my mouth,
Did you think I could traitorous prove?
O one sweet flower of the South!

I thought that your lips still clung
As I drank in the rose's perfume;
And a golden censer was swung,
And a glory unfolded the room.

HYMN WAS NOT APPROPRIATE

Worse Than Doleful Sound From Tomb Was Government Foghorn.

Even staid Congregational ministers have an occasional bump of humor. The government has recently installed at Falkner's island, on the Connecticut coast, an immense foghorn with a megaphone attachment. A few weeks ago Chas. A. Hamilton of the International Silver company and R. F. Foster, the whist expert, who are interested in the manufacture of the horn, visited the island for a final test of the horn. This was made on a Sunday, the horn being blown at intervals of twenty-seven seconds from late on the Saturday evening of their arrival until the following Monday morning.

When Mr. Hamilton started for home he first learned how the ear-piercing and nerve-shattering moans had disturbed the peace and quiet of the worshiping congregation in the little stone church at Stony Creek.

"Lord, we come to Thee, knowing that we are miserable sinners," prayed the fervent parson, to have the end of his supplication drowned by a mighty groan from the foghorn. It so discomfited the good man that the prayer was drawn to a sudden close with the usual "amen." The minister opened his eyes to find a covertly smiling congregation.

"Brethren," he said, "let us all join in singing"—another long-drawn-out moan from the foghorn—"Hymn 411—'Hark, from the tomb a doleful sound.'"

LILY RAFTS IN FAR SIAM.

Floated in Rivers and Seas as Offerings to Water Spirits.

Thousands of real and artificial lilies bearing cargoes of sugar, sweetmeats, rice, tobacco and incense sticks are annually floated on rivers and sea by the Siamese as offerings to water spirits. The lotus is the national flower of Siam, and is interwoven in its religion and poetry. In that country both the white and pink varieties grow in the greatest profusion. On the way from Bangkok it is not unusual to sail for miles through flooded fields covered with the white flower. A new variety of lotus is said to have recently been found. It is larger than the pink flower and is pure white except for an inner row of crumpled and fluted petals, which are tinged with sea-green like the others; the heart of the new lily is golden, but it has no flavor. The lotus is interwoven with every religious rite and ceremony of the Siamese, and there are few legends which do not in some way have to do with it. At the ceremonies attending the cremation of the drowned Queen of Siam tridents with triple tips, each crowned by a lotus, were carried in the procession. Lotus shaped cups and sprinklers are used for the royal bath, in the hair cutting and coronation ceremonies.

An Invocation.

When that old Vender, to whose hand
The loveliest volumes come at last,
Shall thumb you for a trace of good
Enduring though your day be past,

Be not abashed at your small worth;
His sense is keen; and there may cling
About your yellowing pages still
Some freshness of the Northern spring;

Some echo of the white throat's song
From lonely valleys blue with rain,
Ringing across the April dusk
Joy and unfathomable pain;

Some glamour of the darling land
Of purple hill and scarlet tree,
Of tidal rivers and tall ships
And green-diked orchards by the sea;

A sweep of elm-treed interval,
And gravelly floors where herons wade,
A sigh of wind through old gray barns
With eeriest music ever made.

And will no hint of this outweigh
The faulty aim, the faultier skill,
To save our credit when we come
To the Green Dwelling in the Hill?

Ah, trust the Vender wise and kind!
He knows the outside and the in,
And loves the very least of those
He tosses in the dusty bin.

He Was Desperate.

In an especially crowded hour of a crowded shop a man had succeeded in working his way to the ribbon counter and in maintaining his place there until the saleswoman felt disposed to take note of his existence.

"I want five yards of broad white ribbon," he said.

"We do not keep white at this counter," was the disheartening response.

"What do you keep?"

"Anything else."

"Then give me five yards of anything else."

The surrounding women held their breath while the saleswoman dispassionately measured off five yards of light blue. Then as one woman they turned to watch with pitying eyes the man as, cramming the paper bag into his pocket, he left the shop.—New York Sun.

It Was Doubtful.

"Do you know whether there are any fish in the lake or not?" asked the summer guest of the landlord as he returned after five hours of fishing without a bite.

"I wouldn't like to say," was the reply.

"Did you ever catch one?"

"No, sir."

"Ever hear of one being caught?"

"No. Last spring I drained the lake and refilled it and put in one fish. He may have lived or he may have died. If living, you can catch him if you fish long enough. If dead, you might as well sit on the veranda and cuss about the beds and the table. That's all; rates $2.50 per day and scenery thrown in."

PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH OF KIDNEYS EVERY TIME.

DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

Pe-ru-na Creating a National Sensation in the Cure of Chronic Ailments of the Kidneys.

Major T. H. Mars, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry regiment, writes from 1425 Dunning street, Chicago, Ill., the following letter:

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna."—T. H. Mars.

Mr. John Vance, of Hartford City, Ind., says: "My kidney trouble is much better. I have improved so much that everybody wants to know what medicine I am using. I recommend Peruna to everybody and some have commenced to use it. The folks all say that if Dr. Hartman's medicine cures me it must be great."—John Vance.

Mr. J. Brake, of Petrolea, Ontario, Canada, writes: "Four years ago I had a severe attack of Bright's disease, which brought me so low the doctor said nothing more could be done for me. I began to take Peruna and Manalin, and in three months I was a well man and have continued so ever since."—J. Brake.

At the appearance of the first symptom of kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Marriages Expedited.

Only recently the complaint was made that the preparations for a wedding were becoming so elaborate, costly and troublesome that young men preferred to remain bachelors rather than undergo the ordeal. In view of this complaint, it is reassuring to learn that, owing to the perfection of system established in the county building, weddings may now be performed there with the greatest dispatch. A couple, it is reported, may seek the marriage-license window at any time in the day, and then depart from the county building man and wife in the space of eight minutes and twenty seconds. The gain over the slow, old-fashioned wedding, which requires weeks for preparation and a whole day for the ceremony itself, is obvious. A man may now get married in less time than it takes to ride around the loop. Some improved methods of courtship on the lightning-express principle doubtless will soon be forthcoming.—Chicago News.

A Wonderful Pill.

Freedom, Mo., Nov. 3d.—A splendid remedy has recently been introduced in this neighborhood. It is called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and it has cured Rheumatism right and left. On every hand may be heard stories of the remarkable recoveries, and from what has been stated already, there seems to be no case of rheumatism that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure.

One of those who has already tested the virtue of Dodd's Kidney Pills is Katie Anderson of this place, who says:

"I can't say enough for Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have helped me so much. I suffered very severely with rheumatism. Five boxes cured me completely. They are certainly the most wonderful medicine I have ever used."

Osage county abounds in just such cases, and if the good work keeps on there will soon be no rheumatism left in this part of the state.

KICKED TO DEATH

KENTUCKY FARMER DELIBERATELY KILLS HIS FIVE-YEAR-OLD SON.

THREATENED WITH LYNCHING

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER IS ALSO THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN KILLED.

ANGERED BY TRIFLING OFFENSE

BOY KILLED BECAUSE HE TORE SOME BARK FROM A TREE.

Inez, Ky., Nov. 4.—Pleasant Sprading, held for killing his five-year-old son and fifteen-year-old daughter, is threatened with lynching. Sprading's family consisted of his wife, three daughters and son. With his daughters and boy the father was herding sheep last Friday. The boy was unable to keep up with the others. The father placed him on a stone beside a spring, telling him to wait until his return. The boy becoming tired of sitting still, began to peel the loose bark off a tree that overhung the spring. Presently the father returned and, noticing the bark on the ground, asked the boy who had done it. The boy replied that he had.

"I would rather have you dead than raise you to destroy everything on the farm," is the reply the father is said to have made, and then it is charged he picked up a stone and struck the boy on the head, knocking him down. Then it is alleged he kicked the prostrate boy in the head until he had killed him, and, turning to his daughters, threatened them if they ever told what had occurred. Afterward he went home and said the boy, while chasing sheep, had run against a tree and killed himself. Becoming alarmed, he took his eldest daughter and went to the mountains. His wife hired neighbors to bury the body of the child and then went to the home of Judge E. Hensley. She told him of the death of her son and said she suspected her husband, who told her he was going into the mountain woods to hunt some squirrels, and added that at different times he had threatened to kill the whole family. The judge took her, with her two younger daughters to his home and presented the case to the grand jury. One of the little girls told the jury that her father had kicked the boy to death. Shortly afterward a sheriff's posse captured Sprading in the mountains, but his eldest daughter is not with him. The posse is still searching for her. He is held on the charge of murder.

RICH GOLD DISCOVERY.

Stampede to the Black Hornet District in Idaho.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 4. — A rich discovery of of gold in the Black Hornet district has caused a stampede comparable to the mining rushes of the early days. Knowledge of the find got out Saturday evening and men started out at once to secure claims. They kept going all night and yesterday several hundred men rushed to the scene of the discovery. The discovery is a hitherto unknown vein. The lead was blind and was opened in doing some work on another vein. The vein has been opened at several other points. At one point six hundred feet from the original discovery very rich ore was met with and in all the others good ore shows.

DOUKHOBORS TURN BACK.

Many Ask for Clothing and Blankets Discarded on the March.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 4.—Herman of the men who composed the Doukhobor pilgrimage have returned here. One of them came to Agent Crearor and asked him for the clothing and blankets which he had discarded on the march. When asked if he intended returning to his village he replied that that was his intention. Word was brought in yesterday that several of the men were in an exhausted condition on the line of march between here and Bradenbury.

THROW AWAY CLOTHING.

Doukhobors Are Steadily Advancing on Winnipeg.

Saltcoats, N. W. T., Nov. 4. — The Doukhobors are still on the march toward Winnipeg. They left Saltcoats quietly and camped nine miles east of here last night. They are throwing away some clothing as they march along. The police are following them up. A few stragglers are returning. They refuse everything but bread and water.

HIS WORK IS WORLD-WIDE.

Marconi Talks About Wireless Telegraphy.

Sydney, N. S., Nov. 4.—Sig. Marconi, in an interview here, reported excellent results of his experiments in wireless telegraphy in midocean. He said: "The Carlo Alberto was able to take messages from the Polohu station at a distance of 500 miles even in rough weather, and to send messages to the station at a distance of 250 miles. That the sending of telegrams was not as easy as the receiving of them was due to the comparative weakness of the ship's instruments."

Speaking of the distance that messages have been sent over his system between well-equipped stations, he said the longest was 1,581 miles and for signals 2,000 miles. He added:

"We propose to erect stations all over the world. Work is now going on everywhere—in England, the United States, Germany, Holland, Belgium, the Congo, the Dutch East Indies and elsewhere. We now have about 350 stations actually working and seventy ships which are in the service. Seventeen of the ships are working commercially. The Carlo Alberto was given me for six months, and I feel greatly indebted to the generosity of King Humbert, who himself takes the deepest interest in scientific work.

AIRBRAKE FAILS TO WORK.

Causes a Wreck on the New York Central.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Yesterday at Rock Cut, one and one-half miles west of Fort Plain, on the New York Central railroad, a west-bound freight train broke in two as a result of a defective airbrake. Two empty coal cars jumped the track and were thrown an track No. 2. Train No. 25, the Twentieth Century limited, came along at this time and crashed into the two cars. The coal cars and pilot house of the engine of the flyer were wrecked and a freight engine had to be substituted. Some of the windows of the coaches were smashed but no one was hurt. The wrecked cars were not on fire and destroyed. Owing to the dense fog it was impossible for the engineer of the flyer to see the cars on the track.

BREAK FOR FREEDOM.

Inmates of a Juvenile Asylum Try to Escape.

New York, Nov. 3. — Two hundred and fifty boys, inmates of the New York juvenile asylum, made a concerted break for freedom yesterday. The plot was devised several weeks ago. Fifty of the boys succeeded in escaping, but twenty-three of them were recaptured after two hours. Those at large range in age from ten to sixteen years. "Nothing will be done to punish the boys," said the superintendent of the asylum last night. "They were most destitute, committed for their own welfare. If they were vicious they would have been sent to the reformatory. I suppose they wanted to take advantage of fine weather and get out for a run."

KILLED IN A MINE.

Three Men Lose Their Lives by an Explosion of Gas.

New Strattsville, Ohio, Nov. 4. — Maurice O'Brien, miner; Charles Sampson, stable boss, and Herbert Corcoran, bookkeeper, were killed by an explosion of gas in Lost Run mine, owned by the Buckeye Coal company, near here, yesterday. It is supposed the gas found its way into the mine from an adjoining mine which had been abandoned for several years, probably through an opening made by digging out the coal. No one knows how the men came to be in the mine, but it is believed they went in to explore it and that the gas was ignited by the lights they carried.

FIGHTING WONDER.

Lake Submarine Torpedo Boat Is Launched at Bridgeport.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 4.—The lake submarine torpedo boat Protector was successfully launched here. The Protector is designed for harbor defense. She is sixty feet long, eleven feet beam and has a displacement of sixty-five tons submerged. Her motive power is electricity when submerged and gasoline when cruising awash. A trapdoor in her bow will enable a diver to leave the boat for the purpose of cutting cables and mine connections. Her builders believe she can destroy the submarine defenses of any harbor in the world.

London, Nov. 4.—A tremendous sensation was caused here yesterday by statements that another scandal of the Oscar Wilde type was about to become public property. It is asserted that the man whose name is connected with the affair, and who is a peer, has fled the country, but there is every reason to believe that he is at present lying ill at an English watering place. A report of the affair found its way into print, in guarded language, this morning, but every effort will be exerted to prevent further publicity.

DECIDES ONE POINT

ARBITRATION COMMISSION TAKES ITS FIRST IMPORTANT ACTION.

SHALL BE EFFECTIVE NOV. 1

IF ANY AWARD SHALL BE MADE AFFECTING RATE OF WAGES.

MAY MAKE PRELIMINARY REPORT

THREE PRINCIPAL STRIKE QUESTIONS WILL BE DISPOSED OF FIRST.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 2.—The first important action by the anthracite coal strike commission, which is arbitrating the differences existing between the miners and their employers was taken yesterday when it was announced by Carroll D. Wright, recorder of the commission, that if any award affecting the existing rate of wages shall be made, the award shall be effective from Nov. 1. It was fully expected that this question would come up before the arbitrators, but the action of the commissioners shuts off any possible controversy that either side may have desired to raise. The miners wanted the new scale, if one is made, to date from the time they returned to work, but the operators left the matter to be decided by the commission. The mineworkers however, with the decision of the commission. The strike has been off only one week, and most of the men have not worked more than four or five days. The commissioners spent the entire day in continuing their inspection of the mines and the mining region about Scranton. The commission will spend Saturday in the vicinity of Wilkesbarre, returning here in the evening.

Are Perfectly Agreed,

It is possible that the commission may make a preliminary report on three principal strike questions. They are the increase in wages, a shorter work day and the weighing of coal. After these have been decided the commission can take up all other questions without undue haste. It is known the commissioners have this feature under consideration, and it is very likely a preliminary report will be made.

The commission has not yet decided when it shall begin taking testimony. Chairman Gray said yesterday it may be nearly a week before the hearings are begun.

FOUR MEN KILLED.

Overcome by Gas While Working in a Sewer.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 2.—By a sudden rush of gas, supposed to have been sulphurated hydrogen, four men were killed and three seriously affected near the Twenty-fourth street heading of the big tunnel trunk sewer last night. The accident was a peculiar one. Thirteen men, comprising the entire second shift, were working on the sewer. They had started a heading at a new level and had loaded up a blast which was to be discharged. After loading they walked back about 225 feet, between the heading and the shaft at Twenty-fourth street, but before they could reach the shaft four of the men fell to the floor of the tunnel, over which a considerable stream of water was flowing. The others, becoming alarmed, pushed ahead to the shaft. Foreman Mulroy was the first to reach the surface, a distance of fifty feet, and gave the alarm. George Rhodes was ascending in the bucket when he was overcome by the gas and fell from the bucket to the bottom of the shaft. He died from the result of his injuries. Seven others succeeded in getting out. Four men lay in the tunnel. All are dead.

SHOOTS GIRL IN CHIN.

Enraged Wife of Ohioan Uses Pistol on Other Woman.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 2. — Mrs. Carrie Connor, wife of City Councilman J. J. Connor, met Miss Mattie Burts on the street, where hundreds of people were passing, and shot her in the chin. Before she could fire a second time Patrolman Parks seized Mrs. Connor and secured the revolver. The victim was taken to a hospital. She may recover. Miss Burts is an attractive blonde, twenty-five years old. Her home is at Saginaw, Mich. Recently she came here and was seen with Conner. Mrs. Conner being informed of the conduct of her husband, laid in wait for the woman and shot her. The offended wife had threatened to kill both her husband and Miss Burts if she caught them together. Connor is worth $150,000. Until a few weeks ago he was steady, but then, it is said, he began a tour of the race tracks with Miss Burts.

IMMENSE FIRE RAGING.

Great Tract of Forest Land in Montana in Flames.

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 2.—The Rocky Mountain division headquarters of the Union Pacific railroad has been informed through private messages that an immense forest fire is raging across the river from Jocko, on the Flathead reservation. The flames are raging unchecked and Millions of feet of the best timber in this part of the state are being destroyed. It is believed that only a heavy rain or snowfall will serve to quench the fire.

Poultry for Gotham.

Tyndall, S. D., Nov. 2.—Capt. Lavender of Yankton loaded a car with hens, geese, ducks and turkeys here this week. The car contained 5,000. Hens were bought for 5 cents per pound and spring chickens for 6 cents. They will be sent to the New York market.

Quiet in Macedonia.

London, Nov. 2. — "All accounts agree," says the Vienna correspondent of the Times, "that the trouble in Macedonia has well night subsided."

TO FIGHT PRAIRIE FIRES.

South Dakota Ranchmen Fear Destructive Waves of Flames.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 4.—Ranchmen on the ranges west of the river are using extraordinary precautions this year to prevent the setting or spreading of prairie fires. The heavy rains of the year has covered the whole range with a longer growth of grass than for many years, and with all this material to feed upon, a fire driven by a gale would be a formidable proposition, and one which could in a short time do thousands of dollars worth of damage. While the same condition in regard to length of grass prevails on the east side of the river, there are more residents to turn out and fight the fires, and most of the townships have fire guards plowed around their borders wide enough to check any ordinary fire without any other effort on the part of the settlers. At the same time these are not depended upon alone, and in many localities organizations are formed to work as a volunteer fire company when there is any danger in their section.

HAZEL IS MISSING.

Her Adopted Parents Claim That She Was Abducted.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 4. — The family of Thomas H. Watts of Duluth is disturbed over the alleged abduction of their adopted daughter, Hazel Lunke. The girl is twelve years old and they claim that she has been secretly taken from them by her brother, living in Minneapolis. The Watts' claim to have papers to adoption of the girl from the probate court of Hennepin county, but were unable to show them to the Duluth police and they have declined to act. The girl's mother resides in Minneapolis and the father is dead. The children and mother are now united but the Watts family have not given up trying to get the girl back. They adopted the girl at a time when Mrs. Lunke was unable to properly care for the child, but her circumstances are now improved.

MAD DOG IN DANCE HALL.

Twenty Merrymakers Bitten by the Brute.

Brillion, Wis., Nov. 4. — Terror pervades Collins, a country place twelve miles from here in a thickly settled district. A mad dog forced his way into a dance hall there Friday night and nearly twenty persons were bitten. Six passed through here Saturday on their way to the Pasteur institute at Chicago. The dog first showed signs of being affected with rabies here Friday afternoon. At that time he bit half a dozen local people, and then started west. He was seen tearing along the country roads like mad by many people and did not stop to bite any person on the road, though he snapped at horses he passed.

GOPHERS RUN OVER GRINNELL.

Minnesota Runs Up a Total of 102 Points.

Minneapolis, Nov. 4. — The Gophers walked all over Grinnell in the game Saturday afternoon. The visitors' line was light and the local team waded through it at will in the second half. The final score was: Minnesota, 102; Grinnell, 0. The score in the first half was 42 to 0. The Gophers were within ten yards of another touch-down when the game was called. The Gophers played a far better game than two weeks ago against Nebraska. The team work showed a marked improvement and the men played fast ball from the start.

COFFINS ARE BURNED.

Fergus Falls Business District in Danger of Destruction.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 4. — The Fergus Falls Casket company's factory was totally destroyed by fire last night. The building was peculiarly situated in the rear of several business blocks, and had it not been a calm, wet evening, the business section of the city would have been destroyed. As it was, adjoining buildings caught fire again and again. Loss to company is $10,000; insurance, $3,000.

BOY WANTS TO DIE.

Youthful Hunter Who Shot Companion Attempts Suicide.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Nov. 4. — While hunting near here Arthur McCune, ten years of age, fatally wounded his playmate, Clare Baker, son of S. D. Baker, a local capitalist. The shooting was accidental. When McCune realized what he had done he tried to kill himself, but was restrained by a third boy. The boys then hailed a switch engine and took their wounded companion home.

LADRONES ACTIVE

MURDER PRESIDENTE OF A TOWN AND HIS WIFE AND ABDUCT CHILDREN.

FRIENDLINESS TO AMERICANS

IS THE MOTIVE FOR THE CRIME—VARIOUS OTHER OUTRAGES COMMITTED.

ROW IN RELIGIOUS CIRCLES

CATHOLIC FILIPINO CHURCH DESIRES PROPERTY HELD BY ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Manila, Nov. 4.—A portion of a gang of ladrones which has been operating on the island of Biliran (just north of the island of Leyte), where they committed various outrages, crossed over to the island of Leyte last Wednesday and entered a small town near Carigara. Here they captured and beheaded the presidente of the town, murdered his wife, whom they slashed with bolos, and abducted the presidente's children. The motive of this crime is said to have been the presidente's friendliness with the Americans.

Ladrones are again active in the provinces of Rizal and Bulucan, Luzon. Members of the native constabulary engaged these bandits twice during the past week at points close to Manila and succeeded in killing a number of them. The constabulary are capable of suppressing these ladrones. Reports received here indicate that the situation on the island of Samar is better than has been recently represented. A number of dios dios, or religious fanatics are still operating, but officials report that the Samar police are able to handle the situation.

Trouble in Religious Circles.

Manila, Nov. 4.—The body of a native woman, who was attended at her death by priests of the Catholic Filipino church, was refused interment yesterday at the cemetery which is owned by the Roman Catholic church. In retaliation for this refusal of interment "Bishop" Aglipa and other leaders of the schismatic movement are discussing a plan to appeal to the courts to obtain possession of certain churches and other property in the Philippines.

This independent church movement is being watched closely in government and political circles. The extent of the defection of native clergy and their lay adherents from the Church of Rome is not known, but it is claimed that a majority of the native clergy sympathize with the movement. The appointment of an American archbishop in the Philippines, however, and the Americanization of the Roman Catholic church here with a clear definition of the status of the native clergy would turn the tide of both clergy and laity in favor of the Roman church.

ROUSES THEIR IRE

COLOMBIANS ARE INDIGNANT BECAUSE AMERICANS GUARD RAILROAD.

OFFICIALS RAISE A HOWL

SAY IT PREVENTS THEM FROM DEALING EFFECTIVELY WITH THE REBELS.

REBELS ARE ALSO DISPLEASED

CLAIM THEY ARE PREVENTED FROM MAKING A FINAL COUP IN REVOLUTION.

Kingston, Jam., Nov. 4.—The British steamer Trent arrived here yesterday from Colon, Colombia. She brings reports that the Colombian rebels are still to be seen in the vicinity of the isthmus and that they occasionally appear in the towns along the railroad line.

Considerable indignation is felt by the Colombians because American guards are still maintained on the line. Officials of the Colombian government claim that what they term the interference of the Americans prevents them from dealing effectively with the rebels, who occupy certain towns where they collect taxes and make seizures of property. The revolutionists, in their turn, claim that the presence of the Americans prevents them from bringing about a final coup in the revolution. There is much suffering on the isthmus and the position of civilians there

Is Becoming Intolerable.

The steamer Libertador, which was formerly in the service of the Venezuelan revolutionists and which has been acquired by the Colombian government and named by it the Presidente Marroquin, is reported to be coming from Carthagena to Kingston, where she will undergo extensive repairs. She will be used by Colombia as a gunboat. Representatives of Colombia have been sent to Port of Spain, Trinidad, to procure another gunboat for their government.

It is reported that the terms of settlement between the revolutionists and the Colombian government are at present under consideration, and it is believed that those terms provide for an armistice of ninety days, during which time a joint commission composed of members of the governmental and revolutionary parties are to frame a new constitution which is to give equal rights to all persons. When the Trent left Colon last Friday it was considered doubtful whether the terms of the proposed settlement would be agreed to.

BIG FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Three Men Injured and Property Worth $200,000 Destroyed.

Minneapolis, Nov. 1. — Three men were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a fire which destroyed a six-story building in the wholesale district in Minneapolis late last night, entailing a loss of over $200,000. The fire was discovered about 11 o'clock in the basement of the six-story building at 239-41-43 First avenue north, and before the fire department could arrive the flames communicated through the elevator shaft to every floor in the building. When the first stream of water was got on the blaze the building was a seething mass of flames. The building was filled almost entirely with paper, and this caught fire rapidly and burned like tinder. A half-hour after the blaze was discovered the roof of the building gave way and fell with a crash down through the building, carrying every one of the six floors with it. A section of the west wall toppled over about the same time and fell into an alley which was crowded with people. The falling wall was discovered, however, in time to get the people out of the way, and no one was injured. Capt. Smith, Truckmen Cheney and Hessick were among the firemen sent up ladders to fight the flames from above. Smith was at the head of a thirty-foot ladder, holding a lead of hose, when the ladder broke and he, with the other two firemen, who were only a few feet below, were precipitated to the ground. The captain was picked up in an unconscious condition and was taken to his home. The other firemen were able to go to their homes alone, after receiving medical attention. The flames were not got under control until 2 o'clock this morning.

DENIED BY IRELAND.

Archbishop Will Not Be Transferred to Chicago.

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—"It's absurd, perfectly absurd," said Archbishop Ireland yesterday, speaking in his incisive way. "There is not a particle of truth in it; it is untrue from start to finish. It is an insult to me." The head of the Catholic church in the Northwest was characterizing a story printed yesterday morning in a St. Paul paper. The substance of the story that did not meet Archbishop Ireland's approval was that a member of his official family had confided to a representative of the newspaper that his superior was to be transferred to the vacant archbishropic of Chicago, Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls was to succeed Archbishop Ireland, and Rev. P. R. Heffron, president of the St. Paul seminary, was to succeed Bishop O'Gorman. "I am certain," continued Archbishop Ireland, "that no member of 'my official family' said anything of the sort."

NOT A MAN GOES FREE.

Remarkable Record of October Term of United States Court.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 1.—The regular October term of the United States court, which has just been concluded in this city, was a record-breaker, so far as the disposition of the cases on the calendar are concerned. Of the eighteen cases, ranging from murder to liquor selling to Indians, which were disposed, there was not a single acquittal, the eighteen defendants either having been convicted by juries or pleaded guilty. This is a record which has rarely is ever been equaled by any federal court in the country, and United States Attorney J. D. Elliott and Assistant United States Attorney W. G. Porter, the prosecutors for the government, naturally are being congratulated and complemented for the manner in which they handled the cases.

The liquors were seized and the cases tried in the district courts, which decided that such a proceeding was no violation of the mulct law. The supreme court yesterday reversed both these decisions and holds that such goods are contraband and liable to seizure if found in the possession of the company.

GO DOWN IN MINES

ARBITRATION COMMISSIONERS SEE THINGS FOR THEMSELVES.

TOUR OF THE COAL FIELDS

THEY SEE EVERY STEP TAKEN IN THE PRODUCTION OF COAL.

THEY ARE RATHER INQUISITIVE

ASK MANY QUESTIONS BUT MAKE NO COMMENTS AT ALL.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 1. — The seven commissioners appointed by President Roosevelt to adjust the differences existing between the anthracite mineworkers and their employers, yesterday made a tour of the extreme upper coal field and saw every step taken in the production of coal from the time it is blasted from the ground, hundreds of feet below the surface, to the point where it is sent to market ready for the use of the consumer. The arbitrators had an interesting day and returned to their hotel last night grimy from coal dust and tired after eight busy hours of observation and investigation. The commissioners displayed the greatest interest in every feature of coal mining and went about their work in a manner that was pleasing to both the mining superintendents and the representatives of the mineworkers, who accompanied the president's arbitrators.

The commissioners had to endure many discomforts, make their way through wet places in the mines, almost crawl along some of the gangways in the workings and pass through clouds of coal dust in the breakers. Notwithstanding this their eagerness for information was not diminished and they expect to put in another hard day's work to-day in this vicinity. It would be unfair to say that one commissioner displayed more interest than another, but it can be truly said that Bishop Spalding asked more questions than any of the others. He was usually in the center of a group of commissioners and asked questions of those who are employed in and about the mines. All the commissioners were good listeners but poor talkers when it came down to getting expressions from the men on any feature of the mining business. From their actions yesterday it is certain they agreed to not say what they think of what came before them. A number of persons approached one or more of the commissioners during the day, merely for the purpose of having him say what he thought of some things he saw, and in each case the inquirer was rebuffed.

Yesterday's tour consisted of an inspection of No. 2 mine of the Hillsdale Coal and Iron company, operated by the Erie company, and the coal breaker of the Delaware & Hudson company. The former is located at Forest City, twenty-two miles north of this city, and the breaker at Carbondale, four miles south of Forest City.

On the run up the Lackawanna valley the commissioners viewed with interest the several mining towns situated along the Delaware & Hudson railway.

WHEELER'S BIG EXPOSE.

Tax Fixer Accuses the Living and the Dead.

Chicago, Nov. 1.— Luke Wheeler, convinced at last that his accomplices in the tax-fixing frauds have been sacrificing him to save themselves has revealed to State's Attorney Deneen the particulars of a conspiracy system more extensive than even the prosecutor has expected. In his statement Wheeler makes charges of a criminal nature against many prominent business and professional men of Chicago. Neither the living nor the dead are spared. The Masonic temple fraud, he declared, was merely one of the extensive series of such operations, in which he had figured merely as a comparatively humble agent. Two men are alleged to have been driven to suicide by the exposure of the syndicate's operations, and a fortune has already been spent in the defense of the others.

Murrell's Story Told on the Witness Stand in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 1. — The taking of testimony in the trial of Edmund Borsch, formerly member of the house of delegates, on the charge of perjury before the grand jury, yesterday began in Judge Ryan's court room. While Philip Stock was on the stand the $75,000 from the safe deposit vault of the Lincoln Trust company was produced by Circuit Attorney Folk, identified and counted. John K. Murrell, who returned from Mexico to aid the state in convicting his former fellow members of the old house of delegates combine, made his first appearance as a witness. The witness referred to the combine as "an association for the controlling of legislation." He said there were nineteen members and he named the men, including himself, who were implicated by his confession of Sept. 8. The association, he said, was formed early in the session. The witness said the association talked about the price that would be charged for passing the pending suburban bill, and various sums were suggested, ranging from $60,000 to $100,000. Borsch, he said, was a high-priced man. Borsch suggested $100,000. It was suggested that some one be appointed to look after the matter and Murrell was named. Murrell said that he was instructed to see Philip Stock and demand $75,000, to be paid as follows: $1,000 down for each man, one-half the entire sum at the passage of the bill and the other half upon its signature by the mayor.

Rev. Steelman Leaves the Baptists and Joins "Zion."

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 1. — As a result of a vision remarkably vivid Rev. I. N. Steelman of Sydney has severed his connection with the Baptist denomination and joined Dowie's forces, going to Zion City. Rev. Steelman has been one of the most prominent Baptist divines in this section, being regarded as a man of deep religious experience and profound study. INTERIOR TRIBES BREAK LOOSE

KANSAS MISSIONARY TELLS OF OUTBREAK OF THE SULTAN'S SUBJECTS.

Gibraltar, Oct. 31.—A letter received from George C. Reed, a Kansas missionary at Mequinez, with several other Americans, indicates that numerous interior tribes have broken out. The roads, it is added, are infested with bandits and travel is decidedly unsafe, native sentiment taking the form of a general anti-foreign crusade. Fanatics have torn up the surveys for the flags marking the line of the sultan's railroad, claiming that they were emblems of foreign suzerainty over Morocco. Mr. Reed continues:

"I may say I consider the situation grave indeed. If the sultan is able to call the loyal tribes to his aid quickly and the rebellious girwans, who were the chief movers in the recent raids and robberies, he will make his position all the more secure, but if he does not succeed in doing so the trouble is bound to thicken. If I were in Morocco merely for my health I would make for the coast as soon as possible, though at present we are as securely locked up in Mequinez as rats in a trap."

The English missionary, Mr. Cooper, who was murdered at Fez and whose murderer, by order of the sultan, was seized and shot in front of the mosque where he had sought refuge, wrote shortly before his death, taking a more optimistic view, which was so tragically dissipated.

STILL INDECISIVE.

Castro Operating Against Revolutionists Without Result.

Willemstad, Curacao, Oct. 31.—The position of President Castro of Venezuela yesterday was the same as it was after the recent indecisive battle between his forces and those of the revolutionists. He still occupies La Victoria with 5,000 men and the revolutionists have returned to the vicinity of La Victoria in large numbers and have occupied positions near San Mateo, Villa de Cura, Cagua and Maracay. They say they are awaiting the arrival of all their forces to attack Castro. On Sunday last Castro twice tried to dislodge the revolutionists without result.

MERGER HAS TO WAIT.

Coal Trust Likely to Be Put Off Because of Wall Street Conditions.

New York, Oct. 31.—Banking houses in Wall street which have been asked to form the underwriting syndicate to finance the proposed $110,000,000 soft coal trust believe that the merger will have to wait until the new year. It is not considered an opportune time for bringing any large new concerns before the public, and as money rates are very likely to advance in response to the hardening of sterling exchange, new deals of the magnitude of the bituminous trust would prove costly to carry.

May Not Be True.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Indian Commissioner Jones announced yesterday that affidavits just received tend to disprove charges made that Nathaniel D. Rodman, Indian farmer on the La Court 'd Oreilles reservation, near Hayward, Wis., has been organizing the Indians with a view to having them vote for certain candidates. Such an act on the part of Rodman would have been in violation of civil service rules, and, if proved, he would have been dismissed.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER I.

Was It Buried Here?"

Within one of the houses on Stony Beach—one of the smallest and poorest—where none were large—a light glimmered in a lower room. It was nearly 11 o'clock of a stormy summer night, and the other dwellings held only sleeping inmates.

The low, dark, smoky room was inhabited only by one person—a man not much past middle life; but he looked much older as he sat at the table which held the lamp, his head supported by both hands, his eyes intent upon a yellow-leaved novel before him. He read, half-aloud the paragraph over which he was poring:

"These men, after having secured their bloody spoil, steered south, intently not to land until they had gone many leagues. But Providence did not permit them to carry out their plans. Not many hours after they had sunk the ship, and seen the men whom they had robbed sink in the sea before their eyes without helping them—not long after that, God, as if to mark His displeasure, sent a terrific storm along that coast, and they were driven into the bay, which was afterwards called Massachusetts Bay. It was in vain that they tried to prevent the ship from approaching the land; she drove on, faster and faster, until she reached that reef of rocks near the southern shore of the bay, where many ships have since gone to destruction."

At this point the man paused with his finger on the place, and said, aloud:

"That must be Minot's Ledge. From this, and what it says before, there can be no doubt of it. Yes, it's Minot's."

Then he went on reading:

"The pirates could not prevent her striking on the rocks, but they had succeeded in changing her course so that she did not dash to pieces, as they had feared. She was driven farther in the bay and close to shore, when, suddenly, the wind shifting, the storm broke away. The men, in their glee, began drinking of the rum with which they had provided themselves.

"The ship was leaking at a rapid rate from the parting of the timbers, caused by the stroke of the rocks, and it seemed as if these men were left to destroy themselves, for they became more and more drunk, and neglected the ship until she had sunk nearly to her top.

"But two of them—wily fellows—remembering all the treasure that was on board, sewed it about their persons, loading themselves so heavily that they could hardly walk.

"Unknown to the rest of the crew, they secretly took boat, and left the ship and rowed to the land, which they reached with great difficulty, being so heavily laden.

"Once landed, they consulted together, and soon began to quarrel, for much treasure make men enemies of each other. They soon drew their knives, and one of them slew the other. The surviving man, his soul full of terror and avarice, worked all the night long to bury the treasure that both had brought. When he had done he wrote a strict description of the place, and bound the paper to him with a belt beneath his clothes.

"But the devil, who had helped him thus far, deserted him now. That man, at morning light, was set upon by Indians and stripped of all his clothing, the precious description was flung away as worthless, and the man himself carried into captivity. But the paper was found and preserved, and herein follows a correct copy of it."

At this point in the reading the man rose and went impatiently to the door, which he opened after a struggle with the wind, and, stepping out, he raised his hand to his ear and listened intently.

"He is late," he muttered. "If he was as impatient as I am, he would not be late for a moment. It's just the night—no one will be about to trouble us. Why doesn't he come?"

There was something weak and fretful in the man's voice. He turned and walked slowly about the house, repeating to himself the description of the spot where the treasure was buried. He told himself that he would not read it again—he knew it too well. He struck his hands together, exclaiming, with an intensity almost fierce:

"Yes; that must be the place. The cove there beyond the Gun Rock is the cove that is meant. The spot is described precisely, allowing for some little change that the water must have made in all these years. There's not another place just like it on all this south shore, and the book says, distinctly, that it was on the south shore of Massachusetts Bay. Yes; the treasure is there now, only waiting for some one to dig it up. It will make Kate a fortune. It will educate her; it will give her the surroundings of a lady. It can't make her a lady, for she is that already. Yes; it is for her sake—for her sake. She must live such a life all her days. But when I am gone what will become of her? The treasure is there—there is not the slightest doubt of that—and it must be Kate's fortune."

As he went on, his voice had sunk into a kind of querulous tone, and he looked about him as if fearful some one had heard him.

He was now standing still on the lee side of the house, his gaze wandering absently toward the glimmering ocean, which could only just be seen in the darkness.

A light hand was laid on his arm, and the touch made him start with a kind of nervous terror. He could see a female figure beside him.

"What's the matter, father? Why do you sit up so late? Do you not see that it is going to rain?"

The voice that spoke was soft and sweet, and full of anxious pleading.

The man shook the hand off, but not ungently, as he said:

"Kate, what are you up now for? I thought you had gone to bed long ago. Why do you watch me so closely? I have my own affairs to attend to, and I am capable of taking care of myself."

As he finished speaking, he remembered that he had left the book he had been reading lying open upon the table, and he did not want her to see it. He hurried, quickly into the house and, seizing the book, thrust it into his pocket.

He looked at her suspiciously.

"Did you come into this room when you came down stairs?" he asked.

'No. I heard you go out, and came down stairs and out at the back door," she answered.

The man's looks cleared. He knew he could believe the girl. He only grumbled.

"I have business that keeps me up. I wish you would go to bed, Kate. I am not a child, to be watched like this."

The somewhat dim light of the lamp revealed a slender girl nineteen or twenty years old, with a face that, in spite of its paleness and worry, was singularly winning. Her large hazel eyes were fixed upon her father entreatingly, and he avoided their gaze.

She seemed about to say more, but changed her mind, and turned away to go up stairs.

She did not know what had come over her father within the last six months. She knew that he had almost abandoned the fishing which gave them a living in the summer, and that they were poorer than ever.

She did not believe he drank or gambled. What, then, was the matter with him? He was sadly changed, and she seemed to have no influence to recall him to his former condition.

She had taken a step toward the stairs which led up to her room, when the outer door was quickly opened, the wind slamming it back against the house, and a man entered, exclaiming:

"By George! It's a regular old roarer out to-night!"

When she saw the newcomer, Kate turned quickly away; but the man saw her, and said, moving quickly to her side:

"Kate, don't go because I have come. I didn't expect the good luck of seeing your pretty face to-night. Stay a minute, and bring good-luck to a fellow."

But Kate, apparently, could not bring herself to smile upon the man. Her face grew very cold in its expression, and she answered, distantly:

"It's too late for me to stay longer, Mr. Burt. You come late, and it's a wild night for a visit. Good-night."

And before he could say more the girl had left the room.

The man turned, angrily, toward his host and exclaimed:

"What makes that girl put on such cool airs to me, Purcell? I don't think I have very high ideas of myself, but it does seem to me she might be a little more cordial to me."

"Pshaw, Dick! What do you mind a girl's whims for? What makes you so late? I had about given you up, and I was getting very angry with you."

"Yes; I am late; but I was kept a couple of hours longer than I had expected. I say, old man, I should think you might have enough influence with Kate to make her a trifle civil. Girl's ain't apt to turn up their noses to Dick Burt, I can tell you."

Purcell winced a little as he heard the last words, but he only replied:

"Don't get absurd notions into your head about her. She is shy and proud, and will need a good deal of courting to win her, I fancy."

"I'm the man to do the courting, then," said Dick, with a complacent smile. "But I should like a fair field. You are sure there is no one ahead of me?"

"Sure. She never had a lover. She never listened to a word of love."

"All right, then. I'll take my chance. Now, are you ready?"

Purcell, as soon as his visitor had appeared, had put on a thick jacket, and had shown signs of impatience to be gone.

"Yes, and waiting. Come," he answered, quickly.

He extinguished the lamp, and the two went out to a little shed which held nets and lines; but they took none of them; each shouldered a pick-ax and shovel, and they walked, as quickly as they could, in the darkness and wind, toward Gun Rock.

"It's a terrible night!" cried Burt, as he slipped in the darkness and fell on his knee. "A fellow ought to get a good haul of treasure to pay him for going out."

"Hush!" exclaimed his companion. "Why do you talk so loud? What if someone should hear us and follow?"

"Pooh! There is no one likely to be about at this time of night in such a gale. We are safe enough."

Burt could not refrain from uttering a few oaths as he stumbled along the beach; but his companion, who was in advance, did not hear him.

At last they reached the rock near which their work lay. It was a bold, high, promontory of rugged rock, lying quite a distance out in the sea, and standing grim and dark.

Purcell, whose imagination dwelt upon one subject, fancied the rock had a look as though it were conscious it stood sentinel over hidden wealth.

"Do you think we can find the spot in the darkness?" asked Burt, hurrying up. "It's the blackest time I have ever been here. It will be hard work digging at such a time."

"Find it!" echoed Purcell. "I could find it if it was twice as dark. All the more chance that we shall not be disturbed.

"Very well, then," was the response. "I'll sit down here for I am dead beat, and you call me when you've found the spot."

Burt did as he had said: he sank down on the beach and took the opportunity to light his pipe, which required considerable stratagem in the wind. He succeeded, however, and puffed away while he waited to hear Purcell's voice.

"The old man's about crazy on the subject," Dick mused, "and I'm not sorry he is. I've kept him going on this affair well, and he is neglecting his business about as much as a man can. All the better for me. He owes me a round sum now, and he'll have to borrow more. Pretty Kate Purcell doesn't know that the bread she eats now comes from my pocket. Time enough for her to know it. Of course there isn't any treasure here, still there may be, and I'll keep the old man hot on the scent, and if we come to anything, why, I'll share in it. He's lost his head about it, anyway.

Burt's musings by no means took so plain a form as the words above, but that was the sense of the thought in his mind.

He had decided to marry Kate Purcell, the "Daughter of the Beach," as she was called, and he did not think his influence with her father would come amiss.

It was accident that had first given him a knowledge of Mr. Purcell's notion that there was treasure buried on the shore, and he had shrewdly taken immediate advantage of that knowledge and fanned the man's fancy until it had become a mania.

Indeed, so strong had it become that Richard Burt himself, with all his hard common sense, half believed Purcell's notion might be true.

Purcell was a man of intellectual tastes, which he had cultivated in many ways, until the fishermen near by had called him "the Scholar," half in derision.

He had always been poor, but he had been industrious, taking his holidays with books, instead of the uncouth pleasures which had delighted his neighbors. But he had all his life yearned for riches; still more now that his daughter was grown up with the face and mien of a gentlewoman.

"She should have advantages—she should never spend her life on these sands and with these fishermen," he told himself.

And every day the thought and hope grew stronger "for her sake."

He was credulous and unbalanced in some degree. Though his mind had twice the power in most directions that Richard Burt possessed, still the younger man had that shrewdness, that sense that enabled him to obtain a master over the elder.

A prolonged whistle from Purcell made Burt rise to his feet and walk forward. As he did so, a low, rumbling roll of thunder came from the clouds in the west, and a flash of light revealed, in wierd radiance, the dark, shining water, the black shore and the figures of the two men, who were staring forward with dilated eyes. Then all was black again.

A great splash of rain followed, and the wind fell to an utter calm, wherein the gentle lapping of the waves could be heard plainer than anything else.

Burt proceeded to light a small dark-lantern he had brought.

"It's going to rain," he said, "and we must be spry, for, when it really begins it will rain guns."

They both began rapidly to remove the stones with which they had concealed their previous labors, for they dared not leave traces of their work that might lead to discovery.

They both worked with rapidity, and soon a large cavity was disclosed, in which they both began shoveling the wet sand.

"It is only about four feet more—in this direction," said Purcell, striking his shovel into the ground.

"That pirate must have been a deuced strong fellow to have chucked his treasure in so far," remarked Burt.

"It could not originally have been thus far," replied Purcell. "We must allow for the changes the waves have made."

"I forgot that," was the answer; "but I wish the waves had washed the sand away, instead of upon the place."

A quarter of an hour passed, and still the tempest had not burst, though its mutterings grew louder than ever and heavy drops of rain occasionally fell.

Suddenly a sharp exclamation burst from Purcell, and he dropped his shovel and turned to Burt, crying:

"We have reached it at last! Our fortune is made!"

The tone and the words startled Burt. Could it be possible that the old book's story was true, after all—that they had come upon the treasure, which he had really never believed in? Visions of what he would do with his riches darted across his mind.

"You don't mean it!" he cried, pressing to the old man's side. "Where is it? Are you sure?"

Purcell caught up his shovel again, as he said:

"I struck the chest. It is here. We are rich men. Kate shall be rich at last!"

Kate! Yes. The thought of her was uppermost at that moment in both men's minds.

Then they fell to work, with frantic haste, and it was then that the storm burst in fury upon them, the rain coming down in sheets, the lightning flashing from one end of the heavens to the other, the thunder crashing as if it would split open the earth.

But the men did not mind it, so absorbed were they. Their lantern had long since been extinguished, but the brilliance of the lightning enabled them to work, and by the light they saw that what Purcell's shovel had touched was a thick oaken chest, four feet square.

Just as they had nearly excavated it the storm subsided, and the lightning flashes were so few that they were left in darkness.

Near them the little house, which held a life-boat of the humane association, had been struck by the lightning, and had flamed and hissed and gone out in the wet.

"If the tempest would keep up a few minutes longer," exclaimed Burt, "we should have light enough! Now we must stop and light the lantern again."

The impatient men groped on the ground, going on their hands and knees in their search for the lantern. It seemed to them that they never should find it. Purcell's hands trembled with eagerness: the moments that passed in that search seemed the longest he had ever spent. He kept silence, but Burt swore deeply.

At last the lantern was found and lighted, and in a few moments more they had excavated the chest and were trying to pry it open with their pick-axes.

Neither of them spoke, and the faces of both were white, their eyes shining fiercely. The heavy plank lid yielded to their blows and came slowly up.

Purcell caught the lantern and sent its rays over the inside of the chest, but the contents were concealed by folds of coarse cloth that seemed to have huddled in on top.

The next moment the cloth was snatched away, and the eyes of the men were prepared to be dazzled by the gleam of gold.

What was there?

If the faces of the men could have been paler than they were, they would have whitened as they looked. Their eyes seemed startling in their glare as they were fixed on the object before them.

The sharp and concentrated rays of the lantern fell upon the shriveled form of a child. It was a skeleton, with the skin clinging about it, the faded, fair hair still attached to the skull, a thin ringlet of it falling over one sunken eye-socket.

It was a moment before either of them could speak. Horror overcame the shock of disappointment they felt.

"Whose work is this?" finally whispered Purcell, in a trembling tone.

"The devil's!" answered Burt; "and we are the devil's own fools for having dug here. If we had any wit we might have known, when we came upon the chest, that the pirate never could have put it here, for it's not likely that they took a chest like this out of a sinking ship into a little rowboat, and then packed in the gold. We are simple idiots—that's what we are!"

The sound of his own voice seemed to give Burt courage. But Purcell did not, apparently, hear him. The old man stood looking down into the chest in silence.

Burt put one hand to his shoulder, saying, harshly:

"Well, what's to be done with this job? I don't care to be taken up for child-murder. How long has this been buried here? You ought to be learned enough to know."

Still Purcell did not answer, and Burt went on:

"We'd better not stay here long: it wouldn't be nice at all if we should be found here. Let's cover up the thing as quick as we can. We'll dig somewhere else for treasure next time."

"Yes, we must bury it again," said Purcell at last; "but let's see if there is anything that gives any clue to the the perpetrators of this crime."

Purcell bent down on his knees by the chest, while Burt, too superstitious to have touched the object himself, yet looked on with intense interest.

Purcell removed several stones from the chest—stones which seemed to have hurriedly been placed there for no obvious reason, unless it was desired to add weight. He lifted the little skeleton carefully.

Underneath lay a roll of paper, dark and damp, and which would have fallen to pieces had not Purcell taken great pains to preserve it.

That was all. The strictest further search revealed nothing more.

CHAPTER II.

The Newcomer.

"It's all a cheat!" said Burt, impatiently, as Purcell stood, with the paper in his hands, his eyes fixed vacantly upon it, while the shovel and pick lay, unused, by his side. "Who in the name of all that's horrid, did this deed, I don't know, and don't want to know! Let's hurry up now and get clear of this!"

He seized the shovel as he finished speaking, and began to work rapidly, and Purcell thrust the document he held into his pocket and mechanically began to work, also.

Neither of the men spoke for some time, and nothing was heard but the sound of falling sand and the low swash of the waves.

The clouds were parting and the stars shone forth, giving some light to the two men. They did not pause until they had carefully concealed, as well as they could, all signs of their work.

"I shall come here by light in the morning," said Burt, stamping down the sand. "I am not going to leave this place without fixing it so that folks won't be likely to find out anybody's been to work here. It wouldn't be a nice joke for anyone to discover we had been digging here, and then come prospecting about to see what we had been doing. Ugh! It's a bad business!" and Dick Burt shuddered as he spoke.

I think it's our duty, Burt," said Purcell, speaking very slowly, to inform the authorities of our discovery. It's about sure a crime has been committed, and we ought to let them know."

"Don't you do it!" cried Burt, quickly. "I shan't allow it! What's the use of making a fuss about it? Then everybody will raise a great cry as to why we've been digging here in this way. And what shall we tell 'em?"

Burt had taken the right course with Purcell. The elder man shook his head.

"True," he said. "We could not tell them we had been looking for treasure. All the men on the shore would begin digging. No; we must keep it to ourselves. We have made a mistake this time; but we'll succeed—yes, we'll succeed. It only requires patience, and we'll be rich men yet."

Burt looked at his companion in astonishment. He had believed that Purcell would have given up the idea of searching further, after such an experience as they had had that night.

He did not answer. His nerves had been somewhat shaken, and he wanted to be alone and think matters over. He only said:

"Come on, now! It's time we went home. I'll see you again in a day or two; and in the meantime I want you to promise me not to do anything about searching for the treasure without me. You know, we are partners."

"Yes; I know. I promise."

Burt was satisfied to have his word, and the two men went forward toward home. As they parted, Burt said:

"Not a word of this night's work, Purcell. Eh?"

"No."

"Not even to Kate."

"Least of all to her," said Purcell, with emphasis.

Burt turned on to the road which led between the pond and the beach, and Purcell walked slowly toward his house, thankful that he could see no light in Kate's window.

"She had much better be asleep than watching for me as she does," he thought. "She ought to trust me—she might know I am working for her. What was that?"

Purcell stopped suddenly as he walked and listened. A distinct halloo had sounded in the air—A loud, imperative cry—or had it been his disturbed imagination?

He listened for a moment, but he heard nothing more, and he went on and entered the house.

He did not stop to light a lamp, but groped his way up to the little room under the roof where he slept.

As he lay down upon his bed he thought he heard the cry repeated, but he would take no more notice of it.

So disturbed had been his mind that he refrained from looking at the paper he had taken from that mysterious chest.

"I will have a clear head when I look at that," he thought. "Somehow, my thoughts are not coherent to-night—and no wonder."

Richard Burt, going along the high way, had heard that cry, and stopped to listen, as Purcell had done. But he had done more; he had turned back and gone in the direction of the sound, and had heard it repeated. It appeared to come from the hills in the direction of Long Beach, and he felt certain it was a cry for assistance.

"I might as well make a night of it," he said, as he ran along in that direction.

He shouted an answer as he went, and then there was silence for some minutes. When he had gone a few rods he called again, and received a response, distinguishing the words this time. They were:

"Hurry up, if you can!"

The tone had that imperative sound that pain will give to the voice.

Burt increased his speed as he heard it. In a few minutes he reached the shore of an indentation between the hills on the coast—a place not more than three or four rods wide where the beach was stony.

GOOD-NATURED RIOTERS.

Mr. Charlemangne Tower's Recital of a Recent Disturbance in the Russian Capital.

Charlemagne Tower, the United States minister to St. Petersburg, who has now been named as the successor of Minister White, at Berlin, when visiting his home in Philadelphia recently, was telling of a personal experience in the streets of the Russian capital during the recent student riots:

"I knew that the students were marching and that the police were out;" he said, "but I thought I had taken a street which would be deserted. The crowds had moved, however, and I daresay there were 100,000 people in sight of my door as I stepped out. It all looked so peaceful and good-natured that I went ahead. And peace and good nature are really not improper words to use in connection with what happened. The students were shouting and singing in a way that would have made a man from Princeton or Yale quite homesick for his college, and the crowds seemed to regard the whole performance as altogether too amusing to leave.

"When the police rode into the street they had their riding whips in their hands, but they carried them very much as the English drill-sergeant carries his bamboo cane, and if they used them on the crowd it was in a manner quite too perfunctory to be very dangerous. The people laughed and ran. The officers were practically as good-natured, although a little more business-like. The students yelled louder than ever, and dispersed only after two or three of their leaders had been arrested.

"As I stood in a doorway looking on I could only think of a lot of chickens scattering before the onslaught of a company of good-natured school boys."—Philadelphia Press.

Settled the Estate.

An attorney from Houston, Texas, J. D. Bryant, tells this story of Judge Roy Bean, justice of the peace in the Lone Star State, who is better known as "the law west of the Pecos river."

He held a coroner's inquest on a Mexican, who had been found dead near the Pecos river. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental death. The crowd was dispersing when the judge called them back.

"There is another matter to attend to," he said. "On this man's body was found $50 and a six-shooter. It's contrary to the laws of Texas and to the peace and dignity of the state to carry concealed weapons. Therefore, I confiscate the revolver and fine the deceased $1. The costs of the case are $49, which just settles the estate."

Had Done Her Part.

Kitty had been told that the thunder was the voice of "the good man up in the sky," warning her to run into the house to avoid the rain, and on one or two occasions she had failed to heed the warning and had suffered unpleasant consequences.

She was playing out of doors the other morning when there came a clap of distant thunder. She dropped everything and scudded into the house, but the rain failed to come. After waiting until she became impatient, she went to the door, looked up at the clouds and called out:

"If you are going to rain, why don't you? I've been in here ten minutes!"—Chicago Tribune.

THE TIME TO RETIRE

LIFE SHOULD NOT BE ALL A MONOTONOUS GRIND.

Many Things of More Importance Than the Piling Up of Dollars—Europeans Recognize There Is a Time for Well-Earned Repose.

Why do men toil on and on, long after they have attained a competency sufficient to maintain themselves and families in comfort and even to indulge in those luxuries necessary to complete satisfaction? Who heap up riches to be a cause for dissension after their death, and of envy, jealousy, and hypocrisy while they live? Why not, after having acquired such a competency, retire from business and leave the field to others who still need it? It is more real good to a man to give him a chance to earn his living than to bequeath wealth to him. There is a need in the world of men yet in strength and vigor of mind and body who will devote themselves to culture and the refining arts, to the progress of education and philanthropy. Men have little time to bestow on these subjects while engaged in hustling for their dollars. These things are important factors of life and cannot be brought near to the highest ideals, without time and thought bestowed. The man who has been able to acquire a comfortable fortune before old age will be possessed of certain sterling qualities needed in the pursuit of ethical objects.

Why should a man deprive himself of all enjoyment of society, of literature, of travel, or of some hobby dear to his heart, just for a weary round of monotonous work? Many a man grown old and gray in work has scarcely taken time to become acquainted with his own family. The story told of the little girl who asked her mother who that man was who came there Sundays contains more of truth than of fiction. In many families the father sees the little ones but a brief half hour at the evening meal time, or maybe only when asleep in their beds. They are not risen when he leaves the home for his place of business. A little less of hustle and a little more intimate knowledge of home and family interests would tend more to the best welfare of all. While money is important, it is not the solitary factor of our lives, nor is it the most important one. The welfare of the world in general would be better subserved if a man only knew when he was rich enough.

The European in his own country usually knows when to retire from business and give himself to the enjoyment of a well-earned competency while he is yet able physically and mentally to do so. The American alone knows no time to cease the strife, and he alone seems unable to acquire a leisurely repose.—Milwaukee Journal.

PUT AN END TO THE STORM.

Stage Father's Blindness Forgotten in Time of Stress.

"Mechanical devices are now made wonderfully real on the stage," said the old stock actor. "It hasn't been so many years ago since even the simple device of depicting a snowstorm was regarded as an achievement. I remember on one occasion I was out with a 'ten, twent, and thirt' company, playing repertoire, and in one melodrama—I don't even now recall the name, for it was a pirated play—I took the part of an old man whose daughter, the heroine, had been abducted. I was supposed to be blind, and my strong scene was the third act, when I went out into a snowstorm in search of my daughter. She was lying in a drift, and as I hobbled across the stage I kept crying: 'Me che-ild! where is me che-ild?' Well, it was early in the season, and the play was the first attraction at that theater. The scene painters had been at work and had dropped several paint brushes, hammers, and other articles into the sheet that held the snowstorm. As the stage hands in the flies shook the sheets to make the snow come out a couple of hammers came down and just missed me by an inch. I was blind, and didn't dare to look up, but when a monkey wrench just grazed my temple I had presence of mind enough to yell: 'See yonder moon! The storm is over!' The stage hands took their cue and let up on me, and the audience never stopped to question how a blind man could see yonder moon."—Philadelphia Record.

THE LORD GAVE HIM BOTH.

New Story of Patrick Henry's Immortal Oration.

Three Philadelphians who were traveling in the south a few years ago visited Richmond, Va., among other places, and, asking as to the use and purpose of this or that building, were told in every case that it was a tobacco factory. An aged negro gave them the greater part of the information in one neighborhood; and they, finally tiring of the monotony of the reply, pointed to a white frame building on a hill and asked whose tobacco factory it was. The old fellow peered very steadily at the building and then replied:

"Dat, sah, am no fact-ry. Dat am S'n John's 'Piscopal church, where Marse Patrick Henry done get up an' ax de Lawd to gib him liberty or give him deaf.'"

"Well, uncle," asked one of the trio, "which did the Lord give him?"

"'Pears to me, yo' must, 'ndeed, be no strangers bareabouts!" he answered. "Else it strikes me, yo' all know dat, in due time, de Lawd gabe Marse Henry bofe."

MERGER IN COURT

TESTIMONY OF COAL MEN AND LUMBER MANUFACTURERS.

MR. WEYERHAUESER, LUMBERMAN

THE COUNTRY RELIES UPON THE STATE OF WASHINGTON FOR LUMBER.

G. B. HARRIS, RAILROAD PRESIDENT

THE MERGER WILL PROMOTE BUSINESS AND DEVELOP LATENT RESOURCES.

In the suit of the United States against the Northern Securities company Mr. Frederick Weyerhaeuser was the first witness to follow Mr. Hill in the testimony taken in St. Paul.

Mr. Weyerhaeuser is the largest manufacturer of lumber in the United States. He testified as to the reliance of the country upon the state of Washington for lumber. This passage in his testimony is interesting.

Q. Are you acquainted with the lumber supply in the Mississippi valley?

A. Yes, sir; that is where I have been operating for forty years.

Q. How about the amount of standing timber in the Mississippi valley, available for making lumber, compare with that in former years?

A. It is getting very short; the supply is getting very short.

Q. About how long do you think that you can continue lumbering at a profit in this valley?

A. Oh, five or six years will wipe out most of our mills, though the last tree will not be cut for some time to come in these states. I am speaking now mainly of Wisconsin and Minnesota and Michigan.

Q. How is it with your own mills in this valley? Are they increasing or diminishing?

A. Diminishing. We get through sawing at Shell Lake this year and we are getting through at Hayward, so there are two mills less.

Q. And taking down those mills?

A. We used to operate four in Davenport, Iowa; we have only got two left now.

Q. To what part of the country are you resorting for a supply of timber in the failure of this Mississippi valley timber?

A. We have been buying in Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

Q. What has been the extent of your purchases in Washington?

A. We own 1,250,000 acres in that neighborhood—from that up to 1,500,000 acres; about 200,000 in Oregon, and perhaps about the same in Idaho.

Q. Have you begun manufacturing lumber from any of that timber?

A. Yes, sir; we manufacture in Washington and manufacture in Idaho.

He thought the largest market was in Iowa, eastern Kansas and Nebraska, though Illinois was considerable of a market.

The facilities now offered whereby he could ship, by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and the Burlington, were of great advantage both to his company and the public. In fact, this combination was practically vital to his doing business at all.

G. B. Harris.

Geo. B. Harris, president of the Burlington system, testified that he had been with that system in some form for thirty-six years. The road had about 8,200 miles of track, and to the question whether the acquisition of the Burlington by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific would restrain trade and traffic between the states and foreign countries, he replied:

"On the contrary, I think it will promote business very greatly and develop latent resources and enable forest, mineral and other products to be utilized, which are now idle. The practical extension of the Burlington road to the Pacific coast by reason of its connection affords opportunity to merchants and manufacturers to extend their markets. He cited the fact that he had 2,400 miles of track in Nebraska and there is not a tree on it, except those which have been planted by the settlers. No lumber is cut in Nebraska and sold on the market. Lumber is a necessity to assist in settling up that country. If people could not obtain lumber at a reasonable rate they could not live there, and it is distinctly an advantage to that country as well as to the manufacturers on the Pacific coast and to the transportation lines that distribute it. The lumber has got to come directly from the Pacific coast. Formerly they got enormous quantities of lumber from Chicago, but that supply was now largely exhausted, and if they could not get it from the Pacific coast, they could not get it from anywhere.

The cattle industry, he said, was another great business that was being developed by this management. The cattle are loaded on the ranges on the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and sent down on the Burlington to feed and fit for the market.

He thought the Burlington rails reached every large packing point that he could think of, except Sioux City.

Q. What effect will attend the transportation of lumber onto the Burlington and the territory tributary to it, as affording reurn traffic over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, increasing the volume and the reduction of rates?

A. Well, it is obvious that a wagon which can go loaded both ways can afford to do business at a lower price than one which has to be hauled one way empty, and the lumber business affording a constant supply of tonnage eastbound enables the company to do westbound tonnage, and tempts us to do westbound tonnage at the lowest price we can afford to in order to promote that business. We accomplish various things by doing that. We give the people of Nebraska and Iowa, where we have a great many lines—we give them cheap lumber, which promotes trade there, promotes settlement. They build houses, make improvements, and it is an added inducement to people to settle there where we need settlement, and, indirectly, it helps us in other ways. Those people have got to wear shoes and clothes and have tea and coffee.

The next matter taken up was the transportation of coal and iron ores. Speaking of this Mr. Harris said: We reach a great many mines from the Streator district on the north to the district of which Centralia is the southernmost point in the south, but a great many, and some very large ones, and a few years ago—a very short time ago, in fact—the coal supply on the Burlington lines in Illinois had exceeded the demand to such an extent that the coal operators were beginning to be a little restive about it. They thought we ought to be able to hustle around and provide a market in some way—do something about it. But it was somewhat difficult to do that independently. The soft coal does not stand a great many transfers; it is friable deteriorates rapidly and must be taken from the mines to as near the point of consumption as possible without car transfer. So this country up here, being without coal—

Q. You mean "up there" along the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, Minnesota and Dakota?

A. Yes, this northern country, and especially the lines of those two roads. We thought that that would afford us a permanent market for that large amount of coal that is to be had there at moderate price.

Q. And did you have an advantage, through shipment and exchange of cars, over the fluctuating conditions attendant upon a joint rate?

A. Well, in preparing for a very large business you could not provide cars, nor could the miners afford to work the mines and make the large expenditure that is necessary to do it in the most economical and efficient manner when the market was liable to be changed, or as I said before, the door was liable to be shut any day by somebody saying, "Well, we think we will turn this current of commerce somewhere else; we would rather have it from some other place." The field, we think, is the largest, is the cheapest. It will promote the mining of coal down there and the use of coal up here, and we can do that better than anybody else can.

Mr. Harris then proceeded to explain at some length the transportation of the ores of precious metals along the line of the Burlington road. He said the Burlington line ran to Billings and through the Black Hills country in South Dakota, where there are large mineral deposits, all of low grades.

Continuing, he said that the Burlington stockholders thought that through the sale to the Northern and Great Northern a large amount of business would be of necessity thrown to the Burlington, which would produce a greater revenue than if the Burlington operated alone.

He then took up the question of iron ore and explained the large advantages of shipments of iron ore from the deposits on the Mesaba range, reached by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. By this means the ore could be taken down the Mississippi valley to St. Louis and coal returned on the same cars. This would enable coal to be transported at much lower rates than would otherwise be possible. There are large manufacturing interests along the line of the Burlington, especially in Missouri, and many articles manufactured which are adapted to the Oriental trade. By means of a connection of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, these manufacturing plants are greatly increased and stimulated, as there is a means of direct shipment to the coast. There are also large quantities of raw manufactured cotton to be shipped over the Burlington to the coast. All of this made a business which is valuable to the public, because the larger the amount of general freight which could be secured, the lower would be the freight on merchandise and specific shipments of individuals along the line of the roads.

The cross examination of Mr. Harris was conducted by Mr. Day, and practically elicited nothing new, but emphasized the points which he had made in his direct examination, that the purchase of the Burlington by the Pacific roads would increase business and aid in the development of all the region traversed by those lines.

He was especially strong in his claim that the supply of coal to the northwest could not have otherwise been made practical, as the cost of transporting coal without the return business for the coal cars would make rates so high as to be almost prohibitory, but with the interweaving of business both ways they could make the coal supply adequate for the northwest and within the reach of all.

President Mellen's Testimony.

Mr. Mellen, president of the Northern Pacific, testified that he had held that position since August, 1897, and that the position carried with it a membership in the board of directors, and also membership in the executive committee. He had at one time, some years ago, been connected with the Union Pacific. He was familiar with the Burlington system and had been for ten years. He thought that the acquisition of the Burlington system by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern not only did not restrain trade and commerce between the states and the foreign nations, but that they promoted it both in freight and passenger service. The Northern Pacific as a company had never taken any part in the formation of the Northern Securities company, and the Great Northern and Northern Pacific were in equally the same position they were in before the Northern Securities was formed.

W. P. Clough.

W. P. Clough fourth vice-president of the Northern Securities company was the next witness. Every purchase of stock made by the Northern Securities Company has been a direct individual transaction. The stock purchased was transferred absolutely unconditionally in every case and without solicitation on the part of the company.

He had been practically present at the New York office every business day since the company was organized. There was nothing unusual in the transfers. Holders of Great Northern and Northern Pacific stock would come in and ask to sell it to the company and would receive in pay therefor stock of the Northern Securities company.

He was next asked the amount of holdings in the Northern Securities company of the eight or ten gentlemen especially named by Mr. Hill, as his particular associates, to which he replied that he thought that it was less than one-third of the stock of the Northern Securities company.
Company.

E. N. Sanders.

The last witness examined in St. Paul was Mr. E. N. Sanders, president of the Northwestern Fuel company. He testified that he was a miner and distributor of coal, and had principal charge of that company, distributing coal in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Nebraska, and some in Iowa and northwestern Illinois and Wisconsin. They mine about 2,000,000 annually. He also stated that he was interested in the Spring Valley Coal company in northern Illinois, and in a coal mine in Indiana. All of this is bituminous coal. He said that within a short period the greater portion of the bituminous coal which he had furnished for the northwest came from Pennsylvania and Ohio, and that in recent years they had difficulty in obtaining their supplies. During the past two years it was almost impossible to get anything like an adequate supply. The requirements for transportation on the railroads from the east have been so great that they have been absolutely unable to furnish the motive power to move the cars and the cars themselves during the short period of navigation.

The following questions and answers were especially pertinent:

Q. Heretofore, prior to the year 1901 how it has been with Illinois coal shipped from the mines in that state destined to points beyond St. Paul and Minneapolis?

A. It has been almost impossible to get it through on account of the fact that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and other roads who could haul it to those points have always been unwilling, and in fact have refused to allow their equipment to go through to the destination of the coal, which necessitated transferring it here into the cars of the lines reaching north, to the great injury of the coal and great delay in transit, and with great addition to the cost.

Mr. Grover—What makes the additional cost?

Witness—The labor of transferring and the delays incident to transferring.

Q. State what effect that has upon the coal itself, and whether that effect is greater on Illinois coal than on eastern coal.

A. It is damaging to all grades of bituminous coal, and especially to Illinois coal, in that it breaks it up and produces a large amount of screenings and waste, to the great detriment of the purchaser.

Q. What advantage would it be in the transportation and distribution of coal if the cars could go directly from the mines in Illinois to points of destination on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads without breaking bulk?

A. It would make the Illinois fields directly available to the users of coal on their coal supply cheaply and promptly.

Q. Is this Illinois coal of such character that a consumer can put in a large stock of it?

A. It is coal that is not advantageously stocked, as it contains rather more sulphur, is more friable and disintegrates more rapidly than higher classes of coals. But it has an evaporating power which is adequate for all purposes, in comparison with Eastern coal, if used fresh mined, and after being shipped directly from the mines.

Q. About how far West on the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific do your operations extend?

A. Well, in bituminous coal to the borders of the State of Montana, the Western limits of the Dakotas and Nebraska.

Advantage to Customers.

Q. Assuming, Mr. Sanders, that this coal can come from the Illinois coal mines up here on the Burlington road and then go out over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific without breaking bulk, on the through tariff (likely to be permanently, what advantage would the consumers of that coal at the points of destination on these two Northern roads gain over and above what they would have if it went the way it has been going, breaking bulk at St. Paul, and depending on a joint tariff between different roads?

A. In the first place, they would have an assured regular base of supply for a splendid quality of fuel, which they could depend upon, and, in my judgment, it would result in a reduction of the average cost to the consumers of fuel in that territory of 25 per cent.

Origin of "Watered Stock."

The expression, "watered stock," which describes so well the expansion of the stock of a company beyond the value of the property, originated, it is said, in connection with Daniel Drew, who was once the wealthiest and most unique manipulator in Wall street. Drew had been a drover in his younger days, and it was said of him that, before selling his cattle in the market he would first give them large quantities of salt to make them thirsty, and then provide them with all the water they could drink. In this way their weight was greatly increased, and the purchaser was buying "watered stock."—Leslie's Weekly.

Rev. Robert Home, a Presbyterian minister from St. Paul will hold services in the city hall on Sunday Nov. 9th at 11:00 o'clock. a. m., and 7:30 p. m. All are cordially invited.

Hallowe'en is over and the usual number of gates have been carried off, small buildings have been overturned, and the usual amount of petty damage has been done. The accepted manner of celebrating Hallowe'en and Independence day appears to be to make things as uncomfortable for other people as possible, and this method will probably continue for some years to come.

J. Pierpont Morgan is now reported to be seeking to get control of all the large electric and gas lighting plants of the United States. We knew Morgan would never consent to take a back seat to Baer of the Pennsylvania railroad. The latter claimed to be a partner of the Almightly, but Morgan would be a second Creator. He would be where he can say to the world a second time, "Let there be light."—Crookston Journal.

There is a rumor that the soft coal companies are to be merged into one gigantic organization, and that as usual Mr. Morgan is at the head of the deal. The prospectus of the new concern is not yet issued to the public but it will doubtless explain that the consolidation is for the purpose of reducing the cost of operation eliminating ruinous competition and providing the public with more coal for less money. There will probably be a clause explaining that it would be propsterous to anticipate an advance in price as a result of the combination, as the interests of the coal companies are best served by furnishing the people with coal at the lowest possible cost and that all that has presented this in the past is the slight remnant of comunnt of competion which remains in the soft coal field,

DEAD AND DOWN.

Logging Operations on the Reservation May Be Postponed.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The dead and down operations on Red Lake reservation projected by Major Scott are not likely to be carried on this winter because of the recent action of the Indians in refusing to allow the use of stumpage money for the purchase of logging outfits. When Major Scott first proposed that he should be allowed to cut dead and down timber blown down in the tornado last summer, it was decided there was no fund available for the purchase of logging paraphernalia unless the Indians would give consent for the use of about $20,000 stumpage money which was to be repaid when the timber was sold. The Indians held a council and decided they wanted the money immediately rather than wait to get it, and the profit that would accrue from the sale of the logs. It is estimated there are ten million feet of dead timber on the Red Lake Reservation. Profits of $30,000 would accrue to the Indians from this source, in addition to the wages they would receive for the work this winter.

If the department is obliged to wait until congress can appropriate the money for the purchase of the outfit and supplies, the timber will have lost its commercial value and the Indians will get neither wages nor profits.

Commissioner Jones is hopeful that means can be devised by which the Indians can get this work in spite of themselves. It is suggested that possibly a part of the $70,000 trespass money accumulated by Captain Mercer two years ago might be used to buy the outfit, and local officers of the department will be asked to decide.

The department has completed the calculation of the amount due the Leech Lake and other Indians for stumpage and has found it will approximate $15 for each Indian. Payments will be made as soon as the rolls are verified. They have been sent to Major Scott for examination.

The city council will hold a meeting this evening.

P. O. Berg was down from Rollis the first of the week.

Dr. Watson came up from Red Lake Falls today.

Jens P. Jenson was elected county commissioner in the Eastern Marshall county district.

The Van Sant landslide extends to the legislature. Although it's an off year, the republicans seem to have increase their membership in both houses.

John Lind's election does not result in any net loses to the republicans in congress, taking Minnesota as a whole. In 1900 Minnesota elected seven republicans, this year there are eight republicans and one Democrat returned.

Work on the Thief River Falls ditch has been stopped, owing to the freezing up of the ground, and it will not be completed until next spring. It is now dug deep enough, however, so as to be of some benefit in draining the country.

The county commissioners will have a meeting on Saturday in this city. The principal business to be transacted will be the sale of the county's ditch bonds, which could not be sold until the matter had been tested in the state supreme court.

The first quarterly conference of the Thief River Falls M. E. church will be held at the M. E. church next Sunday evening at 7:30, and Monday at 10 a. m. Rev. Dodds will be present to preach Sunday evening and administer the communion. Everybody invited. Chas. H. Flesher, Pastor.

The open season for hunting deer and moose opened Monday and a small sized army of hunters from this section are in the county northeast of here in search of the big game. The snow on Tuesday will greatly aid them in hunting, and it is expected that quite a number will be killed by the local hunters.

A letter from Chas. Alexander, who is scaling logs in Bulman Bros.' camp, states that everything is progressing nicely in that section. He says they can boast of having two things that Thief River Falls does not possess—good streets and water works. Frank Lyons is the social favorite and gives a dance every Saturday night.

Farmers in the town of Namedal have signed a petition for a county ditch, which will probably be built next summer. Mr. Grady says that he will not again be a candidate for this office.

John Patterson returned to this city the first of the week from a five weeks' trip to Iowa, where he had been selling several car loads of cattle. Mayor Kratka wishes to inform the people of this city that children will not be allowed upon the streets of Thief River Falls after 8 o'clock in the evening unless accompanied by parent or guardian. The bell at the city hall will be rung at 8 o'clock every evening. This new order of the mayor's is a good one, and should be strictly enforced. There are too many children running about the down town streets every evening.

W. C. Smiley has been appointed a deputy U. S. surveyor for the purpose of making a survey of two islands in Mud Lake, which are not now shown on the government plats. The islands are small, containing but a few acres each, and are valuable chiefly as a hunting resort. The survey is made at the instance of Nat Campbell, of Crookston, who will endeavor to gain possession of them as soon as they are placed upon the market.

The county division vote in Beltrami county is very close and the official court may be necessary to decide the contest. At the last reports Clearwater county was a few votes ahead of Roosevelt. Roosevelt county is one township wider, but otherwise practically the same territory, and Sheylin is named as the county seat.

BATTLE OF THE BALLOTS

Voters of the Country Hand Down Their Decision in a Closely Contested Political Conflict.

GAINS ARE MADE BY THE DEMOCRATS

Republicans Will Have Reduced Majorities in the Senate and House—Returns by States.

Elections were held yesterday in forty-two states, and the latest returns indicate that the control of the national congress remains with the Republican party. While official figures may make the working majority of the Republican party in the house a close one, there is no doubt that it will be sufficient for all party purposes. From a national standpoint, the control of the lower branch of congress was the real contest. Many of the states elected legislatures, which will choose United States senators, but the results of those elections have in no way imperilled the Republican majority of the upper house. In those states which elected governors there was no state in which the party in power was not continued in that position. In some of the states, however, there was a decided change from the vote cast two years ago.

In the East the main interest centered in the two great states of New York and Pennsylvania.

The latest returns show that the Republicans (including in this description the fusionists elected in the Pittsburg-Allegheny districts in Pennsylvania) will control the next house by a vote of 204 Republicans to 179 Democrats, with one district, the Eighth Tennessee, and two California districts remaining so much in doubt that the official returns will be needed to decide the result. The table by states is as follows:

NEW YORK.

Gov. Odell Carries the State by a Small Majority.

In spite of the phenomenally large vote in New York and Kings county for Bird S. Coler, (Dem.) the returns indicate the re-election of Benjamin B. Odell (Rep.) to the governorship of New York state by from 6,000 to 9,000. Coler's plurality in Greater New York exceeded 115,000, a surplus of 3,000 above the claim made by Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, but even that large vote was not sufficient to overcome the Republican majorities from up the state. Odell's vote in the country districts was lighter than two years ago, but Coler's was also lower than Stanchfield's in the same year. In New York City Coler's plurality was approximately 117,500.

Oyster Bay, where President Roosevelt's country home is situated and where he voted, was carried by Coler, his plurality being 131. Two years ago Odell plurality was 512. Figures from the congressional districts in the state gave the delegation as twenty Republicans to seventeen Democrats. The present state representation is twenty-two Republicans to twelve Democrats. The Democrats made gains in the state legislature, but they were not sufficient to endanger the Republican hold on the seat in the United States senate, now held by Thomas C. Platt.

INDIANA.

Congressional Delegation Remains Same—Nine to Four.

Indiana went Republican by from 25,000 to 40,000. The congressional delegation remained the same with 9 Republicans and 4 Democrats. The legislature will be Republican by about 25 on joint ballot and Senator Charles W. Fairbanks will be re-elected to the United States senate.

This estimate is based on unofficial returns received at the headquarters of the Democratic and Republican state central committees and from the specials from every county in the state. Throughout the state the Republican legislative ticket led the local candidates. This was, of course, due to the strength of United States Senator Fairbanks, whose re-election depended upon the result.

IOWA.

Birdsall, Speaker Henderson's Successor, is Elected.

On the basis of the precinct returns received the Republicans have elected their state ticket by about 75,000 plurality. The reports from the congressional districts are meager. Enough has been received from the Third to indicate that Judge Birdsall, nominated by the Republicans to succeed Speaker David B. Henderson, ran substantially with his ticket, and will be elected by 4,000 to 5,000 votes over Former Governor Boies. The returns indicate close counts in both the Sixth and Second districts, but they are not numerous enough to base estimates upon. At Republican headquarters it was state Republican pluralities in the state as a whole was sufficient to carry all the congressional districts. Chairman Spence of the Republican committee said:

"We have carried the state by at least 65,000. The figures indicate a larger plurality, but we are not claiming more at present. We have elected eleven Republican congressmen."

ILLINOIS.

Republicans Carry State by a Safe Majority.

The Republicans have carried Illinois by a plurality of about 45,000. The Republican leaders claim that they have elected Busse for state treasurer by 47,000 and Mamer for clerk of the supreme court by 45,000. The Republicans will have at least fourteen congressmen, as against eleven in the last congress. The Democrats are sure of nine congressmen and may secure two more. The contest in the Sixth congressional district is exceedingly close and it may require the official count to determine the result. Lorimer has a slight lead, but Durborow is gaining slowly, as the late returns come in and the unofficial vote will be nearly even.

MICHIGAN.

Democrats Make Gains in Legislature but Alger Will Go to the Senate.

The Republicans of Michigan have elected Governor A. T. Bliss and their entire state ticket, eleven of the fourteen congressmen and an overwhelming majority of the members of the legislature. The vote was light throughout the state and the Republican majority is estimated at between 30,000 and 40,000, although Republican State Chairman O. J. Dickman, insists it will be nearer 75,000, basing his statement on advices received from the various county chairmen. As was expected Governor Bliss ran heavily behind his ticket, from 15,000 to 20,000 it is estimated. L. F. Durand, the Democratic candidate for governor, poled a correspondingly heavy vote, especially in Detroit, which he carried from 4,000 to 6,000. While the returns indicate that the Democrats have increased by a few members their representation in the state legislature, the Republicans will have an overwhelming majority in both houses. This assures the election of Gen. R. A. Alger to fill the unexpired term of the late U. S. Senator James H. McMillan.

OHIO

Republicans Carry the State by a Large Plurality.

The Republicans carried Ohio by next to their highest plurality on record. Nothing above 70,000 had been predicted, but partial returns indicate that it will greatly exceed those figures. At the same time the Republicans made no gain in congressmen and are likely to lose one. The present Ohio delegation in congress consists of 17 Republicans and 4 Democrats, and the returns show 16 Republicans and 4 Democrats elected, with the Twelfth district in doubt.

With a single exception the Republican plurality to-day was the highest in the history of Ohio on a total vote of less than 800,000.

RHODE ISLAND.

Democrats Make Substantial Gains and Elect Governor.

Substantial gains for the Democrats are shown by the complete returns for the state ticket. They elected their candidate for governor and lieutenant governor and their congressional candidate in the First district. Besides, they cut down the Republican lead in the lower house of the legislature by securing thirty-six members as against a like number for the Republicans. The senate, however, remains overwhelmingly Republican, with a representation of 37 to 27 members.

DELAWARE.

Complexion of the Next Legislature is in Doubt.

The complexion of the next general assembly is in doubt. It is now apparent that a deadlock on the two United States senatorial vacancies will be the result, as was the case two years ago. The regular Republican state committee claims that the body will be composed of 19 Union Republicans, 8 Regular Republicans, 22 Democrats and 3 doubtful. Democratic State Chairman Willard Saulsbury claims that 24 Democratic members have been elected. The majority on joint ballot and the number necessary to elect United States senators is 27.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Over a Million Votes Cast—Republicans Have 175,000 Majority.

For the first time in the history of the state more than one million votes were cast in an election. Samuel W. Pennypacker, (Rep.) was elected governor by an estimated plurality of 175,000 and the Republican ticket was generally successful in the various counties. The Democrats elected two and possibly three of the thirty-two congressmen. The legislature will be more strongly Republican than ever before with the exception of 1897 session and it is certain that Boies Penrose will succeed himself in the United States senate.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Republican Governor Elected by 37,000 Plurality.

Boston, Nov. 4.—Lieut. Gov. John L. Bates of Boston was elected governor by the Republicans in the state election, defeating William A. Gaston, the Democratic candidate by 37,470 plurality. The Republicans also elected the rest of the state ticket and ten out of fourteen congressmen. The state legislature stands, according to late returns: Senate, Republicans 31, Democrats 9; and the house 155 Republicans, 82 Democrats and 3 Socialists.

CALIFORNIA.

Republican Candidate for Governor Will Have Small Plurality.

Complete returns from San Francisco and partial returns from all over the state indicate that George C. Pardee, the Republican nominee for governor, is elected by a majority of from 2,000 to 3,000. Complete returns from 1,185 precincts out of 1,277 in the state outside of San Francisco give Pardee 60,460; Lane, 60,637. The complete vote in San Francisco stood: Pardee, 24,120; Lane, 33,087. The legislature—which will choose a United States senator—is largely Republican on joint ballot. The Republicans have lost two congressmen. The delegation stands: Republican, 4; Democratic and Union Labor, 2; doubtful, 2.

NEBRASKA.

Republicans Claim the State by a Fair Majority.

Complete and partially complete returns from enough counties to accurately forecast the result shows that Mickey (Rep.) has been elected governor of Nebraska by not less than 5,000. The rest of the Republican state ticket is elected. For congress the Republicans carry three districts, the fusionists one, and two are in doubt. Both districts are undoubtedly close. Republicans will control both branches of the legislature.

IDAHO.

Republicans Carry the State by Large Majority.

The election proves to have been much more of a Republican landslide than early reports indicated. The Republican state ticket has carried the state by a majority close to 8,000. Burton L. French, for congress, will have a little larger majority.

MISSOURI.

Fight is Close and Result is in Doubt.

In several districts the fight for congress is very close and definite results will probably not be known for 24 hours. At Republican state headquarters it was claimed there is a slight Republican gain in some counties. At Democratic headquarters it was claimed the Democratic ticket would come to St. Louis with 16,000 to 18,000. Indications point to a sweeping Democratic victory in St. Louis, with a plurality of 16,000 and the election of two congressmen out of three.

GEORGIA.

Solid Democratic Delegation Will Go to Washington.

Georgia to-day elected a solid Democrat in delegation of eleven congressmen. So little interest was taken in the election that the figures in the eleven districts were not collected last night. Except in the seventh district the Democrats had no opposition and in that district was inconsequencial. The vote polled was very light. The elections were for congressmen only.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Indications Point to a Republican Victory.

The indications in New Hampshire are Naham J. Batchelder, Republican candidate for governor, was elected over Henry F. Hollis, Democrat, by a plurality of at least 10,000. There was a heavy shrinkage from the vote of two years ago. The legislature is Republican in both branches by large majorities, insuring a Republican successor to Senator Gallinger, who will probably succeed himself.

MONTANA.

State Returns Indicate a Republican Victory.

Late returns from the various outlying counties indicate the election of the entire state Republican ticket. Counties heretofore Democratic report Republican landslides, estimates from the Republican headquarters give Dixon for congress 4,000 majority; Holloway, associate justice, 8,000 majority. The legislature of the state will be slightly Republican, as the county tickets are badly split.

COLORADO.

Legislature Will Be Democratic on Joint Ballot.

The returns from the state indicate that Colorado has elected a full Republican ticket by small majorities. This is conceded by leading Democrats, though not by Chairman Smith. The Democratic congressional candidates are claimed to have run ahead of their ticket and one or more of them may be elected. The legislature will undoubtedly be Democratic on joint ballot.

CONNECTICUT.

Governor and Entire Republican Congressional Ticket Elected.

Connecticut elected the full Republican ticket for state officers and all the five Republican candidates for congress. The plurality for Chamberlain, the Republican candidate for governor, will be at least 13,000, an increase of 1,000 over the plurality of two years ago. The state legislature will be Republican, thus insuring the return of O. H. Platt to the United States senate.

MARYLAND.

The Republicans Elect Four of the Six Congressmen.

The election in Maryland which was only for congressmen, passed off quietly with the exception of a few minor disturbances in the eastern district of this city. Of the six congressmen the Republicans elect four and the Democrats two. The vote in the third district was very close. Wachter having a majority of about 100.

NEW JERSEY.

Democrats Make Gains but Fail to Gain Control of the State.

In New Jersey the Democrats made gains, but failed to gain control of the state. In the congressional contests the Republicans elected seven and the Democrats three.

The Republicans again control the legislature, but also by a reduced majority. Republicans elect seven congressmen and the Democrats three.

UTAH.

Indications That Republican Associate Justice is Elected.

Indications are that William M. McCarty (Rep.) is elected associate justice of the supreme court over Richard W. Young (Dem.) by 2,500 plurality, and that the Republicans will have a considerable majority in the legislature, thus ensuring the election of a Republican United States senator to succeed Senator Rawlins.

KANSAS.

Republicans Claim a Victory for Their Ticket.

The Republicans have elected the entire state ticket and all the eight congressmen. Bailey for governor will have a larger majority than did Stanley two years ago. The legislature will be safely Republican, though possibly the majority will be smaller there.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Legislature Overwhelmingly Democratic—63,000 Majority for State Ticket.

The Democratic state majority is apparently about 63,000. North Carolina will have a solid Democratic representation in the house of representatives. The legislature will be overwhelmingly Democratic and a Democrat will succeed Pritchard as United States senator.

VIRGINIA.

Democrats Return a Full Congressional Delegation.

The state certainly will return a full Democratic congressional delegation. The latest returns from the Ninth district, where there was the only serious contest in the state, assure the election of Rheam, Democrat.

ARKANSAS.

Only Congressmen Voted for—All Democrats Elected.

All the Democratic nominees for congress in Arkansas are elected.

LOUISIANA.

Seven Congressmen Voted for and Democrats Make Clean Sweep.

All the Democratic nominees for congress in Louisana are elected.

NEVADA.

Indications Point to a Fusion Victory.

Indications are that Sparks, Democrat, for governor, has carried Washoe county by about 400. Meager returns point to a fusion victory in the state. The legislature will probably be fusion.

WASHINGTON.

Republicans Carry the State by Small Majority.

Returns coming in slowly. Indications are that state will go Republican by about 2,000 majority, with the election of three congressmen and the control of the legislature.

WYOMING.

Republicans Claim the State by Small Majority.

Chairman Fass of the Republican state committee, claimed that sate by not less than 2,000 majority. The Democrats concede he election of a Republican congressman. The Republicans have a majority in the legislature.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Democrats Scoop Everything In Sight.

The Democrats elect their entire congressional state and county ticket almost without opposition. Georgetown county elects a full Democratic ticket for the first time in thirty-five years.

FLORIDA.

Democratic Ticket Elected Practically Without Opposition.

There was no opposition to the Democratic ticket, state or congressional. Legislature will re-elect U. S. Senator Mallory to succeed himself. Light vote polled.

TENNESSEE.

Entire Democratic State Ticket Elected by 50,000.

The entire Democratic state ticket, headed by James B. Frazier for governor, has been elected by a majority estimated at 50,000. The Democratic congressional ticket is also elected.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Republicans Elect Three Congressmen—Two in Doubt.

Latest returns from the state indicate the election of three Republican congressmen. Two districts are in doubt.

ALABAMA.

Democrats Elect Full State Ticket by Large Majority.

The full Democratic state ticket is elected by a large majority. "Lily White" Republican vote not as large as expected.

TEXAS.

Democrats Sweep Everything Before Them.

The entire Democratic state ticket and all the congressional candidates have been elected by good majorities.

MISSISSIPPI.

Democrats Sweep the State, Electing Entire Ticket.

All of the Democratic nominees for congress in Mississippi are elected.

ODELL'S PLURALITY.

Complete Figures Place the Total at 12,887.

New York, Nov. 7.—Official figures on the vote for governor vary but little from the unofficial reports. According to returns made to the executive at Albany by the several county clerks the plurality for Odell (Rep.) is 12,887.

Returns of the vote for other state officers are so meager that it is impossible to say if the Democrats have been more successful as regards the minor offices than in the case of the governor.

The state legislature is controlled by the Republicans by a reduced majority, but one so large as to admit of no doubt of the return of Mr. Platt to the United States senate.

The New York delegation in the lower house of the Fifty-eighth congress will number 37 instead of 34 as in the present congress. It will contain 20 Republicans and 17 Democrats, whereas the present delegation stood 22 Republicans and 12 Democrats. All of the more noted members of the delegation have been returned, including Sereno E. Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee.

Big Majority in Tennessee.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 7—Last night Chairman Thompson, of the state Democratic executive committee, gave out out a statement in which he estimates the majority of James B. Frazier, Democratic candidate for governor, at 50,000 votes, with a probability of its reaching 52,000. The congressional race in the Eighth district has been a close one, but returns leave no doubt of the re-election of T. W. Sims (Dem.)

Washington is Republican.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 7.—The Republicans have carried the state of Washington by a majority that may run as high as 12,000. The Democrats concede the election of the three congressmen by an average majority of 9,000. The Republicans will have a majority of thirty on joint ballot in the legislature.

Democratic Plurality Grows.

St. Louis, Nov. 7. — Later details from the election in Missouri tend to increase the Democratic plurality in the state over the Republican state ticket. Chairman Samuel B. Cook places the plurality at over 50,000. J. B. Seibold, ex-chairman of the state, places it at not less than 30,000.

Republicans Win in Wyoming.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 7. — Late returns only verify early reports that the Republican victory in Wyoming is overwhelming. Mondell, for congress, will have 6,000 majority, and Richards, for governor, 4,000. The Republican majority in the legislature is very large.

Kansas is Republican.

The Republican victory in Kansas is complete. A good majority of the legislature, all the state officers and a large part of the county officers were taken by the Republicans.

Democrats Gain in Maryland.

Complete returns from city and state show that Maryland's representation in the next house will be four Republicans and two Democrats, a gain of two seats for the Democrats.

SOCIALISTS INCREASE.

Vote in Massachusetts of About Thirty-Four Thousand.

Boston, Nov. 7. — Massachusetts elected a Republican state ticket, a congressional delegation of ten Republicans and four Democrats, a state senate of thirty-one Republicans and nine Democrats, and a house of representatives of 155 Republicans, 2 Democrats and 3 Socialists. The total vote was the largest ever cast for governor, reaching approximately 390,000, against 386,100 for governor two years ago. The socialist vote cannot be overlooked, as John C. Chase, for governor, received about 34,000, a gain of more than 300 per cent over last year.

VAN SANT IS 50,000 AHEAD

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE RE-ELECTED BY A LARGE MAJORITY.

HE LEADS THE STATE TICKET

EIGHT REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF CONGRESS ELECTED AND ONE DEMOCRAT.

JOHN LIND COMES OUT AHEAD

DEFEATS FLETCHER IN THE FIFTH DISTRICT BY GOOD MAJORITY.

Gov. Van Sant's plurality will be more than 50,000. Never before in the history of Minnesota has a Republican candidate for governor in an off year received as many votes as did Gov. Van Sant, and never before has any candidate's majority over his opponent been so large.

Unofficial reports from eighty of the eighty-two counties of the state give Van Sant a plurality of 48,568 over L. A. Rosing, the Democratic candidate for governor. The returns from many of the counties are incomplete and in some instances are estimated by the county committeemen on the basis of the vote in a majority of the precincts of the county. The estimates are conservative, however, and the official returns may increase Van Sant's plurality. The exact figures will not be known until the returns are canvassed by the state canvassing board.

The reports show that in every county in the state Van Sant gained, as compared with two years ago. Rosing carried only a few of the Democratic strongholds and these by much less than the normal Democratic majorities.

The pluralities given Van Sant and Rosing this year as compared with the pluralities given Van Sant and Lind two years ago are:

CONGRESSIONAL TICKET.

Republican Elect Eight Members and the Democrats One.

First district, James A. Tawney (Rep.) 7,000
Second district, J. T. McCleary (Rep.) 4,500
Third district, C. R. Davis (Rep.)....3,900
Fourth district, F. C. Stevens (Rep.) 5,800
Fifth district, John Lind (Dem.)....1,900
Sixth district, C. B. Buckman (Rep.) 1,800
Seventh district, A. J. Volstad (Rep.) 5,000
Eighth district, J. Adam Bede (Rep.) 6,000
Ninth district, Halvor Steenerson (Rep.) 5,000

Minnesota has elected eight Republican congressmen out of nine. Every district in the state except the Fifth gave the Republican candidate for congress a majority.

In the Fifth district, composed of Hennepin county alone, John Lind, Democrat, is elected over Loren Fletcher, Republican, by a majority estimated at 1,900.

The First district will give Tawney about 7,000 majority over McGovern, his Democratic opponent.

Congressman McCleary's committee reports returns showing a majority of 4,500 for the Second district member. The returns by counties are incomplete.

In the Third district Davis' election is claimed by not less than 3,900, based on incomplete returns from all the counties. Goodhue county alone gave Davis 2,800 over Kolars. His own county of Nicollet reports a majority of 1,387; Carver, 280, and Rice, incomplete, 964. Kolars carried Scott county by 1,287.

Early returns from Chisago and Washington counties added to the 2,804 he received in Ramsey county, give Congressman Stevens 5,504 majority.

In the Sixth district returns are coming in slowly, but the Democrats have ceased to claim the election of Dubois, and the Republicans claim Buckman's majority will not be less than 1,800.

In the Seventh district Volstad has had it practically all his own way. His majority will be in the neighborhood of 5,000.

In the Eighth district the Democrats concede Bede's election by 4,000, and it is probable that he will have not less than 6,000.

Halvor Steenerson, in the Ninth district, will run about 5,000 votes ahead of his opponents. He has polled a big vote in all of the counties. In Polk county, the home of both Steenerson and McKinnon, Moon, the Populist candidate from Norman county, polled 1,000 more votes than McKinnon, and Steenerson received nearly 1,000 more votes than both together. The vote stood: Steenerson, 3,500; McKinnon, 800; Moon, 1,800.

THE NEXT LEGISLATURE.

Republicans Make a Slight Increase in Their Representation.

The Republicans seem to have made slight gains in the legislature in Minnesota. They have, apparently, elected fifty-two senators and 115 representatives. Two years ago the Democrats had fourteen senators and fourteen representatives.

There are also three Domo-Populist senators and two Populist senators, and three Domo-Populist representatives, and six Populist representatives. Those usually voted with the Democrats on party measures.

This year there are no Domo-Populists or Populists.

The members of the legislature are as follows:

First District—Senate, O. G. Laugen, Houston, Rep. House, *James E. Bosworth, Money Creek, Rep.

Second District—Senate, *P. Fitzpatrick, Winona, Dem. House, J. J. Pehler, Winona, Rep. D. Sinclair, Winona, Rep. John Schwager, Jr., Bethany, Rep.

KILL THEIR FATHER.

Three Boys, the Eldest Fourteen, Confess the Crime.

Columbus, Neb., Nov. 7.—A farmer named Gerhard Borchers, living several miles northeast of Humphreys, was killed by Herman, a fourteen-year-old son, who used a shotgun he had purchased for that purpose. Then, with the help of two brothers, August, aged ten, and John, aged eight years, Herman dragged the body of his father to a strawstack and set it on fire. The only motive for the crime given is that the father, with whom the children had lived alone since the mother's death, had not treated them kindly. Neighbors of Borchers say they know of no mistreatment on the part of the father.

CLARK NOT ARRESTED.

Son of the Montana Senator Not Accused of Bribery.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 7. — George H. Casey, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, and C. E. Alsop, candidate for the legislature, have been arrrested for bribery. A report gained circulation that C. W. Clark, son of Senator Clark, had also been arrested, but—this is untrue. Young Clark happened to be with Casey at the time of the arrest, and thus the story got started. The two men were placed under bonds of $10,000 each.

He was here looking after his investments in the Yakima Hardware company and the Cascade Lumber company. He retained large interests in the Minnesota lumber trade.

Dorr and David White received wounds in the feet and legs as the result of a shooting scrape in Greenman Brothers' saloon, at Glasgow. Humphrey and J. R. FOLLY OF GIVING ADVICE.

Under Any Circumstances It is a Most Thankless Occupation.

Giving advice is rather a foolish practice, for the reason that people do about what they please, and they seldom wish or heed advice that does not urge them to do just what they wish and intend to do. The man that volunteers to give advice runs a risk of being told to mind his own business or, at least, of having his advice received coldly and disregarded without apology.

Giving advice, even when requested, is generally a thankless service which a wise man is backward in doing. As a rule, people who invite advice really desire encouragement. Unless one tells them what they wish to hear one is very likely to find himself in a wrangle and to have his advice scouted and contemned. And when one does tell them what they wish to hear and they act accordingly, the adviser is held responsible for the result, if it turns out ill, although gets neither credit nor gratitude if it turns out well. The giver of advice is always blamed on account of what might have been.

Each of us has a good deal to do if he attends to his own affairs, makes up his own mind and watches his own business, and the less we have to do with the business of other men, and the less advice we give, the more comfortable, happy and esteemed we shall be.

HAD HURT THE GOSPEL.

How Small Boy Explains Result of Falling Downstairs.

He is a small boy, aged 5, and lives with his parents on the second floor of the house. The anxious woman lives on the first floor, and she is anxious because every time the small boy can steal out of the room upstairs when his mother is not looking, he makes straight for the banisters, and down them he slides pell mell, in great haste, for if he does not make the most of his opportunity he may lose it. And the anxious woman is frightened. She was so much frightened the other day that she spoke to the small boy.

"John Smith," she said—the small boy's name is not John Smith, but that will do as well as another—"John Smith, if you don't stop sliding down those banisters you will hurt yourself, as sure as Gospel.'

It was only a few mornings after when the anxious woman heard a thumping, bounding sound in the front hall—rumpity, dump, dump, dump, as if a heavy body were rolling downstairs. The expected had happened, and as, with her face very white, she opened the door, there was John Smith picking himself up stiffly. He was not crying, for he is old for his age, and knows that worse things than falling downstairs may happen if he is caught disobeying orders. He drew down the corners of his mouth a little, however, as, regaining his equilibrium, he remarked seriously:

"Well, I guess I have hurt the Gospel this time.'

MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE.

Philosophical View Taken by Detected Card Sharper.

N. C. Goodwin tells a story of a poker game in a far western town where gambling is permitted by law and regulated by the gamesters, who generally have the moral support of the community when they administer strenuous punishment for crooked dealing. Four men "sat in" on this occasion, and two of them worked together with so much disaster to the other two, who were playing fairly, that the suspicions of the latter were aroused. They soon discovered the system in operation against them. One, two, or the required number of fingers were laid with apparent carelessness on the table for signaling purposes. Two fingers were resting on the table when quick as a flash one of the cheated sliced them off with a knife, ending the game. The following morning the victim of this impromptu bit of surgery was heard singing and whistling cheerfully in his room in the local hotel, and was asked by a surprised stranger who had heard of the evening's game and its finish if cheerfulness were not somewhat out of order on the part of a man who had just lost two fingers and been branded as a cheat.

"Why, I'm in luck!" was the unctuous reply. "Suppose I had been holding a full hand at that stage of the game!"

Like Finding It.

Senator Quay went to the Adirondacks a few weeks ago to prepare for the return home of his family. He rode up the mountain in a coach that was distressingly tardy, and which was following after another that, if possible, was even slower. He chafed for a time at the pace, and then hit upon a plan he thought would serve to speed both teams. He leaned over to the driver and offered a dollar if the latter would get ahead of the team in front. The driver smilingly agreed, and then raised his voice to say:

"Hey! I say, Bill! Bill, turn yer rig to the side of the road—will yer? There's a guy here says he'll give me a dollar if I pass ye; and I'll divide if you make room!"

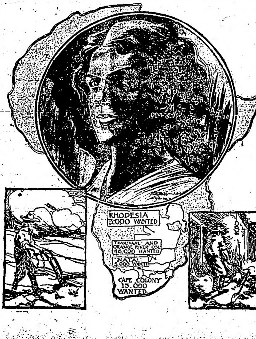
WOMEN NEEDED IN AFRICA.



RHODESIA 3,000 WANTED
TRANSVAAL AND ORANGE RIVER COL. 14,000 WANTED
NATAL 5,000 WANTED
CAPE COLONY 15,000 WANTED

When the British and Boers were fighting across the rolling veldt of South Africa that country needed men, fighting men. Now that peace has been publicly proclaimed south Africa needs women. For women are scarce in the Transvaal. They are so manifestly in demand that employers find great difficulty in supplying themselves with feminine help. They have tried the experiment of importing young women, but the experiment has not proved entirely satisfactory because there is a general tendency in the Boer country towards matrimony. There are in south Africa to-day thousands of available young men who are ready and anxious to sacrifice themselves for their country.

Employers who have secured lady clerks, typists, shop girls, and general servants from England and other countries have become weary of seeing them leave their services for matrimony.

A SURPRISED PHYSICIAN.

A dying patient recovers through the interposition of a humble German.

Chicago, Nov. 15.

Some weeks ago Dr. G——, a very reputable and widely-known physician, living on C—— Street, was called to attend a very complicated case of Rheumatism. Upon arriving at the house he found a man about forty years of age, lying in a prostrated and serious condition, with his whole frame dangerously affected with the painful disease. He prescribed for the patient, but the man continued to grow worse, and on Sunday evening he was found to be in a very alarming condition. The knees and elbows and large joints were greatly inflamed, and could not be moved. It was only with extreme difficulty that the patient could be turned in bed, with the aid of three or four persons. The weight of the clothing was so painful that means had to be adopted to keep it from the patient's body.

The doctor saw that his assistance would be of no avail, and left the house, the members of the family following him to the door, weeping. Almost immediately the grief stricken ones were addressed by an humble German. He had heard of the despair of the family, and now asked them to try his remedy, and accordingly brought forth a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. The poor wife applied this remedy. The first application eased the patient very much; after a few hours they used it again, and, wonder of wonders, the pain vanished entirely! Every subsequent application improved the patient, and in two days he was well and out. When the doctor called a few days after, he was indeed surprised.

To Get Out of It Cheap.

Mrs. Newcomb (on being asked to contribute a dollar to help make up the deficit in the minister's salary)—Really I can't afford to give so much money; but I'll buy two chickens, a pound of coffee, a can of condensed milk, a bottle of olives, some cottage cheese, a sparerib and some cut flowers for the church supper, the proceeds of which are to be turned in.—Judge.

A Question of Sex.

A bright little Washington girl, four years old, who is a descendant of Gobright, the veteran journalist of a decade ago, shows a decided ability to think and decide for herself, quite up to the standard of her brainy ancestor.

She was repeating her prayers at bedtime recently, the Lord's Prayer first, and, as is her habit, winding up with a petition for blessings on the various members of the family of both sexes. But this time, when she came to the conclusion, she hesitated a moment, as a new idea struck her, and then, in a most devout tone, added:

"Amen and a-women!"

"Why, daughter, you must not say that! What did you say 'A-women' for?" asked her mother, in surprise.

"Well," replied the young philosopher, "didn't I pray for women as well as men?"—Margaret Sullivan, in Lippincott's.

Green County's Sensation.

Catskill, N. Y., November 10th.—Ulster and Greene Counties are ringing with the news of the wonderful recovery of George F. Ayers, who lives at 16 Division street, in this city. One year ago Mr. Ayers was suffering from Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, and the doctors gave him little relief and less hope. To-day Mr. Ayers is as well as man could wish. He tells the following story:

"About a year ago I was at West Camp, sick with Bright's Disease and without hope of ever being better, when an old gentleman from Bath, N. Y., advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, telling me they had cured him of the same disease.

"I had tried so many remedies that I was past hoping and told him so, but when he bought me a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and coaxed me to try them I did so just to humor his whim.

"That was the means of saving my life. I took that box and half a dozen more. Thanks to that old man and Dodd's Kidney Pills, I am cured."

Mere Superstition.

"He's just as superstitious as he can be, D'Aubur is. You know he had two paintings for sale, and first he asked $650 apiece for them."

"Yes."

"Well, you see, that would be $1,300 for both; so, when a man offered him $10 for both he took it, because it would have been unlucky to stick out for $1,300."—Philadelphia Press.

GOV. WHITE IT IS

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE IS RE-ELECTED GOVERNOR OF NORTH DAKOTA.

MAJORITY WILL REACH 11,000

DEMOCRATS GET ABOUT 26 OF THE 140 MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

SPALDING AND MARSHALL TOO

BOTH CONGRESSMEN RUN AHEAD OF THE TICKET ABOUT TWO THOUSAND.

Practically complete returns on the election show that Gov. White, the Republican candidate, will have a majority of about 11,000. Official returns may, of course, slightly change this estimate, but it is safe to say, on the returns now at hand, that when the final figures are given out the governor's majority will be found to be above 10,000.

The returns indicate that while in the cities there was a good deal of scratching of ballots in the country districts a much larger proportion of the voters voted the straight ticket. This condition appears to have prevailed all over the state.

Spalding and Marshall, the Republican candidates for congress, will run about two thousand votes above the rest of the ticket.

According to the table below White has carried every county in the state with the exception of Walsh, possibly Grand Forks, and perhaps one or two of the smaller western counties.

The next legislature will be Republican by a large majority, the committee claiming to have elected four-fifths of it. There were some very lively contests, and some counties which have been Republican failed this time to elect Republican candidates.

Richland county has many Democrats, and the members of this party were successful in the legislative contests in both districts, the Republicans electing but one man, George Warner, candidate for the house.

Coming down the valley every district has elected the full Republican ticket until Cavalier is reached. There Ole Axvig fell by the wayside, Charles L. Plain being elected to the state senate by four majority. West to Bottineau all the Republican candidates were elected. In Bottineau State Senator Noble was defeated, but all the Republican candidates for the house were elected.

In Towner county the Democrats elected Currie to the state senate and Peterson and Harvey to the lower house. They also elected the county judge. In Ward county the Democrats elected but one candidate on the county ticket, Miss Flora Frost, as county superintendent of schools, and Rolette county broke about even on the county ticket. Cronan is said to have carried Towner county, and ran ahead of his ticket in Ward and Rolette counties, though definite returns have not been received up to date.

Along the Northern Pacific main line the election of Ramsett of Barnes is in doubt, but all other Republican legislative candidates were elected. Stutsman and Morton elected Republicans.

In Burleigh county, where there has been the biggest fight in the state, McGahan and Bostrom, independent candidates, were elected.

In Stark county there was a close contest, McClure, Republican, and Lish, Democrat, being elected, with a very close race between Senor and Foley.

The legislature is reported to stand 114 Republicans and 26 Democrats, though the returns may change the totals somewhat. The Democrats claim Walsh, Grand Forks and Towner counties by small majorities. The Republicans will concede only Walsh.

The following are the majorities for Gov. White as estimated by the Republican state central committee:

POINTS OUT MASON

NEGRO SAYS HE IS THE MAN WHO GAVE HIM WATCHES TO PAWN.

IDENTIFICATION IS POSITIVE

ANOTHER STEP IN SOLVING THE "JACK THE SLUGGER" MYSTERY.

MASON TAKES IT VERY COOLLY

SAYS HE DOES NOT KNOW THE NEGRO AND NEVER SAW HIM BEFORE.

Boston, Nov. 11.—George L. O. Perry, the negro who pawned the watches taken from the murdered women, Miss Clara A. Morton and Miss Agnes McPhee, declared yesterday that Alan G. Mason is the man from whom he received these articles. Perry was taken to the jail in East Cambridge, where Mason, under arrest on the charge of killing Miss Morton, is confined pending a hearing in the Cambridge court. In one of the jail corridors Perry positively identified Mason as the man who had given him the two watches. Mason, by neither look nor word, betrayed any knowledge of having seen Perry before. When questioned by Sheriff Fairbairn, Mason merely said: "I do not know this man; I never saw him before."

During the day Chief Ryan and Officer Argy of Belmont talked with Perry, and later State Officers Tew, Dunham, Dexter and others took Perry to the jail. The callers were shown into the room where Mason and six others were in line. Perry walked straight up to Mason, who was second in position, and, Pointing His Finger at Him, said: "This is the man who gave me the watches to pawn." He was about to leave the room when Sheriff Fairbairn asked him if he would not like to talk with Mason in order that he might make himself sure that Mason was the man. Perry replied that there was no need of that, as he knew who the man was and had known him for a long time.

On being returned to his cell in the police station, Perry was confronted by three newsboys and they identified him as another newsboy.

Another visitor at the police station was Mason's attorney. He was accompanied by a woman. This woman did not see Perry, but it was understood that she had been produced by the defense in the hope of showing that Perry himself or some other negro was the real "Jack the Slugger." She is one of the women who were followed by a negro in Cambridge several weeks ago. Mr. Ware, Mason's attorney, places no faith in the statement of Perry that it was Mason that gave the boy the watches.

FIGHT WITH DOUKS

FANATICAL RUSSIANS CAUSE DISTURBANCE IN NORTHWEST CANADA.

RESIST THE MOUNTED POLICE

DOUKHOBORS LOCK THEMSELVES TOGETHER AND FORCE IS NECESSARY.

FORCED ON BOARD THE CARS

TAKEN BY SPECIAL TRAIN TO YORKTON, GUARDED BY MOUNTED POLICE.

Winnipeg, Nov. 11.—Another chapter in the history of the Doukhobors' pilgrimage to convert the world has closed, but with the ending "to be continued."

The Doukhobors Saturday night were taken by special train from Minnedosa to Yorkton and were yesterday kept in the cars, closely guarded by Northwest mounted police. Although victorious at Minnedosa, it is a question yet to be decided if the government will not be defeated in their final fight in getting the Doukhobors back to their villages. If the fight to move them 100 yards is any example of what the government has to contend with, it will take a much larger force to move the Doukhobors the 100 miles to their villages, which are that distance from Yorkton. Minnedosa dispatches report stormy scenes during the entraining of the Doukhobors there. After repeated interviews with the Doukhobors' leader, Selbroff, Agent Spears decided to use force, and, Grabbing the Leader by the shoulders, pushed him out of the building in which the Doukhobors had spent the night, at the same time calling to the police to bring the rest. As the Douks came out they locked themselves together by every man hugging another, making a solid body. Then the excitement commenced. The citizens turned in and helped the police, but it was hard work to get the Douks apart. It took four and five men to pull one Doukhobor from this interlocked mass. They had to go, however. Some went quietly when broken away, while the majority fought every inch of the ground. The scene was one that has never been equalled in the history of Canada—a sullen, stubborn mob of people, fighting fiercely with police and citizens, not in the usual way of warfare, but just to be left alone and allowed to go their way. One citizen had an ear nearly bitten off, a Doukhober had his ankle broken and there were many other minor mishaps. A few of the Douks went to the coaches alone, but the big majority were carried bodily, dragged, pushed along or loaded into wagons of farmers who had gathered to see the fight.

ALASKA CANNERIES PROTEST.

Fish Companies Combine to Send Delegates to Washington.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 11.—The independent canneries and salteries of Alaska have organized an association, the object of which is to send a representative to Washington to work for a repeal of the law requiring cannery men to maintain hatcheries and the order of the treasury department that all streams shall be closed to July 4. These laws, they say, cannot be lived up to by those engaged in the business, owing to the expense of the former and the fact that the latter cuts off one-half of the regular pack. They also hope to secure better transportation facilities to their plants, and have a number of lesser grievances.

AMENDMENTS MAY BE PASSED.

Vote in the Country May Pull Them Through.

St. Paul, Nov. 8.—It is possible that the bill providing for a 4 per cent gross earnings on railroads and the constitutional amendments relating to taxation and to road improvement have been adopted. They were overwhelmingly defeated in St. Paul and Minneapolis, and the returns from over the state are very meager. The returns at hand, however, from the country districts show that the amendments received an unusually heavy vote outside the large cities. The exact fate of the amendment will probably not be known until after the meeting of the state canvassing board. The amendments and the gross earnings tax bill require a majority of the entire vote cast at the election, so that failure to vote for an amendment is practically a vote against it.

MILL SEASON ABOUT OVER.

Plants Will Be Shut Down Within a Week or Two.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 8.—The steamer Frontenac of the Laird-Norton company was sent to Wabasha yesterday to go on the ways there for the annual overhauling. The mills of the Laird-Norton company and the Winona Lumber company, which this boat has been supplying, have now logs enough to run for a week or two longer, when they will close down for the season. Word was received in this city yesterday that so many logs were brought down the Chippewa river because of the recent rise that the West Newton slough was crowded and it was necessary to open the boom and start a crew of men at work. This is something very unusual for this season of the year. There now promises to be a large supply of logs on hand for an early start of the mills next spring.

INDIANS ARE FENCED IN.

Barb Wire Fence Is Put Up About the Rosebud Reservation.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 8. — The work of constructing barb wire fence along the northern and eastern boundary of the Rosebud Indian reservation has been completed. Settlers in that part of the state, adjoining the reservation, find the fence a decided inconvenience. The only way to enter the reservation now is through one of the gates, which are several miles apart, and which are kept locked. It is said that a guard will reside at each gate and will patrol his portion of the fence each day and keep it in repair. One good feature of the fence, and the principal reason why it is constructed, is that it will prevent cattle belonging to the whites adjacent to the reservation from drifting to the Indian lands and becoming mixed with animals belonging to the Indians.

TRIES TO CHOKE HIMSELF.

When found by the jailor the man was nearly unconscious, with blood running from his nostrils, mouth and ears, while his throat was frightfully lacerated. He persistently refuses to give his name, but is supposed to come from Sioux Falls.

PEACE IS FAR OFF

COLOMBIAN REVOLUTIONARY ARMY ORDERED TO CONTINUE WARFARE.

THE CONFERENCE FALLS THROUGH

GOVERNMENT INTENDED TO LIMIT ITS SCOPE TO ONE SUBJECT.

LIBERALS REFUSE TO ATTEND

GEN. URIBE-URIBE IS SENTENCED TO DEATH WITHOUT MERCY.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Nov. 11.—The reason why Gen. Vargas-Santos, military director of the Colombian revolution, did not go to Panama to attend the conference arranged to take place yesterday on board the United States battleship Wisconsin in Panama harbor, between representatives of the Colombian government and of the revolutionists, is because the government of Colombia, according to advices received here, intended to limit the subject of conference to the acceptance of the decree of amnesty recently promulgated by the president of Colombia, Senor Marroquin.

Gen. Santo Domingo arrived here last month bearing peace proposals from the Colombian government to Gen. Vargas-Santos. He said the purpose of his government in calling the peace conference was to establish an effective and lasting peace which would Harmonize the Interests of the several political parties concerned in the revolution. The matter was discussed between Gen. Vargas-Santos and the Colombian representative, who exchanged a number of cablegrams with the Colombian authorities at Panama with the result that Gen. Vargas-Santos accepted the proposals made by Gen. Santo Domingo and promised to attend the conference at Panama with Generals Perdomo and Salazar, of the Colombian government, and Gen. Herrera of the revolutionists.

At this point of the negotiations Gen. Vargas-Santos received advices to the effect that notwithstanding the proposals of the Colombian government made through its representative, Colombia purposed limiting the conference to the acceptance of the decree of amnesty. Gen. Vargas-Santos thereupon refused to accept such a proposition and decided to withdraw from the conference, which, he says, he considers futile.

At the same time the military director of the Colombian revolution learned that the Colombian government had issued orders to Gen. Tovar to imprison the revolutionary general, Uribe-Uribe, and Sentence Him to Death without mercy. This order was given in spite of Gen. Uribe-Uribe's capitulation to the government forces, which occurred at Rio Frio, Colombia, last month. The receipt of this news, which is considered in Colombian revolutionary circles here to be a shameful violation of public faith, further decided Gen. Vargas-Santos not to attend the peace conference at Panama, and he issued orders to the Colombian revolutionary army to continue its warfare.

Gen. Vargas-Santos declares he is willing to make peace providing that the Colombian government will recognize the civil and political rights of which the liberal party has been deprived for the last seventeen years, but not otherwise.

Panama, Nov. 10. — The Colombian government gunboats Bogota and and Chucuito left here yesterday on a trip along the coast in search of the revolutionary fleet. It is reported that Gen. Marmaduke of the Bogota has received instructions to engage the revolutionists in a decisive battle if he finds it possible to do so.

TO SUPPRESS LADRONISM.

Energetic Measures to Be Taken Against the Bandits.

Manila, Nov. 11.—The government is adopting vigorous measures to suppress ladronism in the provinces of Cavite, Rizal and Bulucan. A zone embracing these provinces, and surrounding Manila, is the scene of constant petty and, sometimes, serious disorder. Several armed bands, some of them numbering 200 or 300 men, are operating in the described district and have committed various depredations. They find a safe refuge in the mountains. The plan of the government contemplates securing the assistance of the military, which has been inactive since the end of the insurrection. The extent of the army's participation in the work of suppression depends upon developments. It is probable that the military authorities will request the garrisons to protect the more important towns, while the constabulary conduct the field operations. It is thought that martial law in a modified form will be declared and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus suspended in Cavite province, which has been the home of the ladrones for ages.

FOUND DEAD IN DULUTH.

Mysterious Murder or Unaccountable Suicide.

Duluth, Nov. 11.—The many friends and acquaintances of Edward Mahoney of Duluth were astonished to hear yesterday that his dead body had been found at 11 a. m. on the lake shore, a short distance south of the city hall. Mr. Mahoney's death is surrounded by mystery. He is believed to have been murdered, but there are indications of suicide. It certainly was not murder for purposes of robbery, but there was no known cause for suicide. The police and coroner are conducting a rigid examination. Mr. Mahoney had been for years trainer of the Duluth Boat club crews, and at the time of his death was deputy sheriff and jailer at the county jail. He was a brother of D. J. Mahoney, a teller in the American Exchange bank. Mr. Mahoney was in perfect health, happily married and well-to-do. No marks were found upon the body pointing to violence. The action of the water had rubbed the skin from the face, and that is the only mark. His watch and money were in his pockets. The watch stood at 11:08 and the tragedy must have happened at that hour Saturday night.

KILLED A CHICKEN THIEF.

Henry Bailey, a Suburbanite, Kills a Robber by a Chance Shot.

St. Paul, Nov. 11.—Henry Green, a Minneapolis peddler, was shot and instantly killed at 4:30 o'clock Saturday morning on the farm of Levi Bailey near Langdon, twelve miles southeast of St. Paul. The shot was fired from a shotgun by Henry Bailey, son of Levi Bailey, who says he caught the peddler in the act of robbing the henroost. The charge of heavy shot plowed through the man's clothing, entering the middle of the back and tearing away the flesh. It was not known at the time that the man was hit, and the body was not discovered until two hours later, when daylight came. The shooting of Green is the culmination of a long series of chicken thief "scares" that have kept the people in the neighborhood of Langdon in a constant state of excitement.

BIG PARTY HUNTING FOR EGAN.

Reward Attracts More Men Into the District.

Kalispell, Mont., Nov. 11. — There have been no developments in the Egan search, notwithstanding a reward of $1,000 has attracted more men into the district. Another party left Columbia for Hungry Horse yesterday afternoon. It is now impossible to get through the country except on snow shoes, and parties who have gone through to the South Fork have been forced to use them. The return of two parties now out is anxiously awaited. One went up to the cabin on Pyramid peak and another into the South Fork country. It will be at least three days before they can make their report. Dr. Houston spent part of the day here, returning to Belton last night. He has given up all hope of seeing Egan alive.

GOPHERS DOWN ILLINOIS TEAM.

Minneapolis, Nov. 11. — Minnesota won a hard fought victory from Illinois on Northrop field Saturday by a score of 17 to 5. From start to finish both teams played fast ball with little fumbling. The Gophers excelled in team play. Capt. Stahl played a wonderful game for the visitors. Pitts also covered himself with glory by his fast end runs. Cook's drop kick from the forty-yard line was the prettiest goal of the season and saved the visitors from a shut-out. The line plunges of the heavy Gophers' backs did much toward winning the game.

GLAD TO SEE THEM

INFLUX OF AMERICANS TO NORTHWESTERN CANADA IS WELCOMED.

NEEDS SUCH STURDY PIONEERS

SUPPLY THE KIND OF ENERGY SUITED TO CANADA'S NEEDS.

CANUCKS SUDDENLY WAKE UP

REALIZE THAT THE EXODUS CAN ONLY DO THE COUNTRY GOOD.

London, Nov. 8.—Wholesale pre-empting of Canadian lands by American emigrants has given British interests in the same direction a tremendous impetus, according to William T. Preston, the Dominion's indefatigable emigration commissioner in Europe. Mr. Preston said:

"It required nothing short of a first-class American scare to arouse the mother country to the industrial possibilities of Canada. For the first time since we began to boom our land of plenty we enjoy the co-operation of numerous public and private bodies and individuals, who have suddenly awakened to the importance of preserving the Canadian Northwest territory for British subjects.

"We can frankly say, nevertheless, that we welcome cordially the extensive influx of Americans now in progress and only regret that there are not more of them. They bring into the country the peculiar species of pioneer energy exactly suited to Canada's economic requirements. It is not likely that they will Prove Trouble Breeders on account of their republican instincts. The only complaint at present is that they must wait three years in order to become naturalized Canadians.

"When I visited St. Paul and Minneapolis a few weeks ago I found real estate offices booming Canada in more glowing terms and in far more extravagant fashion than we ever attempted. Altogether, Canada says 'amen' to these efforts to transplant American citizens, realizing that the exodus can only do the country good."

Sir Gilbert Parker, who is attempting to promote a scheme of imperial emigration regulation, said: "I would be happy if half a million Americans annually crossed the Canadian border, but if Canada is to remain British or Canadian it is necessary that the emigrants who go there be content with the institutions they find there."

"There is no reason to believe that the United States emigrants will attempt to plant seeds of disloyalty to the monarchical system. At any rate, if the staunch little government at Ottawa views the American invasion with complaisance, the rest of the empire has no need to worry."

EXPECTS KOCH TO RETRACT.

French Doctor Thinks German Will Change His Mind.

Paris, Nov. 8.—"When the tuberculosis congress assembles next year in Paris," said Dr. Brouardel, ex-dean of the Paris medical faculty, to-day, "Dr. Koch may have a startling communication to make."

The doctor, who was one of the representatives of France at the Berlin congress, from which he has just returned, continued: "It is probable that the eminent German specialist will entirely repudiate, or at least confess that he has been partly mistaken in his famous theory of the non-transmissibility of bovine tuberculosis to the human species. However much concealing their real significance under heavy German phrasing, Dr. Koch's speeches at the Berlin congress indubitably pointed to his withdrawal of the unqualified terms he used at London last year.

"In other words, Koch no longer affirms the impossibility of transmission of bovine contagion, admitting that in rare cases it is quite possible, and even probable. Before Another Twelvemonth has passed I should not be at all surprised were the doctor to agree that he has been altogether too sure. Anyway, his admissions at Berlin constitute a scientific disappointment to the world in general."

Paris scientific circles, which at first were rather surprised at Dr. Brouardel's statement, are preparing to see another instance of Dr. Koch's feverish desires to advance the progress of medical science. The only person who is delighted at the turn of affairs is Dr. Garnault, whose recent experiences, nevertheless, have tended to prove the validity of Dr. Koch's assertions. Garnault takes credit to himself for having urged Koch to make deeper researches.

They had been married twenty-three years. For some time Hink had been jealous of a nephew, Frank Hink, who has boarded at the Hink home. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Hink and Frank Hink went to Binghamton. Mrs. Hink and Frank drove home alone. About 2 o'clock yesterday morning Hink, who had arrived home some time previously in an intoxicated condition, quarreled with his wife and made an assault upon her. She ran out of doors in her night dress, barefooted, and, pursued by her husband, ran down the road. He was armed with a clasp knife. Finally, in the darkness, Mrs. Hink eluded him, and, going back to the house, barricaded the door to her bed room. Hink went back, and when he tried to open the door to renew the assault, the woman took up a shotgun and pointed it at her husband. It was discharged, the charge entering Hink's breast just above the heart. He died in a few minutes.

CHAPTER II. (Continued.)

The sky was now so clear that he could distinguish prominent objects with tolerable ease. He saw something, dimly, shaped like a horse, lying on the pebbles, and he stumbled along toward it.

His surmise was correct. It was a horse, fallen prone upon the ground, and the rider's leg was pinned down by the fall.

"Hello!" said Burt, as he reached the man's side. "What have you done to yourself? What sent you down to such a place as this on horseback?"

"That the devil only knows," was the grim reply. "I'm rather glad somebody has come to help me, for I've been shouting myself hoarse, and I'm soaked through with rain."

"Where are you hurt?" asked Dick, as he took hold of the bridle and tried to make the horse rise.

"My arm is broken, for one thing. About my leg, I don't know; it may be nothing but a mere jelly by this time."

Burt coaxed and scolded until he succeeded in making the horse scramble to his feet.

"He is not hurt, is he?" anxiously asked the man.

"No—apparently not. Now, let's see about yourself," was Burt's response.

After gaining his footing the horse lowered his head and smelled of his master, whinnying gently.

"All right, old boy, aren't you?" exclaimed the man, reaching forth a hand and stroking the animal's soft nose. "I hope your knees are not cut on those stones."

Burt assisted the stranger to rise, feeling his curiosity greater with every moment.

"Thanks—a thousand thanks!" the man said, as he stood upon his feet once more. "If you hadn't heard me I might have lain here until morning. Is there any house near here where I can get shelter? And is there a surgeon who can set my arm? I want to get on my journey in a day or so."

"There's a house but a little way from here," Burt answered. "I believe they will shelter you there."

He was thinking of Purcell's.

"Let's go on, then," was the impatient reply. "I've no time to lose now. I'd like to get these wet clothes off before they give me a fever. I've no time to spend on a fever now."

"But can you walk, or will you mount your horse?" asked Burt.

"I'm as well able to walk as my horse is to carry me now, I fancy," was the answer. "But before I go we must rig some kind of a sling for this arm; the pain is too sharp. Gad! It's enough to make a fellow faint if I move on!"

Burt assisted, and the two tied a handkerchief, so that the arm was supported and the stranger could go on.

They, necessarily, went slowly, and, before they reached their destination Burt had half-repented of his resolve to take the man to Purcell's.

Within the last few minutes he had thought he would rather not have this stranger see Kate Purcell. Then he told himself he was very silly to think of that.

His companion was evidently in a very different walk in life from theirs. He would see them but a day or two, at longest. Yes; Purcell's was the handiest place—of course, he should take the man there.

Burt had counted with surety upon the thought that Purcell would still be up poring over what they had found, and he was disappointed when he came in sight of the house and saw no light there.

"He'll be awake, at any rate," he thought, and pounded heavily on the door.

In a few moments he heard a movement up stairs; then a light gleamed behind the windows, and footsteps were heard.

The stranger had sat down on the step, and was waiting in silence. He was shivering in his wet clothes, and he was longing to lie down somewhere where it was warm.

"Who is it?" asked a woman's voice from behind the door, while a hand was busy undoing the fastenings.

It was Kate's voice, and even then there flashed through Burt's mind the thought that he would take the stranger away immediately; but he rejected the idea, and believed himself possessed of some superstitious folly.

"It's I—Dick," he replied, "and a man who has been out in the tempest and broken his arm. Call your father, and ask if he can shelter the man until morning."

"I need not call him to know that," was the hospitable reply, and the door was opened and the two men entered.

Both Dick and Kate looked swiftly and searchingly at the stranger as he entered the little room, and the light of the lamp in Kate's hand fell full upon him.

He was plainly a gentleman, both in dress and bearing. He was dark, slender—perhaps twenty-five years old. His eyes were brown, and as they wandered about the room, Dick furtively watched them, that he might catch their expression when they looked at Kate, and he saw surprise and admiration in them.

"Where is your father?" questioned Burt, in a slightly-vexed tone. "I wouldn't have come here, only I thought he might be awake."

"He is sleeping heavily; he has been home but a short time," said Kate, in a cold voice. "Will you assist the gentleman up to the south chamber? He should go to bed directly, or he may be ill."

"But that is your room," began Burt, quickly.

Kate flashed a glance of anger at him and said:

"I have other accommodations for myself."

The young man, who had heard the talk, rose hastily, from the seat where he had sunk down, exhausted, and said:

"I beg you will not inconvenience yourself. The house is small. It is very thoughtless of me to ask shelter, but if you will let me lie on this lounge until to-morrow—until I can get where I can have my arm set—"

"Do not speak thus," interrupted Kate, her face flashing as she spoke. "We should be churlish, indeed, to refuse anyone in your position what comfort we can afford. You are almost ill now. Will you follow me up stairs?"

The stranger, looking at Kate as she spoke, could not refuse to accede to her request. Without saying another word he rose and followed her.

His head was light and dizzy, and he was obliged to lean against the wall for a moment on his way up the stairs.

Dick Burt stood in surly silence as the two left the room; he could not make up his mind to lend his help. He almost wished he had left the man out on the beach alone.

"But he may have a fever and die," he thought, with a bitter smile. "It's plain it was a surprise to him to see a girl like Kate in a place like this."

He stood silent while he heard Kate go into her father's room and rouse the old man. Then she came down stairs, and, without looking at Burt, she asked:

"Will you go over to the village for a doctor, Dick? The gentleman's arm must be set—immediately—and I'm afraid he'll have a fever."

Instead of replying, Dick came nearer, and said:

"What do you think of him?"

She looked at him in astonishment.

"What do you mean? What do I think of him?"

"Yes. Exactly that. Can't you tell me?" persisted Dick.

"I don't think anything of him, save that he seems like a gentleman," she said, and added: "Will you go?"

Something in her manner reassured Burt. He moved toward the door, saying:

"Yes, I'll go; but, if I don't mistake, he'll want his horse taken care of first."

"Father will attend to the horse; do go, directly," she said, earnestly.

Dick turned back from the door. Emboldened by her kind manner, he came near her and took her hand. Had he possessed a trifle more penetration, he would never have said what he did.

"Before I go, Kate, just give me a kiss—only one. You always are so awful hard to me, Kate."

The girl gazed at him in astonishment. She withdrew her hand, but not abruptly. She almost thought he had been drinking.

"No; why should I kiss you?" she said. "You talk strangely; I'm not hard to you. Will you go now?"

Dick looked at her hungrily for a moment, then turned away and left the house without saying anything more.

Meanwhile Purcell had risen, had listened to his daughter's hurried words of explanation, and had gone into the room into which she had shown the stranger, while she made a fire and heated blankets and drinks, knowing well that the man stood in great danger of a fever.

The girl had not been in bed that night. She had sat up waiting anxiously through the storm for her father's return. She distrusted Richard Burt's influence, but she could not tell why. She had no idea of the business that led them out so often in the middle of the night.

All these thoughts, mingled with some curiosity concerning the stranger, were in her mind, as she rapidly prepared a hot drink.

In a few minutes her father came down stairs after the blankets she had by the stove.

"Has Dick gone for the doctor?" he asked.

"Yes. Will the gentleman be ill?"

"I'm afraid so. Bring up that drink in a few minutes. Did you say he knew who he was?"

"No—nothing about him."

"Nor where Dick found him?" with a quick hope in his heart that it had not been near that one spot which was so in his thoughts.

"No—only that it was on the beach somewhere."

Purcell went up stairs. When Kate followed with the steaming herb tea, the young man was lying in bed wrapped heavily in blankets. There was a deep flush on his face and his eyes were unnaturally brilliant.

He drank the tea without a word, and spoke only to ask about his horse, whereupon Purcell immediately left the room to attend to the animal, which he found standing close by the door.

When Kate turned to leave, also, the stranger said:

"Have you any objection to coming close to the bedside? I have a fancy that the pain will be easier with you near me, and my arm aches intolerably."

Kate was surprised at his words, but she already regarded him as ill, and one treats a sick person much as one does a child.

She approached the bed and bent over him, saying, softly:

"I wish that, in truth, there was healing in my presence. You must suffer much. The doctor will be here within an hour, and your arm will not pain you after it has set."

While she spoke, he looked at her so intently that she blushed again.

"Is this your home?" he asked, abruptly.

"Yes," she replied.

"Pardon me, but it seems to me that you must have lived in the—" he smiled, sarcastically—"in what we call the polite world."

"I have lived here ever since my remembrance," she answered.

"That is very strange. I thought, perhaps you might have met with some reverse of fortune, and have come here in consequence, not that this was your home. Have you never, then, been out in the world?"

Kate smiled as she replied:

"Beyond an occasional trip to Boston, I know nothing experimentally of what you call the world. I have been there for books. I have seen pictures. I have had a glimpse of the beauties of culture."

She saw that it amused him to talk with her, and she sat down by him. The time would seem very long to him before his arm could be set; she would do what she could to make the moments more endurable.

There was something in the gentle and unassuming simplicity of her manner that was very refreshing to him. And it put him at his ease to see that she treated him just the same as she would have treated a strange lady, who had been thus brought to the house.

"But you love art—all that is beautiful and refined?" he said.

"Oh, yes, that of course! But I find it is not wise to indulge in dreams that I shall ever live in any other world than this."

"You do not look like a philosopher," he returned, noting the eager look in her eyes, the tremulous movement of the lips, as she spoke earnestly.

"I am not; but one is obliged to get accustomed to one's life."

There was silence for a while, durgin which the man lay looking about the little, unfinished room, and wondering how a girl like this could be even tolerably contented there. Suddenly he asked:

"Does your father think I shall be ill?"

"He fears you may have a fever."

"Impossible!" he exclaimed. "I can't spare the time now. I must go on my way to-morrow."

She said nothing, and he added:

"I claim your sympathy, Miss —— But I do not know your name."

"It is Kate Purcell."

"Miss Purcell, you will be doubly sorry for my mishap when I tell you that next week I am to be married. I was taking a little equestrian trip along the coast—one that I had contemplated for some time—and next week I was going to Philadelphia to my wedding; and now—Well, I must be well, that's all!"

There was something boyish in his words and manner—a kind of frankness, that was very winning.

Kate made some reply, and then he said:

"Was that man who found me your brother?"

There was something so penetrating in his glance, as he asked this, that Kate averted her eyes as she said:

"No; he is not a relative."

"You called him Dick, I noticed."

"He is a friend of my father."

Somehow, the subject was very disagreeable to Kate. She felt that there was almost impertinence in the stranger's questioning her thus, and in a moment she rose and left the room.

The man lay thinking of her.

"I hope that fellow is not her lover. A coarse fellow—not half worthy of her. Jove! it's not right for her to marry that man; but she will, of course, and he will drag her down to his level. What is it Tennyson says about that?"

He tried to while away the time in recalling the quotation, but he wished Kate had remained with him.

CHAPTER III.

Dick and Kate.

Fortunately, the doctor was a tolerably skillful surgeon, and the young man's arm was soon bound up in splints and carefully suspended in a handkerchief.

"He'll have a fever—there's no doubt of that," said the doctor, when he came down stairs; "but he seems a robust fellow. His strength may take him through easily. Who is he?"

Purcell looked at his daughter, as if waiting for her to reply.

"I don't know," she said. "He seems a stranger here. I have not even learned his name."

"Dick should know," said Purcell, turning to Burt, who had returned with the doctor.

"Don't know, I'm sure, unless he's some prince in disguise," was the sneering response.

"At any rate, whoever he is, he can't be moved from here at present," the doctor said. "It'll be some trouble to you, Purcell."

"One must be hospitable," was the response.

And the doctor and Dick left the house.

"Rather odd about him, isn't it?" said the doctor, who was something of a gossip. "The man seems to have dropped from the clouds."

"Or come up from below," remarked Dick.

The doctor looked sharply at his companion as he returned:

"Well, we shall find out who he is in time. Meanwhile, he'll have a capital chance to become acquainted with 'Our Lady of the Beach.' That girl must be an 'earl's daughter,' from the refined gentleness of her bearing. The young man will see it, probably. How much will you bet, Burt, that this stranger falls in love with Miss Purcell?"

"I don't know about his falling in love with her; but I'll lay you a handsome sum that she never marries him, if you like to bet in that way."

"Ah, ha!" the doctor laughed. "I see you know something of Kate Purcell's heart. I suspected as much. Let us hope, then, the young man will see no beauty in the girl. But he must be a flinty fellow if he is insensible to the charms of such a nurse as he will have."

When Dick Burt left the doctor and walked on alone, it was already a couple of hours after sunrise; but he had no mind to go to his lodging house for breakfast. He did not wish to see anyone until he had gained more control of the tempest of anger and jealousy raging within him.

He walked on, without thought of the direction in which he was going, until he found he had approached the spot where, a few hours before, he had found the stranger.

As he became aware of the fact he went to the spot and looked carefully about him, with a vague notion that the place might tell something of the man's history.

A handkerchief was lying near where the horse and rider had lain. He picked it up quickly and turned it over eagerly. He thought it rather a dainty handkerchief for a man to carry, and uttered an exclamation of contempt for the swell who would carry such a thing. Then he found the name, "Laura Lauriat," and a smile came to his lips.

"It may be his sweetheart's. In that case, he may not condescend to admire Kate. I'll put her a bit on her guard, and show her this, at any rate; it'll do no harm."

He went directly toward Purcell's, actually going out of his way to avoid going near the spot where he and the old man had found the mysterious chest the night before.

"It's ill-luck about that place," he muttered. "I can't help having a feeling that we shall get into trouble about that affair. Purcell is mighty simple-minded about some things."

In a few moments he reached the house he sought. Kate was outside the door picking up chips for the breakfast fire, and betrayed some surprise at seeing Burt again.

Something in the expression of his face, much as he attempted to conceal his feelings, made her feel like shrinking a little. But she only said:

"It's time you rested, Dick; you were up all night, I think."

"A night's rest, more or less, makes but little difference, I fancy," he said, coming nearer and taking up the basket of wood. "How is the stranger this morning?"

"Very restless. Father is with him now. Are you coming into breakfast?"

Dick entered the house, and while Kate was attending to the frying fish, Dick drew the handkerchief from his pocket, saying:

"I picked it up where I found the man last night. Do you think that's his name?"

He was surprised at the strength of the interest with which he watched Kate's face as she took the handkerchief in her hand. But his suspicion might have been soothed by her manner.

"Laura Lauriat must be the name of the lady to whom he is soon to be married," she said, quietly, handing back the handkerchief.

Again a chill went over her as she saw how Dick's face lighted at her words.

"What do you mean?" he asked, quickly.

"That he told me he was to be married next week; that is why he is so very desirous not to have a fever now."

"Oh, what a fool I have been!" exclaimed Dick, joyously, and his face was handsome as he spoke, his black eyes sparkling. "Kate, may you never know how jealous I have been. I quite hated the fellow. I have been a fool. Of course, you could not think of him."

Kate turned away to hide her blushing face. She was coloring with indignation, but there was an underfeeling of fear which she could never divest herself of when with Dick Burt.

She had a secret belief that he had some unknown power over her father, and she was afraid to irritate him. Thus far she had been able to prevent any open declaration of love from him.

She went on briskly with her preparations for breakfast. She made several remarks upon other subjects, but Dick was too eager now to remember his resolve to woo her cautiously.

"Kate, listen to me one moment!" he said, catching her hand as she went by him. "I must say something to you!"

"I am so busy now," she replied, releasing herself. "Don't you see I can't attend to you?"

She smiled serenely as she spoke, but she trembled inwardly.

If she refused Dick Burt she knew she made an enemy of him. Yet the thought of the stranger up stairs made it seem more impossible than ever for her to love the man by her side. Every nerve in her shuddered at his approach, yet she felt obliged to be civil, nay, kind, to him.

Dick felt like uttering an oath. But then, he told himself, girls were always offish—they liked to be followed, and urged, and courted; and Kate Purcell, in that, at least, was like all the rest. They would say "No," when they meant, eventually, to say "Yes." But, willing or not, Dick was bound to have Kate for his wife.

"You know I want you to give me a promise, Kate. You know I have loved you these five years past—you must know that—and you can't wonder at it. Just give me your promise to be mine some day, and I'll wait as long as you tell me."

It had come now; there was no avoiding the answer; and Kate Purcell was not the girl to deceive and give hope where there was none.

Dick was standing by her, as she leaned one hand upon the table. She was pale, and her eyes were cast down. Never had she looked so delicate and lovely to Dick, never had he coveted her so much, and he was doubly resolved to win her.

There was silence for several minutes, and Dick saw how violently beat the girl's heart—that her breath came in quick, uneven pantings.

"I wish you had not spoken thus," she said, at last, in so low a tone that he could scarcely hear her.

"Why? You know that I must finally tell you that I have loved you so long. Surely, there is no one else—"

"Oh, no—no one!" quickly.

Dick brightened.

"Then you will say yes to me? I will promise to make you happy. I love you, so you must be happy. I have some money—we can start in life comfortably. Kate, I believe it will be the death of me if you refuse!"

"You must not talk like that," she exclaimed, raising her eyes to his face, and revealing that there was a mist of feeling in them. "It is impossible for me to grant what you ask. Do not speak of it again. I cannot love you!"

Dick stood as if benumbed. He had no real doubt but she would accept him. He had always been accustomed to having his own way; and he intended and expected to do so in this case.

He said nothing more. He turned and left the house, and Kate went on, mechanically, with her work, a vague fear of what might happen growing stronger and stronger in her heart.

When her father came down, he looked at her closely, saw that something had troubled her, and asked:

"Was not some one here a moment ago?"

"Yes; Dick has just gone," she replied.

"Dick!" A pause, and then Purcell asked: "What was he saying to you?"

Kate saw how anxious her father's face was, and her heart sank still lower; but she said:

"He asked me to be his wife."

Kate saw that his hand trembled as he put it on the back of a chair, as if to steady himself. What had she done? What was Richard Burt to her father?

"And you accepted him, of course?"

"No."

Purcell sat down and leaned his face on his hand, not saying anything.

Kate moved softly to his side and put one arm over his neck.

"What is the matter, father? Did you care that I cannot marry him? Why do you wish it? You surely would not have me marry a man I cannot love?"

Without raising his head, Purcell said:

"I could not ask that, but I have so prayed that you might like him."

Kate grew cold as she heard the words, but she maintained an outward composure.

"Can you tell me why you wished this? It is very strange to me. I have always wondered why you have chosen him for a companion. It is not from mere curiosity that I should like to know why you go away with him at such strange times. For several months back some cloud has hung over our house. Who is responsible for this? Is it not Richard Burt, and the strange influence he has over you?"

As the girl spoke Purcell raised his face and looked at her, with a sort of frightened inquiry in his eyes.

"You know nothing about it," he said, quickly. "It's all a fancy of yours, and you need think nothing of the matter. If Burt and I choose to enter a business as partners, it need make no difference with you."

He spoke almost harshly as he concluded.

Kate looked at him in sorrowful amazement.

"Something has changed you sadly," she said.

ONE WOMAN'S USE OF A PENNY.

She Pays Her Small Son the Same Piece of Copper Time and Again.

"That penny," said the mother of a small boy, picking up a small copper from the floor, "has done me a great deal of service, and will do me still more, it seems."

"Yes?" her caller politely interrogated.

"You see, it is this way," responded the hostess. "Harry doesn't care anything about money at all, and yet he likes to have me pay him when he does errands for me. I manage it in this way: I give him a penny, and he holds it in his chubby little fists for a while, and then he lays it down somewhere and forgets all about it. If I ask him what he has done with his money, he says he has put it away, but he is never interested enough to look for it. I pick up the penny, and the next time I want him to go somewhere I give it to him again, and he is just as happy as if he were accumulating wealth."—Exchange.

Never Heard of Her.

On a crowded trolley car the other morning two men were carrying on a conversation between glances at their respective newspapers. The older man was commenting upon some incident that had evidently occurred the evening previous, and his companion was listening as attentively as he could and study the market report in front of his eyes.

"That speech was worthy of Mrs. Malaprop," said the dignified old gentleman.

"Ah," replied his companion, looking up with sudden interest. "Is she a friend of yours? Do I know her?"

With a peculiar expression on his face the older glanced at the bland youth as he answered:

"No; she's a myth." Then he gave his undivided attention to the newspaper.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Big Monument Kills Birds.

Every spring and fall large numbers of birds are killed by the Washington monument. The city of Washington seems to be directly in the route taken by many of the migratory birds in their flight between the North and South, and twice a year thousands of feathered songsters meet their death by flying against the tall marble shaft in the night. Just now the fall slaughter is at its height, and every morning many dead birds are to be seen about the base of the monument. The dogs and cats of that part of the city have learned that the base of the monument is a good place to get an early meal in the morning without trouble, and many of them are regularly on hand. Most of the birds killed are yellow and black-throated warblers and small thrushes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"A Nail in Disguise."

Mark Twain spent much of last summer at one of his summer homes, Quarry Farm, at Elmira. One day he went into one of the local book shops and looked over the line of fountain pens offered. Selecting one, he took it home on trial. While most fountain pens are practicable, some few are not, and the proprietor of the shop concluded that Mr. Clemens had inadvertently taken one of the latter when he returned it, a few days later, with the brief comment: "A nail in disguise."—New York Times.

Landlady (in surprise)—Why, Mr. Muggs, you are putting butter in your coffee, and here's plenty of milk.

Mr. Muggs—Yes; but I am trying to strike an average.

Landlady—An average? Whatever do you mean, Mr. Muggs?

Mr. Muggs—Well, you see, the coffee is so weak and the butter is so strong.

How to Have Only Two Grandparents.

A strange case has presented itself hereabouts of a man who had only two grandparents instead of four. A widower and a widow were married, and their children by their first marriage were in time united. Their children's children thus had one common grandfather and one common grandmother.—Boston Evening Record.

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

Case No. 49,763.—Mrs. M. Isted, of 1207 Strand street, Galveston, Tex., who is proprietor of a boarding house at that address, numbering among her boarders a dozen medical students, says: "I caught cold during the flood of September, 1900, and it settled in my kidneys. Despite the fact that I tried all kinds of medicines and was under the care of physicians, the excruciating twinges and dull aching across the small of my back refused to leave, and trouble with the kidney secretions began to set in. From then, ordinary Anglo-Saxon fails to describe the annoyance and suffering I endured. The fearful pain through my body, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, consequent loss of energy, and, finally, indication of complete dissolution compelled me, from sheer agony and pain, to either lie on the floor and scream, or forced me into spasms. On such occasions my husband called in a physician, whose morphine treatment relieved me temporarily. I grew weaker and thinner, and so run down physically that nothing was left but skin and bone. All my friends, acquaintances and neighbors knew about my critical condition, and on one occasion I was reported dead and they came to see my corpse. At last the doctors attending me held a consultation and agreed that if I did not undergo an operation I could not live. Preparations were made, a room selected at the city hospital, and they even went so far as to have the carriage brought to the door to carry me there. I don't know why, but something told me not to go, and I absolutely refused. Now I want the reader to grasp every word of the following: A friend of ours, a Mr. McGaund, knowing that my kidneys were the real cause of the entire trouble, brought a box of Doan's Kidney Pills to the house, and requested me to give them a trial. I had taken so much medicine that I was more than discouraged, and had little, if any, faith in any preparation. However, I reasoned if they did not do me good they could not possibly make me worse, so I began the treatment. After the third dose, I felt something dart across me like a flash of lightning, and from that moment I began to improve. The pain in my back and kidneys positively disappeared, the kidney secretions became free and natural. At present I rest and sleep well, my appetite is good, my weight has increased from 115 to 155 pounds, and my flesh is firm and solid. My friends actually marvel at the change in my appearance. Words cannot express my own feelings. I am not putting it too strongly when I say I have been raised from the dead. I am satisfied that had it not been for Doan's Kidney Pills, taken when they were, I would have been either lying in the Lake View Cemetery, or an invalid for the balance of my life. I will be only too pleased to give minuter particulars of my case to any one calling on me, not, of course, out of idle curiosity, but if they really have kidney complaint and want to know what course to pursue to get relief."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

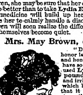
Tired Nervous Mothers

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing a child involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly. She cannot help it, as her condition is due to suffering and shattered nerves caused by some derangement of the uterine system with backache, headache, and all kinds of pain, and she is on the verge of nervous prostration.

When a mother finds that she cannot be calm and quiet with her children, she may be sure that her condition needs attention, and she cannot do better than to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This medicine will build up her system, strengthen her nerves, and enable her to calmly handle a disobedient child without a scene. The children will soon realize the difference, and seeing their mother quiet, will themselves become quiet.

Mrs. May Brown, of Chicago, Ill., says:



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—'Honor to whom honor is due,' and you deserve both the thanks and honor of the mothers of America whom you have so blessedly helped and benefited. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I would feel run-down, nervous and irritable, or have any of the aches and pains which but few women escape, and I have found that it relieved me at once and gave me new strength. Several ladies, members of our Literary Union, speak in the highest praise of your Vegetable Compound, as they have been cured from serious female troubles. One lady, who thought she must submit to an operation, was cured without using anything in the world but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. You have hosts of friends in Chicago, and if you came to visit our city we would delight to do you honor. Gratefully yours,—MRS. MAY BROWN, 57 Grant Place, Chicago, Ill.

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruation never came regular, and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and ovarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruation has become regular, and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, MRS. MILDRED McKINNY, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal." Uncle Sam's Capitalists.

Farmers, as far as actual wealth is concerned, are the capitalists of the United States. The census bureau report on the value of farming property of the country, estimates that the 5,376,657 farms of the United States are worth $16,674,690,247. Of this amount, $3,560,198,191, or 24.4 per cent, represents the value of buildings, and $13,114,492,056, or 87.6 per cent, the value of land and improvements. Farm implements and machinery are worth $761,261,550, and live stock is worth $3,078,050,041, making the total farming wealth over $20,514,000,000.—Success.

A Modern Box and Cox.

It appears that "Box and Cox" has been outdone in the case of two Bostonians who lately moved here from the modern Athens and took up their quarters together. One in a little while became a copy holder on a morning paper; the other, a short time afterward, took a position as private secretary. The hours of the former were from 2 p. m. to 5 a. m., while the latter found his time well occupied from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Naturally, their hours of sleeping grew widely different. One turned in at 10 or 11 at night, while the other never took off his boots until 3 or 4 in the morning. The result was that while the two beds were scarcely a yard apart, the men never by any chance exchanged a word except on Sunday. For weeks their sole method of communication was by means of polite notes, containing comments, objections and miscellaneous items of interest, laid in the table in the sitting room.—New York Post.

GERMANS IN THE REVOLUTION.

Rendered Valuable Aid in American War for Independence.

It is well known what important service was rendered by Germans in bringing the war of Independence to a successful issue. The German colonists in New York and Pennsylvania were largely represented in the patriot army, and the names of Baron Steuben and Gen. Herkimer are remembered as of officers deserving highest honor.

How many of the same nation served against the colonies, sold by German Princes to Great Britain, has only lately been computed. It is now known that these mercenaries, comprehensively called "Hessians," because the larger number were from Hesse, formed the larger portion of the English army. The total of these German soldiers sent to America from 1776 to 1782 was 30,067; of these 12,562 did not return. As the loss by death was 7,754 there were 4,808 who remained in America, and helped to swell the already large German element of the country's population. These not only, but those who returned home, helped, it seems certain, to pave the way for that rapid increase of immigration from Germany which for years after the war was a marked feature in the growth and development of the new nation.—Christian Intelligencer.

SERIOUS MIXING OF LETTERS.

Carelessness That Must Have Caused Unpleasant Quarter of an Hour.

A well-known citizen of Clay Center had been invited to an evening party. He wanted to go, but his wife declared that she had no gown suitable for the occasion, and asked him to send "regrets" to their hostess. The man went down to his office and penned this facetious note of declination:

"We regret that your kind invitation must be declined for all the conventional reasons, but the real reason is that half the family has nothing to wear. My wife's latest dress is over three weeks old, and her hat is twelve hours out of date. You will appreciate the hopelessness of the occasion and excuse it."

He thought this pretty good, and he determined to write a note to his wife also explaining that he would not be at home for an early dinner, as she had asked him. He said in this note:

"I have turned down your invitation because I am going out to another evening party where the guests are not expected to wear anything of importance. Sorry I won't be there to kiss you good night.

And then the fool man carelessly sent his wife's note to the hostess and the hostess's note to his wife.—Clay Center Times.

Witty Speech Cleared Atmosphere.

At a Baptist convention recently held in the South the minutes of the first day were recorded by a man of calm and deliberate speech, while one of the speakers of the occasion was a quick-tempered gentleman named French. By some oversight no record was made in the minutes of Mr. French's words, and when the minutes were read next day Mr. French was quickly on his feet with the remark that he objected to the minutes being accepted.

"On what grounds do you object?" questioned the presiding officer.

"I object to the English; the report is not in good English," said the gentleman.

A pause ensued, while everybody looked at the recording secretary, who slowly rose to his feet.

"Well, gentlemen," he remarked, in calm, deliberate fashion, "I won't defend the English of the report, but I admit there was no French in it."

A burst of merriment greeted his words and the minutes were accepted.

Her soul is in midstream;
She listens—till she hears
The waves brim o'er her dream,
As jealous ocean nears.

She leads him through the maze
Of all her waiting charms,
Nor yields her wonder ways
At once unto his arms;

A bride upon the shore—
Salt winds for certainty,
And ebb-tide as before.

Not long ago a passenger on a Cunarder insisted on standing in the doorway of the smoking cabin, to windward, puffing his pipe. He would neither stay inside nor out, and the fresh Atlantic breeze made things very uncomfortable for the other passengers. Mr. Haggin protested in very vigorous language.

"You seem to have overlooked the fact," said the passenger, insolently, "that this is a ship's smoking cabin. This is not your own house."

"No," retorted the Pacific Coast millionaire, "if it was you would not be inside of it."

"I am glad to recommend Peruna as it has done so much for me. I had been a great sufferer from catarrhal colds until I was urged to try Peruna, and I am happy to say that it has entirely cured me. I shall never be without it and most cheerfully recommend it to others who are afflicted as I have been."—Katherine Dauter, 239 13th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Most people think the success of Peruna depends upon the use of advertisements. Undoubtedly the advertisements help some. But by far the greatest number of people who hear of Peruna, have their attention called to it by a friend.

Some one gets cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna. After he is certain of his cure, he is sure to recommend it to his friends. Friend recommends it to friend and the news spreads from tongue to tongue.

All the advertisements in the world could not make Peruna as popular as it is. Peruna cures. That is the reason people like it. Peruna cures a very stubborn disease. That is why everyone recommends it. Peruna cures chronic catarrh after all other remedies fail which explains why neighbor recommends it to neighbor. Peruna cures catarrh permanently, and this way has gained a life-long friend.

People who have been cured by Peruna many years ago have been eager to recommend Peruna to their friends ever since. This is the way Peruna is advertised. It advertises itself. Its merits are its chief advertisement. Once cured of so distressing and exasperating a malady as catarrh, it becomes the duty of every one to pass it along; to call the attention of those who are still victims, to a remedy that rarely fails to cure.

Beware of Cheap Imitations of Pe-ru-na . . . Be Sure That You Get Pe-ru-na.

There are no substitutes for Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you that there is something just as good. The success of Peruna has tempted many people to devise cheap imitations. Beware of them. Be sure that you get Peruna.

Miss Jennie Driscoll, 870 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., Writes:

"I heard so much in praise of Peruna as a specific for catarrhal affections that when I found myself with a bad case of catarrh of the head and throat Peruna was the first thing that I thought of. And my convictions were not wrong, for in a few weeks after using Peruna systematically I was entirely rid of this aggravating and distressing disease, catarrh.

"If people knew how efficient Peruna was for this trouble they would not hesitate to try it. I have all the faith in the world in it, and have never known of a case where the person was not cured in a short time."—Jennie Driscoll.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS.

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Every candidate on the Republican state ticket received a majority in Red Lake county.

We are glad the boys up here get congratulated. It is the first time they ever received a pleasant word from the Red Lake Falls Democrats, except just before election.

The Republicans on the county ticket were slaughtered in the "house of their friends," and this fact is greatly to be regreted. Men who have and expect to receive favors from the Republican party openly opposed candidates on the county ticket for mere personal reasons.

It is said that President Roosevelt will make a vigorous warfare against over-speculation, overcaptalization, reckless promotion, evil industrial combinations and, in fact, all financial inflation. His intentions and purposes along this line are gradually crystallizing into a fixed administrative policy.

THE AMENDMENTS

Not One of Them Received a Majority Vote.

"That was a great indorsement for the referendum," said State Auditor Dunn today, referring to the failure of the constitutional amendments.

"We fought for two sessions of the legislature for the gross earnings bill," Mr. Dunn continued. "The people fairly rose up and demanded it, and finally it was passed. There was such indignation against members who voted against the bill that many of them were turned down. Then when the measure came before the people less than half of them voted at all, and thousands of them voted against it.

"After all our uproar about tax reform and the extra session, we are right where we started; because the people failed to vote on the income tax amendments. The same old problem is before the new legislature. I am working on my biennial report, but I don't see what is the use of making recommendations to the legislature if the people refuse to carry them out.

"I am not so sure that it would be a good thing, either, to go back to the old plan, and require only a majority of the votes cast on a proposition to carry it. Any kind of an amendment could pass then, if it got a few hundred votes. It seems to me that if the people are not enough interested in a measure for half of them to vote for it then they ought not to have it.

SHUT DOWN.

Mill Closed Down for Season on Saturday.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's large saw mill closed down last Saturday after a successful season's run, having manufactured about 40,000,000 feet of lumber. The mill has run steady night and day since starting up last spring, and has given employment to hundreds of men at good wages.

The mill will start sawing next spring as soon as the ice goes out and a number of repairs will be made in the mill this winter.

The Markets.

Wheat	60c
Oats	25c
Flax	$1.06
Barley	30c
Butter	20c
Eggs	20c
Potatoes	30c

The following market letter is furnished by Edwards Wood & Co., Grain Commission Merchants; November 11th, 1902.—Wheat—Last week's wheat market was a rather quiet one with no decided trend of prices and the net price changes were small. Northwest and primary western receipts were very large, the latter about 3,000,000 bushels more than they were for the corresponding week a year ago. The visible supply increased 3,898,000 bushels against an increase of 767,000 bushels a year ago and the worlds available supply increased 4,510,000 bu. Bradstreet made the week's exports of wheat and flour to Friday, equal to 5,715,000 bu. and on Saturday and today they aggregated 950,000 from Atlantic and Gulf ports. The export business from both coasts to Australia was a feature last week as was also the shipment of North Dakota wheat to Seattle, to be there ground into flour and exported in that form to Australia. Millers bought very large quantities of wheat to arrive, and were good buyers of the best grades in the daily receipts. Since Saturday the seaboard has reported a better continental demand for wheat and the flour trade at Minneapolis has been better. The mills will run at full capacity until the close of navigation, in order to get as much flour as possible to the seaboard before that time. Prices advanced from ⅝ to 1 cent per bu. today and Mr. Patten, who was supposed to be very bearish is quoted as announcing that he had bought 450,000 bu. today, which closed his deals. The Northwest is prophesying and decrease of 4,000,000 bu. in Northwestern interior Elevator stocks, during the month of November. The advance in prices in the face of the enormous increase in the visible supply and the world's available supply, shows a very strong market. We favor purchases on all declines.

May Dig Ditches.

The supreme court this morning handed down a decision sustaining the state drainage law.

The decision has been anxiously awaited for several months. Mile after mile of ditches have already been begun under the law and work on many of these has been suspended waiting the verdict of the court. Many additional miles of ditches which have been planed will now be undertaken and the coming season will see a great impetus to drainage in the Valley.

Killed a Deer.

Bemidji, Minn., Nov. 10.—The northbound passenger train on the Minnesota and International last night run over and killed a deer between here and Black Duck. The buck was standing on the track apparently dazed by the glow of the headlight and made no effect to get away. The train was brought to a stop and the head and antlers saved, which were brought down here this morning by the section foreman to be mounted by a local taxidermist.

THE SURVEY.

Of the Great Northern to Be Commenced Soon.

The following taken from the Crookston Journal of Tuesday Nov. 11th, is of local interest:

A party of Great Northern surveyors came in from the west last night and are at the Crookston awaiting orders. The members are under the supervision of A. G. Lombard, one of those prominent in the Great Northern engineering department, who proceeded to St. Paul last night to get definite orders as to the work the party is destined to do next.

During the summer season this surveying party has laid out the lines that have been constructed in North Dakota, and has seen a full summer's work. There branches and extensions have been completed, one from Granville to the international boundary, a distance of 65 miles, another north from Lakota 35 miles, and an extension of the Souris branch, a distance of 20 miles.

The men are temporarily in charge of E. A. Weldon, and it is believed that the work laid out for the party is that of surveying the proposed extension north from Thief River Falls, and that the men will on the return of Mr. Lombard proceed to that point and commence to survey. The members of the party profess not to know whether or not this is contemplated but admit that they have heard it rumored that Thief River is their objective point.

Mr. Lombard is expected to return to Crookston in the morning and there is small doubt that the party will at once proceed to Thief River Falls and make camp.

The work can be prosecuted at this time of the year without serious difficulty, and while it will be a preliminary line it will enable the company to decide upon a permanent location of the line in time to commence construction early in the spring.

A big reduction in large photographs if taken between now and Christmas, at Berry's Gallery. Come now and do not put it off until it is too late.

DONS HUNTING TOGS.

President Starts for the Camp in the Bear Country.

Smedes, Miss., Nov. 15.—President Roosevelt and his party arrived here shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and, in their hunting togs, started soon afterward for the camp on the Little Sunflower river. As the distance is about fifteen miles and the trail is rough and bad, it was probably after dark before they arrived at camp. Smedes is simply a siding on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railway where cotton is loaded from the big Smedes plantations. A plantation store and the residence of one of the managers are the only structures except negro cabins within sight. Work on the neighboring plantations was suspended yesterday afternoon and several hundred negroes were at the siding when the train stopped. Most of the men sat on the cotton bales, but the black mammies and the pickaninnies stood along the track. They showed their white teeth in hard grins, but made no other demonstration as the president stepped from the train. He was clad in hunting costume, riding trousers, leather leggings, blue flaner shirt, corduroy coat and wore on his head a brown slouch hat. Around his waist was buckled his cartridge belt and at the side hung his ivory-handled hunting knife. Other members of the party also wore hunting suits.

FROM THE JAWS OF DEATH.

Remarkable Rescue of a Would-Be Suicide at Niagara Falls.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Helen Costello of Buffalo was rescued from the brink of the American falls yesterday by employes of the state reservation. Yesterday afternoon word was received at the reservation office that a woman had attempted to commit suicide by floating down stream toward the falls. Supt. Perry secured a quantity of rope and hurried to the bridge which connects Green island with Goat island. The woman was seen clinging to a submerged log at a point a few feet below the bridge. A noose was fitted about the body of John Marshall, a reservation employe, and he was lowered into the rushing waters. He succeeded in reaching the woman's side and placed a rope about her waist. The two were then slowly hauled to the stone abutment of the bridge. A ladder was lowered and the woman was landed safely. Mrs. Costello is very weak from exposure, but the hospital physicians say she will recover. Domestic troubles caused the woman to seek death.

MINNESOTA FRUIT TREES.

Movement Begun in Manitoba to Remove Restrictions.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 15. — At a meeting of the Western Horticultural society held here, disadvantages of the San Jose scale bill was the subject of discussion. The matter was brought up by the offer of the Jewell Nursery Company of Lake City, Minn., to pay the salary of an officer appointed by the dominion government to inspect the stock and fumigate trees and plants before they left that state for Canada, and in this way obviate the necessity of having the fumigation done here. In many cases the buds of trees and plants have developed to such an extent between the time of leaving Minnesota and reaching this province that the fumigation here means sudden death to them.

The State Day by Day.

EGAN'S FRIENDS HOPE.

It Is Thought That He May Be in a Hunter's Cabin.

St. Paul, Nov. 13.—The only ray of hope that the relatives and friends of Supt. Benjamin F. Egan of the Kalispell division of the Great Northern railway have received, in the eight days since he disappeared in the mountains was that contained in a telegram from his wife at Spokane to his brother in Chicago. The telegram simply states that smoke had been seen issuing from a cabin and that a party was making its way to the scene. It is possible that Supt. Egan became lost and made his way to a lone mountain cabin for shelter. The deep snow which fell the following day penned him in, or else he was injured and unable to leave the place. If the supposition is correct it may be only a few hours until the lost man is restored to his friends or his fate known.

HAMILTON MUST STAY IN PRISON

Board of Pardons Refuses to Release Minneapolis Man.

St. Paul, Nov. 13.—The state board of pardons yesterday denied the application of Frank H. Hamilton of Minneapolis for a pardon. Hamilton was convicted of causing the death of Leonard Day, who was stabbed during a row in the West hotel two years ago, and is serving a seven-year term at the penitentiary. The vote of the members of the board on the application was not made public, but unanimous consent is required to grant a pardon or commutation of sentence, and after the session it was simply announced that the application had been denied. Chief Justice Start said that he did not speak for the board, but that the evidence bore out the verdict.

STATE SCHOOL BOARD.

President Ankeny Favors It for All Educational Institutions.

President A. T. Ankeny, of the state normal board, has made his annual report to the governor.

It's most important feature is his discussion of the long-standing difficulties between the normal board and the board of control.

In this discussion President Ankeny takes advanced ground and declares that the logical outcome of present tendencies is a state board of education, to have the same general control of the purely educational institutions of the state as the board of control now has of the charitable and penal institutions.

President Ankeny says that whatever failure there was in the efforts to secure harmony between the normal board and board of control was due to the law itself. He says:

"The decision did not determine the utter impossibility of two independent boards controlling at the same time the normal schools. The language of the act clearly makes such dual management impossible. The experience since that time satisfies us that the normal schools should now, by proper legislation, be wholly relieved from the board of control. It is believed, however, that the principle of placing the charitable institutions under control of such board has been amply justified, and that a board similarly constituted should now be provided for all the purely educational institutions. Separately their interests conflict—together they will better serve the purposes of their creation. It is not to be expected that such important institutions will receive the care they demand from merely honorary officers meeting infrequently and serving without compensation.

"A state board of education, therefore, having the control and management of all the purely educational institutions would insure not only a more systematic relation of all the institutions, but a wiser and more economical administration."

President Ankeny furnishes an estimate of the appropriations needed for normal schools this winter as follows:

Winona	$130,000
Mankato	80,025
St. Cloud	75,500
Moorhead	94,500
Duluth	57,000
Total	$437,025

The principal items carried by this appropriation, aside from the current expenses, are site for ladies' dormitory at Winona, $30,000; addition to ladies' dormitory at Moorhead, $20,000; library rooms at Mankato, $12,000.

President Ankeny says that of the 11,803 teachers employed in Minnesota schools, 3,076, or more than one-fourth, were graduates or undergraduates of normal schools. He answers the charge that normal schools minister only to local needs by showing that out of an enrollment of 367 in the Winona school's normal department, 200 were from thirty-nine counties outside of the home county.

Of 25 Winona graduates in the past two years, all but seven are now teaching. He concludes:

"The high schools and university give broader culture and more general knowledge, but they cannot be said to reach the masses. Unless our common schools are well cared for and constantly supplied with well equipped teachers, we fail in the most important duty to the children of the state. Eliminate the normal schools and we are thrown back on the necessity of employing unskilled teachers, and so the good work fails.

"Thus are the normal schools the keystone to the arch, and once removed, the whole fabric falls.

"The highest aim and duty of the state is to bring into the best development our citizenship; it is only so that she can maintain her position in the on-moving advancement of the world. The sums annually expended in normal school training would seem to be but a trifle compared with the grand results. The graduates of the schools are not for a day, but practically for their lives, and so the work multiplies. Let there be general and liberal supplies and care and economy in expenditure. Without the normal schools we would simply retrograde; with them we will be better enabled to accomplish the desired ends."

He gives the following statistics of attendance:

Enrollment.	1901.	1902
Winona	645	625
Mankato	657	649
St. Cloud	477	464
Moorhead	416	404

ASKS STATE TO PAY FOR DUCKS.

Sportsman Sues the Game and Fish Commission.

Charles Thompson of St. Paul has brought suit against the state game and fish commission for $950 alleged damages for the seizure and confiscation of 175 ducks last week. The birds, it is alleged, were shot in North Dakota, and were shipped to St. Paul without being marked as required by the Lacey law, which governs the interstate shipment of game. The birds were confiscated by the Minnesota game and fish commission. North Dakota prohibits the shipment of game out of the state. The Minnesota law also prohibits the shipment of game unless the owner accompanies it, and the game wardens claim that the laws of both states were violated. Executive Agent Fullerton was yesterday served with papers in a suit instituted by Mr. Thompson to recover $350, the alleged value of the birds, and $600 alleged damages for wounded feelings and humiliation.

ROAD NEAR GRANSTOWN, BAHAMAS

NEW YORK'S GREAT CATHEDRAL.

Bishop Potter of the Episcopal diocese of New York, recently went up to Morningside Heights to inspect the work being done on the largest cathedral that has been undertaken in centuries. He was accompanied by an ecclesiastical friend from the west, who, in the course of the inspection, said to him:

"I can't begin to grasp the bigness of this cathedral of yours. For the last ten years I've been hearing about the record-breaking dimensions of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and I've marvelled thereat.

"But now that I am here on the ground my mind is bewildered, even more by what my eyes have seen and my ears heard. I scarcely can comprehend the immensity of the task."

"My dear brother," was the bishop's dry response, "we're in the same boat."

No such building has been projected since the Middle Ages. Then it was that cathedrals were begun which were not completed for hundreds of years.

The average lay mind can scarcely grasp an idea of the magnificent proportions of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the intricate and delicate architectural problems that its construction has brought forward.

Just one big little thing will give a fair impression of the vast task the cathedral's builders have assumed.

It is the intention to begin work on the choir of the cathedral this fall. The choir will be 120 feet long, fifty-four feet wide, and its ceiling 108 feet above the floor. It will have an area of 6,480 square feet.

On the cathedral grounds is a $25,000 stone mill, erected for the exclusive use of the cathedral. Last year forty stone cutters, with the aid of the latest improved machinery, dressed and finished 10,000 cubic yards of stone.

Working at this rate, which means working every day in the year except Sundays and holidays, it will take these forty men ten years to dress and finish the necessary amount of stone for the choir's interior. The stone workers began this long task a few days ago.

HAS DAVY CROCKETT'S RIFLE.

Valuable Relic Owned by Tennessee Secretary of State.

One of the most interesting relics on exhibition in the office of Secretary of State Crockett is the rifle which was presented by admiring friends to his great grandfather, the immortal Davy Crockett, hero of the Alamo and author of the equally immortal phrase: "Be sure you are right and then go ahead." This gun was carried by the grandson of the first owner, the late Gen. "Bob" Crockett, who fought down much game with it, but now it has been retired with honor and full pay to pass the remainder of its days, or centuries, as a relic of one of the greatest characters this country has ever produced. It is a formidable-looking weapon, originally of the flint-lock type, with a 40-caliber bore. The barrel was originally forty-six inches long, but some of it has been cut off and it is now only forty and a half inches. It was presented to David Crockett soon after his second election to congress in 1829, by some of his admiring young whig friends of Philadelphia. It cost $250 and was made especially for him. The donors raised the money by contributing half a dollar each to the fund. The stock is trimmed in sterling silver, appropriately designed with figures of the Goddess of Liberty, a raccoon, a deer's head and other figures. Along the upper part of the barrel are the letters, set into the metal in gold, some of which has worn out: "Presented by the Young Men of Philadelphia to the Hon. David Crockett of Tennessee." In similar letters near the muzzle are the words: "Go ahead."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

"Tim" Sullivan Is Temperate.

"Tim" Sullivan, who has come to the front so strongly in New York city politics of late, has been a saloonkeeper for many years, but it is not of record that anyone ever saw him take a drink. In Albany at one time he was taken seriously ill and a physician ordered him to take a stimulant. "Don't you think I can pull through without whisky?' asked Tim. "You might," was the reply, "but you are so frightfully run down that I don't think you ought to risk it." Tim reflected for a minute and said: "I'll take the chance. D—n if I'll take a drink." And he didn't.

HOW DIAMONDS MAY EXPLODE.

Cases in Which Only Ordinary Degree of Heat Is Necessary.

It has long been known that diamonds, especially the class known as "rose diamonds," are likely to explode if subjected only to what would seem a very ordinary degree of heat, such as strong rays from the sun, etc. It is now believed that the explosions are the result of the rapid expansion of certain volatile liquids inclosed in cavities near the center of these precious stones. A great many diamonds, even though cut, mounted and worn as gems of perfection, are still in an unfinished condition—that is, the liquid drop from which the stone is being formed has not as yet deposited all of its "pure crystals of carbon." These movable drops may occasionally be seen with the naked eye.

When this is the case, a strong microscope will give the drop the appearance of a bubble in the fluid of a carpenter's level. It is also highly probable that besides the liquid mentioned these cavities may contain gases under great tension. This being the case, one may readily comprehend how a very small amount of heat would cause the liquid and gas to expand to such a degree that the diamond would give way with all the characteristics of a miniature explosion.

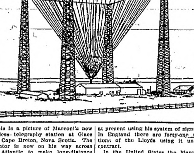
MARCONI'S GLACE BAY STATION



This is a picture of Marconi's new wireless telegraphy station at Glace bay, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia. The inventor is now on his way across the Atlantic to make long-distance tests with his improved apparatus and put the station in practical operation. Since he last visited this country Marconi has been occupied in improving his machinery for wireless telegraphy. Sixty English warships and twenty-seven commercial vessels are at present using his system of signals. In England there are forty-one stations of the Lloyds using it under contract.

In the United States the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America has been organized, with a capital of $6,500,000 to control all the business, including Cuba, Porto Rico Hawaii, and the Philippines. There is, in addition to this company, a company in England and one in Belgium

MR. MORGAN'S HUGE FEES.

How They Compare With Those of Some Forty Years Ago.

Jay Cooke, one of the greatest of American financiers, negotiated nearly all of the immense loans issued by the United States government during the civil war. The banking firm of which he was the head handled over $2,000,000,000 for the government, and its profits, it is said, did not exceed $200,000. What would have been J. P. Morgan's profits if that astute financier had been engaged by the government to float a series of loans amounting to $2,000,000,000? It has been stated that Mr. Morgan received about $100,000,000 for financing the United States Steel Corporation with a capital of about $1,400,000,000. In another transaction his profit on a $200,000,000 transaction was estimated at $10,000,000. Either Mr. Morgan has cause to be astounded at Mr. Cooke's moderation or Mr. Cooke would be justified in expressing astonishment at the very high value which Mr. Morgan places upon his services. If Mr. Morgan had financed the steel company at the same rates at which Mr. Cooke handled the government's loans during the civil war he would have received only $140,000 for his share in the transaction. On the other hand, if the government had paid Mr. Cooke as handsomely for his services as Mr. Morgan is reported to have been paid by the steel company, Mr. Cooke would have netted nearly $150,000,000.

THE CATACOMBS OF ROME.

Important Historical Discoveries Being Made There.

Discoveries of the first importance to the students of the evidences of Christianity and to archiaeologists are confidently looked for from the continued exploration of the Catacombs of Rome. Of the forty-five cemeteries known to have existed, only five have been made accessible to visitors. The principal catacombs, those on the Appia, Nomentana, Salaria and Ardeatina, although open, are not yet thoroughly explored. The soil being of volcanic origin, is too soft to be utilized for building purposes, but it is of sufficient consistency to enable excavations to be prosecuted without the aid of supports. Until the ninth century the catacombs were places of pilgrimage, but from then until the nineteenth they were neglected. The entrances became blocked and almost all the sites were lost sight of. It is computed that fully 6,000,000 of bodies lie buried in the Roman catacombs, or more than double the number that are interred in the catacombs of Paris. The most ancient of all known catacombs are those of the Theban kings which are over 4,000 years old.

150,000 Screws to the Pound.

The minuteness of some of the screws made in a watch factory may be measured by the statement that it takes nearly 150,000 of a certain kind to weigh a pound. Under the microscope they appear in their true character—perfectly finished bolts. The pivot of the balance wheel is only one two-hundredths of an inch in diameter, and the gauge with which pivots are classified measures to the ten-thousandth part of an inch. Each jewel hole into which a pivot fits is about one five-thousandth of an inch larger than the pivot to permit sufficient play. The finest screw for a small-sized watch has a thread of 260 to the inch and weighs one one-hundred and thirty thousandths of a pound. Jewel slabs of sapphire, ruby or garnet are first sawed into slabs one-fiftieth of an inch thick, and are shellacked to plates so that they may be surfaced. Then the individual jewels are sawn or broken off, drilled through the center, and a depression made in the convex side for an oil cup. A pallet jewel weighs one one-hundredth and fifty-thousandths of a pound; a roller jewel a little more than one two-hundred and fifty-six thousandths. The largest round hair-spring stud is four-hundredths of an inch in diameter and about nine-hundredths of an inch in length.

Love's Debt.

God help us! for the flesh is weak;
Time's shadow's dim the sight,
And we forget
That tasks are set
We needs must do aright.
God help us! for we laugh and weep
And drift on easy tide;
And scarcely know
The hours that go
Are meant for aught beside.

God help us! for the wealth of days,
The golden string of hours,
In treasure loaned,
Christ's blood atoned
For sins we know as ours.
But, shall we ransomed stand, unstained,
If heedless of our trust,
The days go by
As breaths that die,
Life's gold be turned to dust?

God help us! life is given for work—
Naught else the needs suffice;
For noble zeal
To bind and heal;
For service, sacrifice;
For weaving while the day is ours,
For smoothing life's rough way!
If we forget
To pay love's debt
Who will our ransom pay?

"I knew a fellow down in Texas," said Col. Thomas Ochiltree, "who held a coin between his fingers for a drunken cowboy to shoot at. He never tried it but once."

"No," answered Ochiltree, "he was struck in the calf of the leg."—New York Times.

Woolen Grapes.

An original idea on a hat of dull green zibeline felt is a trimming of woolen grapes in about the same color, with dull-green leaves. These are used with a scarf of pale-blue mousseline de sole.

A good many hats are trimmed with plumes of mixed colors, and the shaded feathers, too, are fashionable. A capeline of a heavy white lace has the edge of the broad brim finished with petit gris and a band of the same fur on the shallow crown. On one side is a chou of black velvet holding a cluster of gray feathers shading to black on the tips and edges. The feathers—and there is a lot of them—fall off the hat brim, making a becoming background to the face.—New York Tribune.

Working People Interested.

Wuertsburg, Wis., Nov. 17th.—The working men and women of this district are greatly interested in the case of Mary Kowsky, who, in an interview, says:

"I have almost all my life been a sufferer from Backache, and two years ago I caught cold on my Kidneys, and the agonies that followed were almost unbearable.

"I consulted different doctors, but the relief they gave me was only temporary. The terrible pains always returned, and my suffering tempted me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They did me good almost from the start, till now, after taking three boxes, I am almost completely cured.

"I want all hardworking people to know this, for, with the help of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I don't mean to suffer any more Backache."

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

The Remarkable Experience of a Prominent Statesman—Congressman Meekison Gives Pe-ru-na a High Endorsement.

Congressman Meekison of Ohio.

Hon. David Meekison is well known not only in his own State, but throughout America. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue. He writes:

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefitted thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, Member of Congress.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FLAGMAN'S ERROR

CAUSES A SERIOUS COLLISION AT A CHICAGO STREET CROSSING.

ONE KILLED AND MANY INJURED

FREIGHT TRAIN CRASHES INTO CROWDED ELECTRIC TRAIN.

MIRACLE THAT SO MANY ESCAPED

FLAGMAN AND STREET CAR MEN ARE PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Chicago, Nov. 18. — One man was killed, and a dozen men, women and children more or less seriously injured in a collision last night between a Western avenue electric train and a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy freight train at the Eighteenth street crossing. The motor and trailer, which made up the electric train, was crowded with passengers and it seems a miracle that so many escaped instant death.

A mistake of the flagman at the crossing was responsible for the accident. The freight train, consisting of forty-two cars and an engine at each end, broke in two as it approached Western avenue. The first portion passed the crossing, and the flagman, not seeing the remaining portion coming at full speed half a block away, pulled up the gates and gave the signal that the crossing was clear. The electric train, which had been waiting for the freight train, started to cross and was hit squarely by the last half of the train. Both cars were overturned in the ditch by the collision. Several passengers noticed the danger in time to jump before the accident happened, but the rest of the passengers were jammed in at the doors, unable to get out. When the two trains came together the passengers were thrown in every direction. The flagman and men in charge of the street cars have been placed under arrest.

ROOSEVELT ENJOYS IT.

President Hasn't Had Such Freedom Since He Entered White House.

Smedes, Miss., Nov. 18—Sunday was a quiet day at the president's camp on the Little Sunflower. There was no hunting, but the president and a few members of the party spent a couple of hours in the morning rambling about the trails on their horses. Dinner was the chief event of the day. The menu included roast bear paws and possom and sweet potatoes. Dinner was served in camp style on a rough pine board table set up in the open air. Tin plates and tin cups were used. There were not enough knives and forks to go around and the colored cook announced to the amusement of everybody as the party sat down that on account of the scarcity of the articles he had distributed them only to the "colonel," as the president is invariably called in camp, and the "foreign gentlemen." The president is enjoying his outing very much. He has not had three days of such complete freedom and rest since he entered the White House. Holt Collier's dander is up and he vows that the colonel will not go home empty handed. His dogs had a good rest yesterday and will be in fine condition to resume the chase.

SPEAKERSHIP OPEN TO ALL.

Membership of the House Is Not Necessary.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Anybody can get into the contest for the speakership of the house of representatives so far as the restrictions of the Constitution are concerned, says the Washington star. In fact there is nothing except custom, which has prevailed from the beginning of the government, to suggest that a member of the house should be its speaker. This interesting, even if rather academic discussion has arisen in connection with the pending contest. The Constitution of the United States provides that "the house of representatives shall chose their speaker and other officers." That leaves the field open to the world so far as the law is concerned. Just how it happened that the first speaker of the house was chosen from among its members, while all other officers were taken from without that body, is a question that relates to the first doings of congress. The Constitution made provision for the senate so that its presiding officer should be an outsider, with absolutely no authority as a member of that body beyond his duties as such except in case of a tie vote, when he has the deciding vote. But the speaker of the house of representatives has, from the formation of that body, been chosen from among its members, and from time to time the authority of the speaker has been enlarged until he has grown to be an autocrat.

We have pledges enough in states where delegations have not met—Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Colorado — to assure his selection. Representatives from some of these states will meet early this week, and in some of them we expect a solid vote. It will take 104 or 105 to nominate, figuring on 206 Republicans."

SEEKS KING'S LIFE

ANARCHIST FIRES THREE SHOTS AT THE RULER OF BELGIUM.

ALMOST PROVED SUCCESSFUL

ONE BULLET CRASHES THROUGH WINDOW OF THE KING'S CARRIAGE.

THE POPULACE WILD WITH ANGER

ASSASSIN IS RESCUED WITH DIFFICULTY FROM HANDS OF MOB.

Brussels, Nov. 18—Three shots were fired at the king of the Belgians, and the attempt at assassination almost proved successful. One bullet smashed the window of the carriage in which Leopold was riding and grazed the face of the grand marshal, Compte d'Oultremont.

The assassin, Rubino, narrowly escaped death at the hands of the populace. He admitted he was an anarchist, and said he had come to the Belgian capital to slay the king. He was rescued with difficulty by the police and military from the mob that was demanding his life and would have dealt summary justice for the attack on the nation's ruler.

King on Way to Memorial.

The attack on the king took place as his majesty was proceeding to the cathedral to attend a "Te Deum" in memory of the late Queen Marie Henriette. The man who fired the shot is an Italian. He stood in front of the Bank of Brussels on the Rue Royale. Rubino is a bookkeeper. He was born at Binardo, near Naples, in 1859, and has lately lived in Brussels. When examined by the police Rubino confessed that he intended to kill King Leopold and said he held anarchistic beliefs. When rescued from the mob Rubino was placed in a cab and infuriated crowds of people immediately surrounded it and with knives and sticks. The police had great difficulty in forcing a way to the police station through the crowd, which shouted alternately, "Kill him!" and "Long live the king!" The cab was badly hacked with knives. A search of the prisoner revealed a package of ball cartridges.

It is reported that Rubino had been heard to express anarchistic opinions, and it was also said that he came to Brussels from London expressly to kill King Leopold and went to the cathedral for this purpose, but refrained from shooting at the king for fear of killing soldiers who stood between him and his majesty.

Would Have Killed King Edward.

According to some reports, Rubino, in the course of his examination before the magistrate, declared that he selected King Leopold for his attack on account of his majesty's inhuman conduct toward his daughter, Princess Stephanie, at the time of her mother's death, and he also wished to show to the anarchists in London who doubted his loyalty that, while they only talked, he acted. He would have killed King Edward, he added, but for the strong feeling of the English people in favor of the monarchy.

MRS. BESANT GOES TO INDIA.

Head of Theosophy Cult More Popular Ever.

London, Nov. 18.—The end of Annie Besant is not yet. This seems to be the feeling which has been created in this country, where the most famous of living theosophists has been making a three months' visit. Mrs. Besant left England a few days ago on her way to India, where matters connected with the school which she founded a Benares several years ago claim her attention. A few years ago it was prophesied fully that Annie Besant was about to be ignored by the world at large, and England in particular. But this prophesy has not been fulfilled. In fact, the little part of the universe represented by this island at least thinks more kindly of Mrs. Besant than it ever did before.

CHOLERA IS INCREASING.

Spread of Disease at Manila Is Alarming.

Manila, Nov. 18. — The number of cholera cases is increasing in this city and the spread of the disease is causing some alarm. There are on an average thirty cases daily. The Funston Reserve hospital, the Casual camp at Santa Mesa and Bilibid prison are now included among the places infected. The disease is spreading in the Marquina valley, where the danger of an infection of the water supply is regarded as grave. Should the water supply become infected a general epidemic is considered inevitable. The cholera reports from the provinces show a decrease in the number of cases.

FILLING UP THE HOLE.

South Dakota Making Good Defalcation of Official.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 15.—State Treasurer Schamber has completed arrangements by which he will at once take up $42,000 of 1905 bonds bearing 4 1-2 per cent interest with probabilities of securing $8,000 more of the same issue. These are bonds issued to make good the shortage to the state school fund through the defalcation of W. W. Taylor, and by taking them up before they are due the state is saving an interest charge of several thousand dollars. While the general fund of the state is empty the bond sinking fund is in such shape that the debt of the state is being constantly decreased by payments before the same become due.

BOILER LETS GO

VIOLENT EXPLOSION WRECKS NINE IMMENSE PUDDLE FURNACES.

FOUR MEN KILLED, MANY HURT

SOME OF THE INJURED WORKMEN IT IS BELIEVED CANNOT LIVE.

HURLED HIGH INTO THE AIR

NOT KNOWN WHETHER EXPLOSION WAS DUE TO DEFECTS IN BOILER OR NOT.

Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 15.—The explosion of a large boiler in scrap puddle furnace No. 3, at the west works of the American Iron and Steel Manufacturing company's plant late yesterday afternoon caused the death of four workmen and about forty others were more or less seriously injured.

The boiler exploded without warning and in an instant the entire place was black with death-dealing debris. The wreck of the nine immense puddle furnaces was complete. Some of the injured, it is believed, canot live. Women and children thronged the entrance to the works, crying and begging to be allowed inside.

The exploded boiler was hurled high into the air and passed over the offices, burying itself in the south bank of the Quittapahilla creek, several hundred yards away. It is not known whether the explosion was due to defects in the boiler or not. The boiler, which was of 200 horsepower, broke squarely in half, one part sailing through the machinery and woodwork of the mill. The roof collapsed and the flames from the puddle furnaces under the wrecked boiler set fire to the debris. The fire force of the company, however, had the flames extinguished in fifteen minutes.

"GUILLOTINE SCHEME"

Is Put in Operation in the House of Commons.

London, Nov. 15. — The government's "guillotine scheme" with regard to the educational bill was put in operation in the house of commons last night at 11 o'clock. The attendance was small. PRESIDENT DIDN'T "STAY PUT."

If He Had Obeyed Guide's Directions He Might Have Bagged a Bear.

Smedes, Miss., Nov. 17. — A lean black bear which weighs 235 pounds is hanging up at the president's camp on the Little Sunflower, but to the regret of all the members of the party the first trophy of the hunt did not fall to the president's Winchester. The bear's trail was struck by the hounds soon after the party started in the morning. Within a few minutes the dogs showed the direction the quarry was taking, and Holt Collier, with the instinct of an old bear hunter, immediately made up his mind where the animal would come out. To save the president needless hard riding through the brush he directed Mr. Foote to take the president along the trail to a certain cut-off. This was done and the president and Mr. Foote rode to the assigned station. Then for several hours the president and Mr. Foote waited. The trail of the bear carried the yelping hounds out of hearing, and shortly after noon Mr. Foote abandoned hope that the quarry would come back their way and he and the president returned to camp for lunch. Had they remained the president would have had a shot, as the bear with the pack at its heels, crossed at almost the exact spot which Holt had indicated. About a mile beyond this point bruin, exhausted by his long race, ran into a water hole and turned upon the dogs. Holt Collier Knocked him on the head and then tied him to a tree. The president was sent for, but he would neither shoot it or permit it to be shot.

"Put it out of its misery," said he to Mr. Parker, and the latter ended its life with his knife.

On the way back to camp with the dead bear the dogs struck a fresh trail and the president, Mr. Foote, Mr. Maggum, Dr. Cortelyou and Dr. Lung followed it. The Associated Press correspondent arrived in camp just as Holt Collier, with the bear slung across the horse's haunches, descended the river bank opposite.

"If the colonel had stayed whar I put his," said the aggrieved Holt, "he would'er done got this yere one."

GRAB CHUNK OF CANADA.

United States Surveyors Said to Have Encroached on Canadian Territory.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 17.—The Province says:

"In the quietest possible manner and with every precaution to secrecy, United States surveyors have encroached upon Canadian territory to the northeast of Cape Fox and appropriated to itself thousands of square miles of land lying within the boundaries of British Columbia to the westward of Portland canal. The line from Portland canal runs northwesterly for a short distance from that body of water, and then turns and runs due west, and finally it connects with the Ykoot river at the confluence of that stream with the Stikine river. At that same point there is to be found an old post, supposed to have been erected by the Hudson Bay company, and by running the line to that post it is apparently the claim of the American governmen that the post in question was placed in position by the Russians, although the survey line is distinctly marked by squarred and cut granite monuments. The monuments run to an apex, and mounted on the apex of each is a copper rod, which surveyors state was placed in position with a view of marking exactly the spot where the American surveyors placed their instruments when running the line. It is hardly possible to believe, in view of the presence of a British Columbia government official at Port Simpson, that Americans can have occupied this territory without such an action, having come to the knowledge of the government agent and by him transmitted to the provincial government and thence to Ottawa."

BIG ONTARIO LAND DEAL.

Government Sale to a Syndicate of Capitalists.

Toronto, Nov. 17—The greatest land settlement scheme ever put through in this country was completed yesterday when the Ontario government agreed to sell to a syndicate of American capitalists, headed by Judge W. CASE OF HOLD UP

TWO PROMINENT MEN ARE ARRESTED IN NEW YORK FOR EXTORTION.

MEN ARE PAID IN MARKED BILLS

THREATENED TO HOLD UP WATER FRONT WORK UNLESS PAID.

THE DETECTIVE DRAWS THEM ON

PERSONATES AN OFFICIAL OF THE COMPANY AND PAYS THE MONEY.

New York, Nov. 17.—A man giving the name of Harry A. Williams, but who the police declare is Henry C. Wilson, for twenty years chief clerk and civil engineer in the department of the East, U. S. A., with offices in the army building in this city, was arrested last night on a charge of extortion. Benjamin F. Whitmore, who says he is a reporter, was arrested with him on a similar charge.

The two men are accused of trying to hold up the Water Front Improvement Company of Jersey City, which is engaged in filling in crib work on Ricker's island in the East river, under contract with the street cleaning department. The men are charged with extorting $4,600, which the police say was given to them in marked bills under threats of stopping the work of the company by causing to be withdrawn an army tug, a dredge and some scows which had been loaned to expedite the work. According to the statement of Deputy Commissioner of Police Piper, who was formerly in charge of the work, he was informed six weeks ago that representatives of the company had been who professed to be the agent of the men who had power to stop the work by withdrawing the government vessels. Capt. Piper, Police Commissioner Partridge, Street Cleaning Commissioner Wood, District Attorney Jerome and Capt. Davis of the detective bureau, had a conference at which it was decided that a detective personating Oscar L. Guberman, the treasurer of the water front company, should continue the negotiations with Whitmore. After some dickering over terms, a meeting was held in the rooms of the directors of the water front company in Jersey City on Nov. 6, when, the police say, Whitmore made the statement that he represented Mr. Wilson, who was connected with people at Washington who could stop the work in twenty-four hours if the money was not paid. The detective, as Gubelman, said the company did not want unless the man to whom the money went could be seen personally. Whitmore assented and a meeting was arranged for yesterday at a down town cafe. Capt. Titus says that his detective, as a representative of the company, met Whitmore and Wilson in the cafe yesterday and handed to each of them $2,250 in marked bills, Whitmore turning over the money given to him to Wilson, and the whole transaction being witnessed by other detectives and by a representative of the district attorney's office through a window. The arrests were then made. Neither of the prisoners made any statement.

To Pay the Money

The police say Whitmore is a physician.

Dr. Benjamin Thomas Whitmore was born in Charles county, Md. He was educated at Cote Brillante college, St. Louis, Mo., and at the Louisville School of Medicine. He has received the degree of LL. D. from Manhattan college for his services in medicine. He is head of the scientific department of Parke, Davis & Co. of New York, Detroit and London, one of the most prominent drug houses in the world.

NOTHING DISCLOSED.

Public in Ignorance as to an Anglo-German South African Agreement.

London, Nov. 17. — Emperor William's visit to Sandringham is approaching its close without the disclosure of any state secrets. The only new fact is the care with which officials connected with Delagoa bay have been rewarded with decorations. The visit of the king of Portugal will be attended with more formality than has been witnessed at Sandringham, and there probably will be a revival of inventions about the approaching annexation of a large district in East Africa. The existence of a secret agreement between Germany and England respecting East Africa is not doubted in diplomatic circles, although the circumstances are not considered opportune for carrying out its provisions.

REDSKINS ARE UGLY.

Chief Flatmouth Says Stumpage Must Be Paid.

Cass Lake, Minn., Nov. 17. — Chief Flatmouth recently visited Maj. Scott, acting Indian agent at the Leech Lake agency, and informed him that the Indians were very restless and that it was difficult for him to keep them quiet unless the annuity was quickly paid, with the stumpage money. A few weeks ago the Indians refused to take their annuity of $5 each until they were paid the money owing by the government for the stumpage, which amounted to $90,000, and was an average of $15 each, making a total of $20 for each Indian. The Washington authorities wired that this would be done, and so the Indians were informed by the agent, but weeks have passed and the money is not paid. Meanwhile the cold weather has come and the Indian is wholly unprepared to meet it. The women and children are suffering with cold and hunger. The Indians are restless, and the other day the chief came and said he could not keep them in check; they were very dissatisfied. They do not blame the local agent, but the men at Washington. Maj. Scott is anxious to have them paid, but at present fears an outbreak.

QUEER SICKNESS KILLS CATTLE.

South Dakota Stockmen Discover a New Disease.

Hudson, S. D., Nov. 17. — Charles Bergstrom, a farmer living near town, reports that his cattle are afflicted with a new disease, which has puzzled veterinarians in this part of the state. They do not know what it is and are unable to prescribe a cure. Thus far two of Bergstrom's calves have died as the result of being afflicted with the disease, and some of his steers have been attacked. The disease has a peculiar effect. Animals afflicted with it become entirely lame in the left side, and the left legs become stiff and powerless. Two or three days' run of the disease is sufficient to kill the strongest animal.

WOMAN SUES WOMAN.

South Dakota Ladies Scrap and One Gets Damages.

Olivet, S. D., Nov. 17. — The most sensational case tried during a term of state circuit court which has just been concluded at this place, was the damage suit of Mrs. Kate Billman against Mrs. Annie Lonker. Owing to the prominence of the principals to the suit the court room was crowded during the trial. Mrs. Billman sued Mrs. Lonker for $5,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received at the hands of the defendant during a personal encounter last June. After remaining out all night the jury returned a verdict awarding Mrs. Billman damages in the sum of $270.

First Daughter of State.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 15. — Miss Gladys Pearl Lovett, an Aberdeen school girl, thirteen years of age, lays claim to being the first child born in the State of South Dakota. The Daily News of Nov. 3, 1889, contains the item that Nov. 2, at 3:40 o'clock Benjamin Harrison, president, and James G. Blaine, secretary, affixed their signatures to the proclamations admitting the twin states to the Union. The same paper contains the announcement of the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lovett, the child being born late in the afternoon of Nov. 2. There seems little doubt that Gladys Pearl can hold fast her claim to being the first child born in the new state.

SAVED BY A BABY

ASSASSIN WOULD NOT SHOOT WHILE HIS VICTIM HELD A BABY.

CRIME NOW HOLDS FULL SWAY

LAWLESS KENTUCKY REIGN IS WITHOUT ANY PEACE OFFICERS.

SLIPS OUT THE BACK WAY

LAWYER WHOSE LIFE HAS BEEN THREATENED LEAVES THE TOWN.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 15. — J. B. Marcum of Jackson, against whose life numerous plots are said to have been directed, is in Lexington, en route to Frankfort to argue a case before the court of appeals. In fear of assassination he left his home by the rear just before train time, accompanied by his two sisters and his wife, who proceeded with him by a circuitous route to the depot. Marcum is a trustee of the state college, attorney for the Louisville & Evansville road, United States commissioner in his district and attorney for several Southern Kentucky corporations. Until yesterday he had only left his house twice since last June. Within the last few days he has been afraid to leave his room, he says, having been

that two men had been stationed in a house commanding a view of his porch and were to shoot him when he followed his custom of sitting on the porch. He says that in one room of the house indicated the blind of a front window had been drawn and the sash raised several inches. In support of the sensational statements made by Joseph Feltner in an affidavit, Marcum says that a time when he knew Feltner had no money or a gun he came to his house one night and showed him $35, a shotgun and shells loaded with buckshot, and told him that a plot had been formed to assassinate him (Marcum), and through fear he had agreed to do the work. Feltner told him the plan was to shoot him at dawn the following morning. Before becoming afraid to leave his premises in the early summer Marcum made a practice of carrying his baby in his arms as protection. He says he knows the once when a man who intended to assassinate him with a shotgun would not fire. Jackson has no marshal and no coroner, while the police judge, Thomas Cardwell, has not left his house in three months, fearing assassination. James Cockrill, who was assassinated, was the last marshal the town had.

The coroner resigned early in the year, and no inquests have been held over the two dozen men who have since been killed. At the recent election no coroner was elected. Feltner is now a fugitive in Leslie county, accused of killing Jesse Fields. He says he will surrender at the close of this term of court and give bail, fearing to be tried in Jackson now because he says he will be assassinated.

They have furnished bonds for their appearance at the April term of the United States court in this city, when they will be tried.

CANADIANS ALARMED.

Rumor That a $4 Duty Will Be Put on Lumber Entering United States.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—Canadian lumbermen, who are in touch with what is going on at Washington and in Canadian government circles are alarmed over the rumor that a duty of $4 per thousand feet will be levied on Canadian-sawed lumber entering the United States. It is said that the measure is intended as a reprisal for the action of the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec in placing an embargo on the export of pulp wood. A number of pulp mills on the northern borders of the United States were dependent largely upon Canada for pulp wood, and these have suffered by the embargo. No effectual reprisal can be taken in connection with the pulp industry, so that an effort, it is alleged, is on foot to strike at Canada through the sawn lumber industry. Sir Wilfred Laurier is anxious that the governments of both Ontario and Quebec should take some step that will mitigate the alleged grievance of the American pulp men. It is possible that on his coming trip to Virginia Sir Wilfred will discuss the matter with the American government.

BRITISH SCANDAL.

Police Revelations of Degeneracy Among High Officials.

London, Nov. 18. — Evidence of the appalling degeneracy of certain circles of the British aristocracy continues to be printed. Arnold White, the author, has aroused much public comment the past week by speaking plainly on the subject in two or three articles. The greatest sensation was caused, however, by astounding revelations furnished by the police. The policy of "Burking" justice in the ordinary form of public prosecutions apparently has been coupled with that of private punishment of high placed offenders by the disclosure of their infamy to friends. A police inspector, who has been engaged on the cases, told the following instance of something that happened last week:

"Suspicion had been lately directed to a house in the Fulham district. The building stood alone on a large ground. The detectives surrounded it one evening, entered, and arrested the inmates, all men, numbering about forty, and took them to Scotland Yard. There it was found that the prisoners included a high court official and other prominent persons. On account of the magnitude of the scandal the police were compelled to turn the whole lot loose."

EDITOR GETS BEATING.

Attacks an American Singer and Is Soundly Thrashed.

Dresden, Saxony, Nov. 18. — Miss Belle Applegate, a native of Louisville, Ky., made her deput here last week and scored a remarkable triumph as Carmen. Dr. Boeldt, a renowned critic of opera, says:

"She displayed the true seething Southern temperament, while her voice was managed with great skill and taste."

The king of Saxony sent for her the next morning and personally congratulated her on the enthusiasm her performance has worked up. She was repeatedly called before the curtain and retired nearly smothered with flowers. The Neueste Nachrichten published a rather scurrilous notice of her performance, and that evening the editor received a card with a Bohemian name on it. Then a man, who evidently was an American student, armed with a stick, was ushered into the editorial sanctum and instantly attacked the editor. The latter defended himself vigorously and wrested the stick from his assailant's hands, who shortly afterward rushed out of the office minus his hat and with his clothing torn. The editor, however, was badly beaten, too.

BIG PRICES FOR THE DURBAR.

Visitors to the Ceremony Must Be Prepared to Spend Money.

London, Nov. 18. — The excitement over the Indian durbar continues. It is estimated that nearly 50,000 Britons and Americans will visit Delhi for the occasion. The enormous prices charged, however, have caused many people to abandon the idea of being present. It will cost two persons with two servants, $3,000 in traveling expenses alone. The cost of the stay of visitors at Delhi cannot be estimated fully. The hotels there are already charging eight times their usual tariff, and the available houses of the town have been quickly hired at from $30,000 to $45,000 apiece. The Indian princes are sparing no expense in taking steps to return the hospitality which was extended to them in England at the time of the coronation.

THEY KISS AND PART.

King Edward and Emperor William Are Cheered.

London, Nov. 18.—Emperor William concluded his visit to King Edward and has started on his visit to Lord and Lady Lonsdale at Lowther castle, Penrith, Cumberland. Hours before the emperor's departure the road to the railroad station was lined by hundreds of spectators. Before entering the train the emperor inspected the guard of honor. Emperor William and King Edward entered the saloon car together and kissed each other on both cheeks. King Edward left the car and stood chatting with the emperor. The king's last words were: "Good bye, again, au revoir." Emperor William stood for some time at a window as the train moved away, acknowledging the cheers of the crowds about the station.

Washington, Nov. 18. — Secretary Wilson is confined to his home by a severe neuralgic cold which has developed since the recent political campaign, in which the secretary took an active part. His ailment has been considerably relieved, but it will be some days before he is able to resume his duties in the agricultural department.

GOES UP IN SMOKE

BIG PLANT OF ARMOUR & CO. AT SIOUX CITY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

LOSS IS NEARLY A MILLION

FIRE SPREADS QUICKLY AND FIREMEN CONDUCT A HOPELESS FIGHT.

WATER LIKE OIL TO THE FLAMES

EXPLOSION OF AMMONIA DRUMS MAKES WORK DANGEROUS FOR FIREMEN.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 18.—The big plant of Armour & Co., which occupied three and one-half acres of ground at the extreme south end of the stock yards district, was totally destroyed by fire which started on the second floor of the fertilizer building. The loss, estimated by Charles W. Lennon, manager of the company, was total, or $900,000.

The cause of the fire was said by Mr. Lennon to have been either spontaneous combustion or an imperfect drier. There is $721,500 of insurance on the property.

Six hundred men will be thrown out of employment all winter by the fire. The fire was discovered by a watchman of the building, who a few minutes before had pulled a messenger box on the floor where it started. The flames quickly spread. Every fireman in the city was called out. Six streams of water were soon being thrown upon the flames which were gutting the fertilizer building, but the pressure was inadequate. The floor and contents of the fertilizer building

Burned Like Chaff.

The roof fell in and a minute later the fire burst through into the beef-killing house. From the beef killing house to the ofeo house was only a step, and when the lard started to burn the fire presented a most spectacular appearance. By the time the big beef house, where some 500 carcasses, nearly dressed, were hanging, caught fire, the whole plant, except the hog house, was a lake of flames. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion, followed quickly by another and then another.

"Those are the Ammonia drums," shouted Mr. Lennon to Fire Chief Kellogg. "Tell your men to be careful, there is danger of suffocation."

Twenty-four drums of 100 pounds of ammonia each exploded before the reserve supply in the ammonia cistern was reached. The ignition almost raised the entire plant off its foundation. The through the heavy fire wall which separated the big hog house from the other buildings. The hog house was the last building to the north, and the largest of all. Steadily the fire crept against the wind and through the office building, which from the first had been enveloped in flames. When the warehouse caught all streams were turned in that direction, but the water seemed like oil. In the building were 3,500 dressed hogs and 2,500,000 pounds of pork produce. After the fire had gained a good headway in the hog house all hope of saving any part of the plant was abandoned.

The efforts of the fire department were as feeble in effect as drops of rain in the ocean. The fire continued to burn all day, and in the afternoon there was another terrific explosion, which threw bricks and pieces of iron for hundreds of yards, endangering thousands of spectators, but no one was seriously hurt.

FIRE PANIC IN A CAR.

Crossed Wires Start a Blaze That Lets Loose Pandemonium.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—A South side elevated train pulled into the Twelfth street station with the flooring of the second car in flames. Inside the car were thirty panic-stricken passengers, nearly half of them women. The doors of both ends of the car were closed and held shut by guards, who were nearly as much excited as the people penned within. Only a few moments passed until Twelfth street was reached, but the scene inside the car was pandemonium. One woman fainted. Men were running like stampeded animals, and their oaths and shrieks added to the terror of the women. Several men attempted to escape through the windows, and the crashing of glass increased the panic. When the train reached Twelfth street the doors of the car were thrown open, and in a mad rush to the platform several of the frightened ones were trampled under foot. The train on which the panic occurred had just left Eighteenth street when wires near the front end of the car became crossed and set fire to the woodwork. On the arrival of the train at Twelfth street the fire was quickly extinguished.

Capture the Pretender.

Tangiers, Morocco, Nov. 18. — According to a report which has reached here from Fez, the imperial troops have succeeded in capturing the pretender to the throne. It is stated that the sultan, at the head of an army of 25,000 men, will direct in person the operations to put down the uprising of the Kabyle tribesmen at Zemour.

Murder and Suicide.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 18.—James Rose, aged twenty-two, a negro, last night fatally shot his seventeen-year-old wife. He then walked to his father's house, told of the deed and killed himself. He was jealous.

Bad Men Get It.

Portland, Or., Nov. 18—At Newburg, twenty miles from this city, the station was broken into by robbers and the safe of the Chehalis Valley Milling company, which contained $1,200, was robbed.

MINNESOTA IS IN THE VAN.

Defeats Wisconsin at Minneapolis by a Score of 11 to 0.

Minneapolis, Nov. 18. — Minnesota defeated Wisconsin in the annual football game, and will now settle the Western championship with Michigan when the two teams meet at Detroit on Thanksgiving day. The score was 11 to 0.

In the first half the two teams were evenly matched and neither goal line was in danger. The defenses of both were wonderfully strong, although Minnesota was a shade the stronger. Also the team work was of high order and but few fumbles were made. Minnesota's first score was made by fast, straight football. In the first part of the second half Minnesota used Van Valkenberg, a veritable battering ram, and he pounded the line for continual gains. Rarely did he fail to make from three to five yards. Knowlton and Thorpe also played a wonderfully aggressive game. Davis did good work while he played, but was hurt in the early part of the game. Rogers, Flynn and Harris did the best defensive work for Minnesota. On punts Rogers invariably got down the field in time to down Fogg or Marsh before they could return the ball.

Capt. Flynn frequently broke through the line and tackled the men before they reached the line. Harris covered himself with glory by the heady way in which he ran the team. At one time he saved the home goal line by downing Marsh, who had started for a seventy-yard run. His ability in returning punts also won applause from the spectators.

DEATH IN AN AWFUL FORM.

Minneapolis Girl Ends Life With Fire.

Minneapolis, Nov. 18.—Powerless to interfere, W. A. Foster of 2029 Clinton avenue south, yesterday morning saw his daughter Grace apply a match to her kerosene-soaked clothing and body. Within five seconds the girl's clothing was a mass of flames. All efforts of the father were unavailing and the daughter dropped dead to the floor within two minutes after she had started the fire. Despondency, caused by long illness, is assigned as the reason for the girl's deed. For the past three or four weeks she had been confined to her home with illness, and for the past week the father was especially watchful over her. But yesterday morning she eluded him and was applying the match to her clothing when he discovered her. She was terribly burned before the fire could be extinguished.

FREIGHT WRECKED.

Thirty-Two Cars Derailed and the Fireman Badly Hurt.

Menomonie, Wis., Nov. 18.—As the east-bound freight No. 78 on the main line of the Omaha road was passing Menomonie Junction at a high rate of speed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning the rails suddenly spread, throwing the engine from the track. The engine plowed up through the earth for about eighty feet, tearing up platforms and finally imbedding itself two feet or more into the hard ground. The thirty-two cars in the train were piled up in all shapes, five of them being shivered to kindling wood and ten others badly wrecked. John J. Kane, the fireman, whose home is in New Richmond, was caught between the engine and tender and so badly hurt that he will die.

ROWELL CASE IS DECIDED.

Long-Fought Legal Battle Is Won by Plaintiffs.

Oshkosh, Wis., Nov. 18.—The "Rowell case," which has been in litigation for a score of years, has been decided. Judgment was rendered in the circuit court in favor of the plaintiffs in the action, Mrs. Mary I. Rowell, Mrs. Jennie Beichel, Walden T. Rowell, Edla E. Rowell and Clarence L. Rowell, against the defendants, J. S. Rowell, the J. S. Rowell Manufacturing company, its stockholders, and George F. Morton, in the sum of $19,000 and costs of action, estimated at $50,000.

HOT FIRE AT HUDSON.

Large Vegetable Warehouse Is Totally Destroyed.

Hudson, Wis., Nov. 18.—The large vegetable warehouse of the Hudson Produce company was totally destroyed by fire, with all its contents. The cause is unknown. The loss is about $16,000; insurance on building, $1,500, and on contents, $7,000. The building contained a large quantity of onions and potatoes. B. L. Grant is president of the company.

RESULT OF A QUARREL.

Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Kills Another Half His Age.

Baldwin, Wis., Nov. 18.—Jens Nelson, the fourteen-year-old son of Mrs. Elsie Nelson, a widow, shot and instantly killed the seven-year-old son of Albert Ecker yesterday. The tragedy took place at the home of Mrs. Nelson, five miles northeast of here. It is said that the crime was the result of a quarrel.

TO SHAKE OFF A TIE.

Special Election to Be Held in a Montana County.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 18. — For the first time in the history of the state the governor is compelled to order a special election because of a tie vote. Official count of the vote of Yellowstone county shows that Bover, Republican, and Morse, Democrat, received the same number of votes for the legislature.

WANT PIERRE'S SCALP.

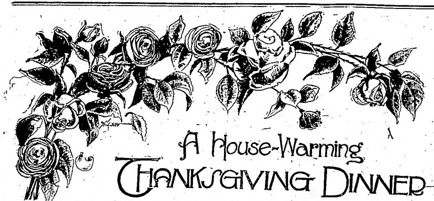
D., Nov. 18.—The committees from Redfield, Mitchell and Huron having in charge the campaign for the resubmission of the capital question met here Friday evening and entered into a mutual agreement, pledging the support of each of the towns in favor of action which should unite the friends of the different towns in an effort to remove the capital to some point in the James river valley.



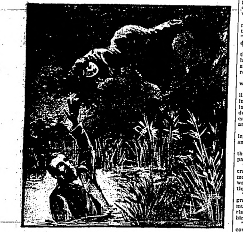
A House-Warming Thanksgiving Dinner

[By Charles H. Robinson.]

It was all on account of the Widow Amesy.

During the lifetime of her lord and master Mrs. Amesy was nothing but an atom flurrying around on the edge of the social whirlwind, but, as a widow with a tidy bit of money left her by the lamented departed—that was another matter. Then, the storm center sought to draw her in and squeeze the money out of her. Being a wise woman, she resisted the pressure and invested her windfall in a little cottage, which possessed three rooms below and two more in the attic. This, with even simple furnishings, took all her avails and compelled her to look around for the wherewith to satisfy the cravings and clamors of her physical nature, for she was a jolly and weighty specimen of widowkind. As the doctor frequently said of her:

"The widow Amesy is a good-sized chunk of a woman; able to take care of herself and stand on her rights."



The Limb Bent Lower and Lower.

For some inscrutable reason the widow had set herself up as the champion of the weak—men, women or children, there was no difference to her—even in the case of a helpless bird or dog, she would ruffle up as if she had the feathers of a motherly hen guarding her brood from the attacks of a ravenous hawk, and stay the injurious hand. To the sick and suffering she was kindness personified, and her gentle disposition combined with her physical strength and the knowledge of how to use it brought her into constant demand as a skillful nurse. Everybody knew her, respected her and had reason to be grateful to her for services performed at some period or other, and was ready to fight for her if the occasion required war on her behalf.

There was once a faint breath of scandal, but the doctor dissipated it in the most startlingly vigorous manner, and after that, neither it nor any other ill-wind blew in her direction.

"If that woman isn't a saint, she's next door to being one," was his wind-up when he told the story.

Mr. Adoniram Jimson was the individual in question. A "ne'er do well," but he took care of the widow's cow and calf, looked after her chickens and ducks as a labor of love, and to reciprocate many of her little surreptitious acts of kindness in the shape of fresh baked bread, an occasional roast chicken or a luxuriant pie, that found its way into his scant pantry. He accepted and ate everything he found there in a perfunctory manner, somewhat after the style of the raven-fed prophet, or rather like the hog under the oak, that roots up and devours the succulent nuts without ever looking up to see whence they come.

It so happened, late one evening, that Mr. Jimson started after the widow's cow and calf that had been wandering among the brush all day for pasture, and had apparently forgotten the way home. It had been raining steadily for forty-eight hours, and the numerous sloughs, riverbeds and buffalo wallows were so saturated with water that it meant death to fall into any of them because of the bottomless quicksands mixed with mirey clay, which drew their prey down into the depths without hope of extrication.

Naturally careless and reckless, Mr. Jimson plunged into a quagmire, and when he felt himself sinking, he shouted for help. Fortunately the widow heard his cries and rushed to the rescue.

"What in the world are you doing in there, Mr. Jimson?" she inquired after locating him in the semi-darkness.

"The cows, widow; I started after them and forgot the slough in goin' cross lots."

"Wait, Mr. Jimson, and I will pull you out," and she made as if she would go in after him, but he quickly stopped her.

"No, no, widow, for God's sake, go back. You'll mire yourself an' both of us'll be lost."

"I have it," said the widow, quickly taking in all the surroundings. "Have patience, Mr. Jimson, and do not struggle, or you will sink faster," then adding under her breath: "I must do it; there's no time to get help; besides, nobody can see me."

The big lower limb of a sycamore tree stretched out over and beyond him, but out of his reach, and her thought was, that if she could climb out on the limb, her weight would bend it down so that he could seize hold of it, and either draw himself out or hold on to it until she could procure other aid.

She climbed the tree and reached the big limb after encountering numerous bruises and scratches, which, however, she did not heed. Then resting a moment, she stretched her body out along the branch and began to crawl slowly toward Jimson, who soon understood what she intended to do.

"Widow," he cried imploringly, "you'll fall off an' be lost. Never mind me, widow, I ain't of no account; I'm in my last hole, an' it's jest as well. For God's sake, widow, go back; don't resk your life for me!"

"Be still, poor man," said the woman, crawling slowly along, her arms and legs clasped around the limb. It began to bend with her weight at last, but she still kept on, almost falling off, for the limb was growing smaller and she could not grip it tight. She flattened her body down upon it like a worm crawling on a quivering twig, all the time telling Jimson to cheer up and she would save him. The limb bent lower and lower still, until Jimson had a tiny branch in his grasp.

"Now, hold on tight," the widow commanded, "and keep still. I am going back, and when my weight is off the limb it will spring up and pull you out."

So saying, she began to crawl backward cautiously, lest a single slip should throw her off her balance and her efforts prove in vain. The broken, jagged twigs and branches caught her dress and pierced her flesh, but with resistless force she bore her whole weight backward against them and tore herself free, reaching the trunk in safety, whence she dropped panting to the ground.

Jimson worked the sticky earth and sand into the consistency of gruel, by turning and twisting, until finally the downward suction ceased and the upward spring of the tree branch began to draw him up and out. Then, climbing hand over hand along the limb as it bent back to its normal position, the woman encouraging him all the way, he finally reached safety, and, dropping from the limb to the ground, broke his leg and fell unconscious.

When he recovered his senses he was lying on a couch in the widow's little parlor, the widow herself bending over him with a bowl of steaming tea which she made him drink.

"I must go home, widow," said Jimson trying to stand up and walk, but falling to the floor, groaning with pain. Lifting him back upon the couch, the widow bade him lie still while she went for the doctor.

"H-m-m, a very bad case," remarked the doctor after an examination of the fractured member. "Crushed, twisted and broken. How did it happen?"

When put in possession of the facts, the doctor burst out into a roar of laughter. "What a sight! What a sight!" he exclaimed as soon as he recovered his breath.

"What do you mean?" demanded the widow, bridling up.

"Why, your crawling out on that limb and crawfishing back again." The imaginative doctor again broke out into a fit of laughter, which was suddenly checked by a sound box on the ear administered by the angry woman.

"You're here to fix this poor man's leg, not to insult a woman!" she snapped out with fire in her eyes.

"Widow, I beg your pardon," said the doctor humbly as he turned to his patient.

"It will be six weeks before he can crawl about on crutches, and two months before he can attempt to walk," was the fiat when the operation had been completed.

"Six weeks? Two months?" groaned Jimson. "Le'me go home. I must go home," and he attempted to rise, compelling the doctor to hold him down on his back.

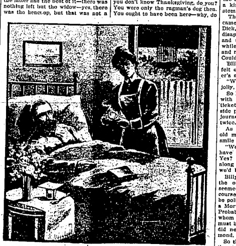
"But the cow, widow, I must git the cow," said he plaintively.

"Never mind the cow, Mr. Jimson," said the widow; let it go to Halifax. You've got to lie still for six weeks or two months. I'll take care of you."

And she did take care of him, pulling him through until he was able to walk.

Not long afterward, about ten days before Thanksgiving day, the widow's little house was burned to the ground, all she had in the world being consumed with it. When the bucket brigade finished fighting the fiery demon, the latter had the best of it—there was nothing left but the widow—yes, there was the hencoop, but that was not a fit habitation for her, although she thought she might fix it up and get along all right until she could afford to build some sort of a shanty to protect her from the inclement weather. She refused all offers of aid, but 'Squire Hobbs laid down the law and she was compelled to yield.

"You will go over to my house and stay there until we have built you another house," said he with a determination that overcame her resistance. "D'ye think we're going to let you live in a hencoop?"



Took Care of Him Until He Could Walk.

At a town meeting, called for the purpose, it was resolved to have the widow's house rebuilt ready for occupation on Thanksgiving day. Some furnished money, others contributed materials, and others still volunteered to do the work.

There were delays and setbacks, however, as is usual whenever any work is promised at a certain, fixed time, so that when Thanksgiving morning arrived the problem of completing the job became knotty, but having been promised and undertaken, it had to be finished. By hard thinking 'Squire Hobbs conceived the idea, and to carry it into effect, he summoned his fellow townsmen and laid the matter before them.

"You women folks," said he by way of consulting them, "you women folks go home and cook up what you've got in the house just the same as if you were going to get dinner—Turkeys, chickens, geese, ducks, anything, and cranberry sauce. The pumpkin and mince pies are already ripe on the pantry shelves. Then bring everything here by 4 o'clock. We men will finish this house for the widow by that time, and we'll all eat our Thanksgiving dinner on the spot. It will be a house warming Thanksgiving dinner and an old-fashioned barn-raising combined. There'll be board tables laid outside for those who can't get inside the house. You boys and girls, get all the boxes and barrels you can find—there's a lot of cordwood in my back yard that won't be missed—and if we don't finish eating by dark, we'll have bonfires to see by and warm up up. Widow, you just sit or stand around and boss things, it being your house. No remarks, please! Scatter!

The house was on hand at the hour named, so were the women and the combined Thanksgiving dinners.

Of course, the house was not big enough to accommodate all the merry crowd that wanted to get into it, but those who could not squeeze in gathered around it as close as they could to eat and hear the speeches of the notables, who practiced oratory until the small boys notified them that the fuel had given out. Then they all went home tired, but full and happy. Was the widow happy? Not a bit more than the others.

BILLY'S THANKSGIVING UNCLE.

"Thanksgiving's coming again, Flopsy," said Billy Dick. "But I forgot, you don't know Thanksgiving, do you? You were only the ragman's dog then. You ought to have been here—why, do you know what I did last year? An auto and I ran away together. And I remembered, of course, that a boy whose name is Milton Montgomery Norton can't disobey, so we—Jiminy Ann! What do you suppose is the matter?"

Flopsy's tail wagged knowingly, but he didn't answer. He was either jealous of this "Jiminy Ann," whom he had never seen, but to whom Billy Dick often talked in this way. What he did see was the town messenger waving a telegram.

"For me?" asked Billy expectantly.

"Naw!" cried the boy. "It's for yer mother. Sign for it."

Billy Dick laboriously signed his full name on the blank, and he and Flopsy ran in with the telegram. Mrs. Morton was busy in the dining room carefully packing a valise with Thanksgiving goodies, pies and cake and jellies.

"A telegram, mother," cried Billy Dick, "for you."

"Oh, Billy Dick!" was all she could say, for telegrams came so seldom that they always frightened her.

"It's—it's probably from Mrs. Walker," suggested Billy Dick in his reassuring manner. "Open it and see."

"Mrs. Walker is in Turkey," laughed Mrs. Norton at his comfort.

Billy Dick tore the envelope open and Mrs. Morton read the telegram aloud:

"On way East. Arrive Thanksgiving 10 a. m. "John and Dorothy."

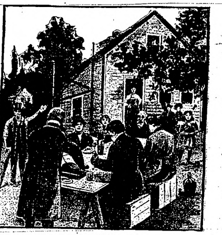
"Goodness!" cried Billy Dick. Uncle Jack and Aunt Dot to visit us!" and he capered around the table.

"Yes, it is nice," said Mrs. Morton, "but, Billy Dick, they're to arrive Thanksgiving day, and that means our other plans are spoiled."

Billy Dick hadn't thought of that, that certainly wasn't pleasant, for the expedition they had planned was to go down to Norfolk, for the father, who was in the navy, was unable to leave the yard to come home for the holiday. And such a cooking time as they had had. Capt. Morton had written that the food there was poor, and if they came down to bring some "frills," and it was the "frills" that Mrs. Morton was now packing in the bag.

"And—it busts our plans?" echoed Billy Dick. "O mother!"

"We must stay at home, Billy Dick, and disappoint your father, too." Mrs. Morton's sweet voice was trembling. Billy Dick could not stand it—he and Flopsy had to go out on the piazza to think it over.



An Outdoor Thanksgiving Dinner.

"O, Flopsy, Flopsy," said Billy Dick, burying his head in Flopsy's ears. "I'm glad you don't know what Thanksgiving is like, and a visit to pops at the yard, for you can't be disappointed. I feel—Jiminy Ann, there's something the matter with my eyes, and I've got a kind of a pain somewhere in my stomach, I guess, and——"

The door opened and Mrs. Morton came briskly out. "I have it, Billy Dick, I have another plan. We mustn't disappoint your father entirely. You and the goodies shall go to Norfolk, while Rosy Posy and I stay at home and receive Uncle Jack and Aunt Dot. Could you go alone?"

Billy Dick began to grow tall. He felt on a level with his pretty mother's shoulder as he answered:

"Why, of course. That would be jolly, except for you and Rosy Posy."

So Billy Dick started that afternoon, with a dollar in his pocket, and his ticket carefully stowed away in an inside pocket. It was a three hours' journey, and he had to change cars twice.

As he stepped off the train a little old man with white hair and a jolly smile came up to him.

"Well, well, well," he said, "how you have grown! This is Billy, isn't it? Yes? Well, I declare—come right along with me. The train is late, and we'd better get some supper here."

Billy Dick wasn't quite sure who the old gentleman was, but as he seemed familiar with him, why of course it was all right. It would not be polite to ask him who he was, and a Morton is always polite, you know. Probably it was great-uncle Howell, whom he had seen years ago. Yes, it must be, thought Billy Dick, though he did not know that he lived in Richmond.

So the two went off together across the street and round the corner to a hotel.

Billy Dick had never been in a hotel before, and before he was half through supper he made up his mind that as soon as he was big enough he would persuade the family to come there—it was so nice to have hundreds of things to eat all written out so you might choose as many as you wanted.

The two sat there, the very old man and the little boy having the best of times. Billy Dick told the new-found great-uncle all about home and Rosy Posy and Flopsy and Miss Elsie, who was his Sunday school teacher and his very best girl, and the fun he and Flopsy had last year earning their Christmas from Mr. Minders. And the old gentleman laughed and enjoyed the jokes, and in turn told Billy Dick what he did years and years ago when he was a boy.

So the time passed away quickly, till word was brought to them that there had been a wreck on the road and that no train could run through to Norfolk that night.

"But I must go," said Billy Dick. "My father is waiting for me. I'll give them a dollar if they can let me through."

A dollar was a large sum to Billy Dick, and as it was all he had it was a valuable offer.

The colored waiter showed his teeth pleasantly. "Sho', dey ain' gwine lef eben de pres'dent troo," he said. "Sorry, sah."

Billy Dick looked frightened. "But—but," he said, "my father was to meet me and telegraph to mother that I got here all right, and mother'll be so worried. And father says it is cowardly to worry a lady."

"Well, well, it is too bad," said the old gentleman. "Your father won't worry because he knows I am here, and we'll telegraph to your mother if you like."

So Billy Dick ate the rest of the supper, convinced that a small boy couldn't do much to clear the railroad if they would not even do it for the president himself.

After the ice cream was finished, they went to the telegraph office and sent the telegram.

"Can you give mother my love?" asked Billy Dick.

The old gentleman chuckled and nodded.

Then there was nothing else to do but spend the night in Richmond with the new-found uncle, and such fun it was to stay at a hotel!

Early in the morning Billy Dick and his great-uncle took the train for Norfolk, and soon the engine was puffing into the station.

And—O, joy! there was Dad anxiously peering through the window for his boy. He had jumped on the train before it stopped and had Billy Dick in his arms.

In fact, Billy Dick forgot all about his new-found uncle, for his father was so glad to see him safe and sound.

"I must telegraph your mother at once, Billy Dick," said his father. "She has been almost worried to death about you when I could not telegraph her that you had arrived."

"But great uncle Howell telegraphed—didn't you?" asked Billy Dick, turning to the old gentleman, who was greeting some friends.

"Who?" asked Capt. Morton.

"Why," began Billy Dick, and as he noticed that his father didn't shake hands with the old gentleman, and that the old gentleman apparently didn't know his father, he introduced them.

"This is my father; don't you remember him?" he said.

"Your father!" exclaimed the old gentleman. "Your father is my nephew, William Walters."

There surely was some mistake somewhere, or was he dreaming?

"Aren't you Billy Waters, William Walton Waters?" asked the old gentleman.

"I am Milton Montgomery Morton, sir," said Billy Dick.

"You said your name was Billy," said the old man.

"Billy Dick," explained Capt. Morton. "He's always been called that because——"

Then the old gentleman began to laugh, and Billy Dick laughed, too, as did Captain Morton and the other friends that came up. And the whole thing was explained when one lady said: "Why, Billy Waters' mother telegraphed that he was sick and couldn't come."

"And—and the telegram?" gasped Billy Dick.

"Went to Billy Waters' mother—with your love in it," laughed the old gentleman. "She must have been surprised to get it with her own Billy right at home!"

Billy Dick's own mother was notified at once, and his "great uncle Howell" helped him and his father to eat the goodies she had packed in the bag.

THE TEST OF TIME.

Mrs. Clara J. Sherbourne, professional nurse, of 257 Cumberland street, Portland, Maine, says:

"I heartily wish those who suffer from some disturbed action of the kidneys would try Doan's Kidney Pills. They would, like me, be more than surprised. My back annoyed me for years. Physicians who diagnosed my case said it arose from my kidneys. When the grip was epidemic I was worn out with constant nursing, and when I contracted it myself it left me in a very serious condition. I could not straighten nor do the most trivial act without being in torture. The kidneys were too active or the secretions were too copious, and I knew what was wrong, but how to right it was a mystery. It seems odd for a professional nurse, who has had a great deal of experience with medicines, to read advertisements about Doan's Kidney Pills in the newspapers, and it may appear more singular for me to go to H. H. Hay & Son's drug store for a box. But I did, however; and had anybody told me before that it was possible to get relief as quickly as I did I would have been loth to believe it. You can send anyone who wishes more minute particulars about my case to me, and I will be only too glad to tell them personally. As long as I live I will be a firm advocate of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Cure Confirmed—5 Years Later.

"Lapse of time has strengthened my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, first expressed in the spring of 1896. I said then that had anybody told me that it was possible to get relief as quickly as I did I would have been loth to believe it. Years have passed and my continued freedom from kidney complaint has strengthened my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and given me a much higher appreciation of their merits."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

Hotel registers are sometimes great liars.

Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in my back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend Vegetable Compound."—MRS. ENGLISH AT FOREIGN HOTELS.

Fearful and Wonderful Combinations That Are Formed.

Many gems of the curious English of foreign hotel keepers have been given to the public. Among the best is the tale of the host of a well-known establishment in Greece, who was wont to greet his guests in an effusive manner with: "What you profare—a bif-tek or a chick-hen?"

Their astonishment at the mastery of the language was frequently deepened when, upon their return to the hotel a few hours later, they found nothing prepared. It was his only English sentence, and he did not understand a word of it.

This, however, is not quite equal to the placard in the possession of a naval officer just returned from Egypt. He procured it at a cafe chantant in Alexandria. It was printed in several languages and this is the English part: "Every of the consummations of the coldness, one piastre besides. Every of the claim to be addressed directly of the direction. During of the repetitions the price of consummations to be the same that in every the other's coffee."

With the aid of the parallel passages in other languages the meaning is found as follows: "All iced drinks one piastre extra. All complaints should be made at the office. Notwithstanding the performance the prices will be the same as those of other cafes."—Stray Stories.

MR. MORGAN'S FAVORITE GAME.

About the Only Recreation the Great Financier Enjoys.

J. Pierpont Morgan was the subject of a conversation in a club in this city. One of the group discussed the characteristics of the financier startled the others by volunteering the information:

"He is all devotion to Miss Milligan."

Two months have elapsed since this speech, and now nearly every fashionable club knows who or rather "what" Miss Milligan is. It is the last phase of solitaire at cards, and, at present, is one of the fads of the hour.

Miss Milligan is played everywhere to-day, and the rainy autumn in country houses has made the game very popular. It is played with two packs of cards and the solution is effected by the placing in eight rows of different cards, the aces having the top row and alternate red and black layers being made until the cards are exhausted, when they must come out in these alternate layers and in rotation of numbers. It is extremely difficult to accomplish.—New York Times.

Couldn't Wait.

Col. William G. Price, Jr., of the Third regiment, sat in his tent one day last week attending to official business, when he heard one of the men, a teamster, swearing like a Hessian, says the Philadelphia Times. He recognized the voice, and determined to reprove the man at the first opportunity. He had not long to wait. "John," he called; "come here." John responded with a military salute, and stood before his Colonel unflinchingly. "John, did I not hear some one swearing dreadfully down the hill a little while ago?" "Yes, Colonel: that was me." "You, John; I am surprised. Don't you remember that I was to do the swearing for the Third regiment?" "Yes, Colonel, I know; but, you see, I was coming up the hill with a big load, and the trace broke. The swearing had to be done right away, and you wasn't there to do it."

A Fatal Defect.

An Irish woman was looking at refrigerators in a housefurnishing store, some weeks ago. After examining into the merits and qualities of a number of them, she purchased the one that the salesman assured her would keep the food best. Some days afterward, the woman called and requested them to take that refrigerator back, as it would not keep anything better than the kitchen safe or the cellar. The salesman mildly suggested that possibly she had not put enough ice in to keep the things cold. "Enough ice in it! Why, you are crazy, mon; I don't put any ice in it. Anything will keep cold if you put ice in it. I bought the refrigerator so that I wouldn't need the ice."

New Smoke Burner.

Here is an invention that comes at the right time. Two practical engineers of Toledo, Ohio, have invented a smoke consuming device while it is not a consumer of smoke. It is simple a method of feeding coal ground into fine dust direct into the furnace, much as planing mills do with shavings. The invention steam dries the coal, grinds it to a dust and sprays the dust into the fire box with just enough oxygen to produce instantaneous combustion. Little smoke can be seen and the saving is claimed to be 30 per cent. As the desire is to use more soft coal than ever before this invention will be just the thing to help it along.

Hades Located Once More.

"Tickets," said the conductor of a north-bound excursion train out of Kansas City to a man who had been imbibing too freely a few nights ago.

"Ain't got no ticket," said the inebriate, half aroused from his slumber.

"Where are you going?" asked the conductor as he shook him.

"Goin' t' hell," was the drowsy reply.

"All right," said the conductor cheerfully. "We're due there at 9:30 o'clock. Give me sixty cents and get off the train when the brakeman calls Leavenworth."—Newton (Kan.) Republican.

A BIG SHOE FACTORY

FROM A SMALL BEGINNING IN 1880 IT GROWS TO IMMENSE PROPORTIONS.

THE F. MAYER BOOT & SHOE CO. of Milwaukee, Wis., Now Occupies 3 1-2 Acres of Floor Space, and has Capacity for Making Six Thousand Pairs of Shoes Per Day.

Just 23 years ago Mr. F. Mayer established a shoe factory in Milwaukee, and began the manufacture of shoes in a modest way. The working force at that time was small and the facilities inadequate, yet it was the foundation of what was destined to be one of the largest shoe factories in this country. The underlying business principle was then, as now, to produce the best shoes possible, at the lowest prices. That this policy was successful has been demonstrated by the fact that shoes bearing the Mayer trade mark are now sold in every state and territory west of the Ohio River. Over 600 people are kept busy as bees supplying a demand that has steadily increased as a result of the universal satisfaction given by Mayer's shoes.

Milwaukee being the home of the biggest leather tanneries in the world, and also the market for the very best shoe leather known, gives the Milwaukee manufacturer advantages in the cost as well as the choice of leather, that outside manufacturers can not obtain, thus enabling the Mayer shoe factory to turn out better shoes at a less cost than outside competitors.

Something like 40 traveling salesmen are required to visit merchants in thousands of towns and villages in twenty different states. The magnitude of this business can best be appreciated when you take into consideration that, with the present capacity, 6,000 complete pairs of shoes can be turned out every working day.

The business is now conducted under the name of the F. Mayer Boot & Shoe Co., by the three sons of Mr. F. Mayer, who succeded him in the business. As Mayer's shoes are being liberally advertised, the further growth of the company is sure to be rapid.

Gone to Sleep Till Spring.

The big Mississippi catfish and the ugly hellbinder and mud puppies in the New York Aquarium have gone to sleep for the winter. Every year they seem to get tired of active life and sink to the bottom of their tanks, where they remain for months without tasting a morsel of food or moving the least bit their sluggish bodies. The catfish, which is a big specimen of the Mississippi kind, is the most obstinate sleeper of the lot. It will be next spring, if he sleeps the usual period, before he will again come to the surface. Every day hundreds of visitors to the aquarium wonder how it is that such a big, health-looking fish can sleep so long without losing in weight.—New York Times.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The appointment by Gov. Van Sant of James A. Martin as a member of the state board of control to succeed W. E. Lee, resigned, is one of the most popular appointments the governor has ever made, and will never be regretted.

At the recent state election the Populist party failed to get 5 per cent of the total vote cast, and they will not be entitled to a place upon the state ticket, except by petition two years from now. Fusion evidently killed the Populist party.

Here is an interesting little truth from Printers' Ink, which should be read by every citizen of Thief River Falls: "Town, as well as merchants, must advertise in order to prosper. When a village is allowed to go out of public notice through lack of energy and enterprise, the decadence of that village has begun and nothing but well-directed advertising backed by an infusion of new life, can restore that place to its original standing. Thus we find that the town that has the county fair each year, and improves it annually, becomes well known through that medium. The town that keeps its roads in good repair propagates an interest for itself among all who visit it."

Curtail the Cut.

Lumbermen and loggers are expecting serious difficulty in securing men for the woods this fall, and wages will probably be higher than usual in consequence. Men who usually go into the pineries, they say, are securing employment in the cities and will remain there. This is due largely to the generally favorable business conditions of the country, and particularly of the northwest but it will make trouble for the lumbermen just the same.

Another element that must be taken into consideration is the increased cost of provisions, which will make it much more expensive than usual to maintain. For these and other reasons the smaller logging jobbers are not especially eager to accept contracts, and it is likely that there will be comparatively few of them in the woods this winter. Individually the cut of these small firms is small, but together it is large enough to be a very considerable item in the total.

No Boom at Present.

The land business in the Red River Valley is not on the boom this fall. While the business is good and the land men are not making any particular kick, still as one remarked yesterday, the companies are not hiring any extra men. Several things account for this according to the dealers in North Dakota and Minnesota dirt.

First and foremost among them is the great demand for Canadian land, which can be bought much cheaper. The center of the northwestern land rush has moved to Winnipeg. It is a significant fact that the C. P. R. land, after being on the market and being culled over for fifteen months, made the largest sales for the months of October of any month since they have been on the market. The Peg is fast becoming the home of branch offices of the various land companies.—Crookston Times.

MASS MEETING.

All Citizens Requested to Be Present

At the request of the Commercial Club, a mass meeting has been called to meet in the city hall Saturday evening, Nov. 22, to discuss the opening of the Red lake reservation adjoining this city and all are requested to be present and express their views. The meeting is to be held to make recommendations to the council in regard to sending a representative to Washington next month for the purpose of working for the passage of the Red lake bill now before congress. The council desires to do what the people of this city wish, and it is understood that whatever recommendations are made at this meeting will be carried out. There has been considerable discussion of this matter upon the streets for sometime. F. H. Kratka is the unanimous choice of all who desire to see the city send a representative, and he is undoubtedly the best qualified man in the city, as his former experience in Washington is of great value.

HE'S ALL RIGHT

Steenerson is for Thief River Falls First.

The Republican congressman of Minnesota held a meeting in St. Paul last Saturday and unanimously decided to support Joseph Cannon, of Illinois, for speaker of the next house of representatives. Hon. Halvor Steenerson, the newly elected member from the Ninth district, however, had a string attached to the endorsement, which was to the effect that Mr. Cannon is not to oppose the passage of the Red Lake bill which will open for settlement that portion of the reservation just east of this city. As chairman of the committee on appropriations, Mr. Cannon caused the defeat of this bill in the last session of congress, and it is not thought that he will make any objection at the coming session this winter.

The Great Northern surveyors who arrived in the city last week are camped near the depot and are making survey of the proposed extention of the Great Northern north from here. The following market is furnished by Edward, Wood & Co., Grain Commission Merchants.

Nov. 18.—Wheat—During the past week a good deal of energy has been expended in trying to guess what the Armour Co. intends to do in the wheat market. There has been a good deal of bear sentiment on the part of professional traders, but buying by Armour has given them pause and occasioned some doubt as to the correctness of the bear point of view. The market has closed a little higher each night since Thursday and has a very strong tone. It looks a little bearish to see exports for the week drop to 4,400,000 bu, especially in view of the fact that worlds shipments were 11,164,000 bu., but Armour has been right, and the rest of the trade wrong, severel times before this year and it looks as though that firm might easily be right this time. The United States will consume 400,000,000 bu. of wheat 100,000,000 bu. has already been exported, and the export business is by no means over with and need requirements will be about 70,000,000 bu. The crop has frequently been estimated at less than 600,000,000 bu. and although that is probably too low, it seems very likely that the excess over requirements will not amount to more than the usual reserves, to be carried over into the next crop year, that is to say: the amount over and above that which will be used during this crop year, will be so small, that speculation can very easily, and certainly will carry the price to much higher figures. Notwithstanding the continued large worlds shipments the Liverpool Market remains strong.

GREETING IS WARM

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TENDERED OVATION BY MEMPHIS CITIZENS.

VERY BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIR

PARTICIPATES IN FESTIVITIES OF HOMECOMING OF GEN. LUKE WRIGHT.

SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO WRIGHT

AFFECTION AND ESTEEM OF HIS NEIGHBORS IS FITTINGLY DEMONSTRATED.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 21.—Although the festivities for yesterday celebrated the homecoming of Gen. Luke E. Wright, vice governor of the Philippines, it is no reflection upon the warmth of the welcome extended to him to say that President Roosevelt's presence was the overshadowing feature of the day. Excursion trains were run into the city and quite a number of distinguished people were present to participate in the celebration. Among them were Gov. Benton McMillan and Gen. Joseph Wheeler. The program was a long one. Immediately after the president's arrival there was a parade through the streets to the Gayoso hotel, where a breakfast was tendered the president and Gen. Wright jointly by the ladies of Memphis. In the afternoon the president attended and spoke at two receptions given

In Honor of Gen. Wright,

one at the Auditorium by the white citizens and the other at a ball in the black section of the city by the colored people. Later there was a Colonial Dames tea at the Gayoso and the festivities closed last night with an elaborate banquet at the Peabody, at which the president delivered a set speech. Including some brief remarks at the breakfast, the president spoke four times during the day. Altogether it was a splendid tribute to the affection and esteem in which Gen. Wright is held at home. That Mrs. Wright is also exceedingly popular was made apparent by the applause which greeted every reference to her. This was especially marked at the Auditorium, when the president referred to the fact that his mother's brother served in the Confederate navy under her father, who was Admiral Semmes. Mayor Williams and Gov. McMillan both made addresses of welcome here and the audience was when Gen. Wright delivered his response. He was greatly touched by the compliment paid him by the president's presence and with the demonstration in his honor.

Very Enthusiastic

Gen. Wright did not go deeply into the situation in the Philippines in his remarks, but he emphasized the fact that the administration of the islands under both Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt had been of an absolutely non-partisan character.

At midnight the presidential party left for Washington over the Southern railroad. Col. L. S. Brown, general agent of the Southern, was in charge of the train. No stops will be made en route. The train will reach Washington at 6 o'clock Friday morning.

DEFENSES OF LONDON.

Lord Roberts Fortifies the Town Against Attack in Case of War.

London, Nov. 21.—Efforts of a far reaching character have been set on foot to fortify the metropolis against a possible attack in case of war, from which, judging from statements made last night, it has hitherto been quite inadequately protected. An announcement to the effect that extensive buildings have been completed at Woldingham, Surrey, eleven miles south of London, for use as a mobilizing center in the scheme for the defense of London reveals for the first time the existence of important war office operations. It is stated that when Lord Roberts took over his post of commander-in-chief of the British army he personally investigated the defenses of London and found them to be very imperfect. Since then powerful batteries have been mounted on elevations commanding the principal roads between London and the south coast. New fortifications are being rapidly constructed along the banks of the Thames and Woldingham has been fitted up as a center of mobilization.

BLISS REACHES CUBA.

Special Meeting of the Cabinet Is Convened.

Havana, Nov. 21.—Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, U. S. A., who has been sent here to investigate conditions, with a view to the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty between Cuba and the United States, arrived yesterday. Bliss. These conferences will begin as soon as possible.

GRAFT IS UNPROFITABLE.

Two Deputies and a Sheriff Sentenced for Defrauding Government.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 22. — In United States court yesterday afternoon Deputy Marshals Fred Schildler of Rolla and W. J. Hurst of Devils Lake pleaded guilty to indictments for defrauding the government before Judge Amidon. Schildler was sentenced to the United States penitentiary at Sioux Falls, S. D., for five years and Hurst two years. A. A. Taylor, Sheriff of Rolette county, for a similar offense, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $2,500. The men have been inflating accounts of expenses and riding on railroad passes while charging moneys which they never disbursed. Government agents have been following the men for months. Schildler has been in the service for twelve years or more.

GEN. BRAGG AT HOME.

Will Take a Short Rest Before Proceeding to China.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Gen. Edward S. Bragg, the former American consul general in Cuba, arrived in Chicago yesterday from the East, and after a brief rest took a train for Fond du Lac, Wis., his home. He declined to talk on the subject of his experiences and impressions of Cuba, but spoke freely of his plans for the future. "I shall join my family in Fond du Lac," he said, "and shall take a brief rest before I start to Hongkong, China, to assume the post of United States consul general there. I look forward to my new duties with considerable pleasure, and hope to be able to do good work.

ALL IN JAIL NOW.

One After Another of the Burglar Gang Is Put Behind Bars.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 22.—Last August a number of men were arrested, charged with complicity in the burglary of Sullivan's store at Durbin. Two pleaded guilty and a half-dozen were released for lack of evidence. Five of the latter enjoyed their freedom twenty-four hours in Moorhead. Two of them were arrested and jailed for sixty days on the charge of holding up a Casselton man. Three others were given twenty days for begging. The sixth man didn't want to be alone in the world and accumulated a jag which drew him fifteen days in the Fargo jail.

ROSS MUST HANG.

Application for Commutation of Sentence Refused.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 22.—The state board of pardons yesterday refused to commute the sentence of William Ross, sentenced to hang Dec. 5 in Bottineau county. A petition was filed asking for commutation of sentence to imprisonment for life, but it was refused. Pardons were granted to B. M. Johnson and Robert Nunn. Applications of John Van Schravendyk, William Linder, C. W. Hill, John Beck and E. J. Ernest for pardons were refused. The latter three are serving jail sentences for violation of the prohibition law.

REFUSE TELEPHONE ORDERS.

Western Union Loses Suit Through Fraudulent Telephone Message.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Nov. 22. — The Western Union Telegraph company lost a suit in the federal court here that will probably result in instructions being issued to its agents to refuse to accept telegrams by telephone. A Britt, Iowa, bank last spring cashed a draft for $3,872 on telegraphic instructions from the bank at Dennison, Iowa, on which the draft was drawn. It was proved that the telegram was telephoned to the Western Union without the authority of the bank.

Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—Charles A. Grant, a grocer living at 615 Oak street, jumped from the Washington avenue bridge at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. The mattress was formerly owned by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Broecker. Mr. Broecker died about four years ago and his wife is in an insane asylum.

GUN FIGHT AT DANCE.

Free-for-All Scrap Results in Probably Fatal Assault.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 22.—As a result of a dance hall free-for-all fight near Buhl, St. Louis county probably has another murder to its credit. About 2 o'clock yesterday morning a number of men in the dance hall became involved in a fight and James Lula was shot. Meager advices are to the effect that the wounded man will not recover.

STATE LAND SALES.

Remarkable Showing Made in the Pine County Sales.

The recent sale of state lands in Pine county was attended with more than ordinary success, and promises to do much toward the development of a section of the state that has heretofore had too little attention. The time has been very short since a sale such as recently held would have interested but a few people, and it seems surprising to the old timers that an average of about $7 an acre was obtained. The territory was well watered, is amply supplied with good timber, and is accessible to the best markets in the state. A great many of the sales were to residents of the county and to outsiders who intend settling there at an early day. It has done much to stimulate land sales in that district, and the trading has become very lively in Pine county lands in the many land offices of the state. Twenty-four thousand acres were sold, and much more could have been disposed of at equally good prices, but for the fact the limit allowed by the state law was almost reached.

Not Ended Yet.

Panama, Nov. 18.—Reports received here of a concentration of Gen. Herrera's troops in the province of Chiriqui are confirmed. Bad sanitary conditions prevail here and at Colon.

Murder and Suicide.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 18.—James Rose, aged twenty-two, a negro, last night fatally shot his seventeen-year-old wife. He then walked to his father's house, told of the deed and killed himself. He was jealous.

Bad Men Get It.

Portland, Or., Nov. 18.—At Newburg, twenty miles from this city, the station was broken into by robbers and the safe of the Chehalis Valley Milling company, which contained $1,100, was robbed.

STATE DEALS IN FLOWERS.

Receipts From Training School Green Houses.

The sale of flowers from the conservatories at the state training school at Red Wing is one of the most profitable industries pursued at any of the state institutions. The receipts for the year ending July 31, 1902, aggregated $2,684.

The sale of flowers is very small during the summer and early fall, but ranges from $200 to $500 a month during the winter and spring. The flowers are sold at Red Wing and in St. Paul and Minneapolis. The receipts from the sale of flowers during August, September and October, 1901, were $40.25. The receipts during the same months this year were $92.

The statement of receipts of the state institutions filed with the state auditor shows that $14 was received from the sale of flowers at Red Wing during October. The receipts will be increased many fold, however, this month, as the season for the sale of flowers is just beginning. The receipts for November last year were $201.25, and they increased monthly until the highwater mark was reached in April: The December receipts were $250.50; January, $303; February, $234; March, $274; April, $510; May, $368; June $287; July $112.

Flowers are sold from the green houses at the St. Cloud reformatory, but not to so great an extent as from Red Wing. The sales amount to several hundred dollars a year, however, and are more than enough to cover the outlay for the maintenance of the greenhouses.

There are greenhouses at all the state institutions except the Anoka and Hastings insane asylums and the school for the blind at Faribault. The two asylums are comparatively new institutions, and greenhouses will undoubtedly be built there as soon as the funds permit it. The flowers from most of the institutions are used at the institution. The choicest kinds of greenhouse flowers are raised, and a large variety of palms and foliage plants. They are used in decorating the wards and the grounds about the institution. There are extensive greenhouses at the Stillwater penitentiary, and the flowers are used at the institution.

The statement of the miscellaneous receipts of the state institutions show that $9,639.43 was collected during October. The state penitentiary leads with $5,387, principally from the labor of prisoners. The amounts collected by the other institutions are:

RABIES CLAIM MANY VICTIMS.

Two Persons and Scores of Animals Die During the Year.

The veterinary department of the state board of health has compiled, for the biennial report of the board, a statement of the deaths caused by rabies, which have been officially reported to the board during the past year. The record of the department shows that two persons, two horses, twenty-nine dogs, seventy-five cattle and thirty-seven hogs died of rabies during that period. These are the authentic cases which have been reported to the board, and in which investigation showed the deaths are definitely known to have been caused by rabies.

"The loss caused to the farmers of this state by rabies is not appreciated," said Dr. Brimhall of the veterinary department of the state board of health. "Our records probably do not show anywhere near half the deaths caused by rabies. Few cases are reported to us unless several animals have died. When only one animal dies we seldom hear of the case.

"The owners of the animals do not know what caused death and simply let the matter pass. We found one instance in which a milch cow in Minneapolis died of rabies. The case was discovered by chance, and the owner had never suspected that the animal died of rabies until after we had investigated the case.

"The same thing is true to a greater degree of the country. The death of one or two animals is seldom investigated. Not anywhere near the number of dogs that die of rabies are reported, and I am confident that the number of deaths from rabies shown by our records could be doubled and still not be exorbitant.

"Frequently in investigating a case of rabies we hear of other animals in the neighborhood that have died and the circumstantial evidence is convincing that they died of rabies, but the carcasses have been destroyed and there is no way of proving that our suspicions are founded on facts."

NEW IRISH PARTY.

Timothy Healy Will Lead Revolters From O'Brien's Leadership.

London, Nov. 19.—The revolt of the Irish member, Jasper Tulley, from the parliamentary leadership of William O'Brien has led to the formation of a new Irish party under the leadership of Timothy Healy, whose policy is announced as that of common sense and moderation. Only nine members so far have joined the new section, but eighteen others are reported to be ready to adhere to it.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER V. (Continued.)

"Changed me?" he repeated, impetuously. "Yes; I am changed, because I have to work so hard that you may have money. It's for you—all for you. Every day I think I may come to you and say: 'No more hard, scrubbing work for you; you were born to be a lady, and now you have the money to surround yourself with the luxuries of one.' It is for that I am working, Kate. Can't you trust me?"

The eager utterance, the unusual light in her father's eyes alarmed Kate more and more.

"We are poorer than ever, father," she said. "How can I believe in an undertaking that changes you and that makes us lack the necessaries of life? Give it up, whatever it is; it changes you for the worse. I feel that it will never succeed."

Purcell rose and walked hurriedly around the room.

"No, no!" he cried. "Don't ask me that. Wealth is just within my reach, and I must grasp it. We will talk no more on the subject, and you need think no more of it—not until I bring you gold."

His eyes glittered again, but he restrained himself.

"Are you sure you can not bring yourself to think favorably of Burt's suit?" he asked.

"Yes—sure. Don't let us talk of it."

Kate felt weary and discouraged. She knew not which way to turn for comfort, and there was an inextinguishable alarm in her heart concerning her father's condition.

As she looked at him she saw that the transient excitement had died out, and he was standing by the window, absently gazing out, seeing nothing, his eyes full of that intent expression that had become habitual to him of late. And, in truth, he was again engaged in making another calculation as to the spot in which that treasure must have been buried.

His daughter called him to the table, and he ate of the frugal, almost scanty, breakfast.

Kate left him to carry to the stranger a cup of gruel she had made, and when she came down her father had gone out, and the whole care of the sick man devolved upon her.

CHAPTER IV.

Dick's Old Friend.

Richar Burt, when he left Kate Purcell, after his rejection, wandered down to the water's edge, walking along absently in the direction that led away from the fishermen's houses.

His head was bent, his hands clasped behind him, and his whole attitude one of dejection.

He by no means could see his way clearly toward making Kate his wife, but he was very far from giving her up. He was at a standstill. Though he told himself that a woman says no half the time when she means yes, he had an idea that Kate Purcell's no meant no.

A step came crunching along on the sand behind him, and a hand was laid heavily on his shoulder.

He started, angrily, and, with an oath, turned to confront the intruder.

"Dick Burt, down in the mouth, as I live! Burt, regularly hipped, I declare! What the deuce is the row?"

Burt's face showed nothing but surprise, as he looked at the newcomer.

"You here!" he exclaimed.

"Certainly I am here, and so are you, I should say; and confoundedly blue, also, to judge from appearances. What were the wild waves saying to you, Dick?"

The speaker, in spite of a very reckless and dissipated air, and the somewhat worn condition of his clothes, yet had that something about him that we fancy belongs to one that has been born and bred a gentleman. But he was most sadly fallen from his estate.

He was, perhaps, thirty years old, but he might not have been so much, for a fast life had set its ageing marks upon him.

"The wild waves were not saying very pleasant things, Caryl, I must say," said Dick. "But where did you turn up from? That's what I should like to know. I thought you had gone to France, and would never return."

"There never is any certainty about my movements, you know," was the response. "I have been, and I've returned, and I haven't five dollars to bless myself with, which is not the pleasantest state in the world, as you may have known, my friend."

Dick made no reply. He looked his companion over, as though to make sure he spoke the truth, and was evidently satisfied.

"Not the most gorgeous apparel in the world Dick, as you see," remarked Caryl, striking the pebbles with a switch he had cut in his walk.

"So I see," was the somewhat drily-spoken reply. "You generally cut a figure that takes the shine out of me, Caryl, but I can't say I'd change places with you to-day. You must have been more than usually unlucky?"

"Yes—infernally so! But you—they were saying up yonder, where I inquired about you, that you were doing remarkably well. What is it?"

"A little private speculation. I've made a few hundreds."

"I congratulate you. The sea air seems to agree with you. There was also a hint that Dick Burt was wooing and winning a fair bride—the Lady of the Beach. You are in luck, by Jove!"

Dick's face darkened visibly, as he listened to the latter part of Caryl's speech, and he said, angrily:

"The gossips be hanged! Wooing and winning, indeed! It's not every one who woos Kate Purcell who can win her, I'll wager!"

"Kate Purcell!"

The words were uttered in a tone of the utmost astonishment and wonder, and then the two men stood staring at each other for a moment, each with a question muttered in his mind.

"You know her?" at length said Dick, suspiciously.

"I have never seen her," was the prompt answer, spoken with apparent truth. "But, possibly, I've heard of her; still it's very improbable. But the name is certainly the same. Is she Charles Purcell's daughter?"

"Yes."

Dick's wonder and curiosity were getting very strong, but Caryl did not seem likely to gratify them.

He had turned from his companion, and was standing a few yards away, violently striking the sand with his switch, while his face was paler, his eyes filled with a light hard to interpret.

At length Dick became impatient, and approached his friend.

"Aren't you doing a little of the theatricals now, Caryl? What's the muss, anyway? I don't see anything out of the way in Kate Purcell being Charles Purcell's daughter. I hope she's not an old sweetheart of yours."

"I told you I had never seen her," shortly answered Caryl.

"What do you know about her, then?" curiously.

"Never mind now, Dick," resuming his usual manner. "It's nothing that concerns you, be sure of that. Some time, perhaps, I'll tell you. Did you say you were not prospering in your wooing?"

"Decidedly not," grimly.

"And you give it up?"

"No!" fiercely. "Did you ever know me to give anything up? And I never fancied a girl half as much as I do her. I shall have her."

"Pretty?"

"Distractingly so."

"Ah, how interesting! And with the manners of a lady? Is the name they have given her well bestowed?"

She would be a lady in a queen's court—a lady anywhere," was the enthusiastic reply.

"Hard hit, aren't you, my boy? But pardon me, Dick—how came you to select such a girl? Should have said you'd have chosen some red-cheeked lass."

"No matter; I've chosen her, and I mean to get her," was the answer.

"All right. Can I help you any? I want to see these Purcells."

"You'll go and try to flirt with her yourself. You are not to be trusted."

"I can be trusted in that direction," answered Caryl, seriously, "and you'd better retain me in your service—I can tell you that."

Caryl spoke in such a manner that Dick checked the refusal that rose to his lips. He had great respect for Caryl's powers of intrigue when the skillful fellow chose to exert them.

"Do you mean it? Do you think you can help me?" he asked.

Instead of replying directly, Caryl asked:

"How is her father disposed toward you?"

"In favor of me. He has reason to be."

"You are a fool to despair then. Yes, I will help you. You'll have cause to thank me in three months' time."

Then the two men entered into a low-spoken and earnest talk, at the end of which Caryl said:

"And now the beginning of the battle is all arranged, I should be grateful if you could spare me ten dollars for my immediate wants. It's too humiliating not to have more in one's pocket than I have had of late."

Dick rather slowly handed him the money, and Caryl thrust it into his vest pocket, and said, gayly:

"Now for a peep at Kate Purcell! I hope she may be out on the beach."

CHAPTER V.

Kate Makes a New Acquaintance.

When his friend left him, Burt stood for some moments with a perplexed expression upon his face. He did not half like Caryl's coming, though the man had suggested a plan to assist him. He did not wholly believe in the truth of Ralph Caryl's agreements, and he did not precisely want the man to see Kate.

He kicked viciously at the pebbles as he stood reflecting on this new phase of affairs.

"A handsome fellow sick there for the girl to take care of; and now this other one, who always makes love to all the women, and seems to have heard of Kate before. Decidedly, I'm not in luck!"

Thus he thought as he watched the tall and lithe figure of Caryl wending its way across the sands in the direction of Purcell's house.

"However," said Burt, shaking himself, "I believe I'm enough for them all. Dick Burt never did give up beat, and I don't he shall now. I can keep an eye on Caryl—the old man is under my thumb, and that stranger who has a fever—well, he says he's going to be married next week. Perhaps he is, but the fact may not prevent him from flirting with Kate, and he's just the fellow to take a girl's fancy—blast him!"

Having muttered these words, Dick walked rapidly away in the opposite direction from that taken by Caryl.

As for the last-named gentleman, he went on gayly, whistling as he walked. He had struck the right vein in coming here; he could make this thing pay. And to find the Purcell—the thought made him grave again.

But he would reap a good harvest—he had that to tell them for which they ought to pay well; but he would be in no hurry to tell it.

He had a little capital now, and perhaps Kate was really pretty; if she was, it would a great pity for her to go and throw herself away on Dick Burt, who was no match for a lady—and she was one.

Caryl's face was very sober and preoccupied as he went on. Different plans revolved quickly in his mind, and he made no scruple of thinking that he would not hesitate to use Dick Burt as a stepping-stone, if need be, to his purpose.

At the same time shrewd Dick Burt was resolving that no one, least of all Ralph Caryl, should make a tool of him.

Caryl had gone on along the beach beyond the house of the Purcells, not thinking he had reached the place. He had resolved to call there on some pretext or other.

He had come to the base of a huge rock that stretched jaggedly out into the sea, lying couchant there like a monster waiting for its prey. Near the center of it was a chasm rent through the stone, through which at high tide the waves sucked and roared furiously.

It was Gun Rock, near which Dick Burt and Charles Purcell had been digging for treasure the night before.

Caryl paused a moment and glanced around him, wondering where Purcell's house was. Behind him he saw a cluster of little, low, weather-stained dwellings—that must be the place—and he turned to go back.

As he did so he saw a girl springing along the rock. She was dressed with the plainness of poverty, but her form was perfect in its movements of agile grace.

"Jove!" exclaimed Caryl, in a whisper, "is that the kind of fisher maiden they have in these parts? I'll ascend this rock myself, as there's plenty of time to find Purcell afterward."

The next moment he was springing over the rock, intent upon getting a glimpse of the girl's face.

She was hidden from his sight by a projection. As he stopped a moment to look about him his observant eyes noted how picturesque was the curve of rocky shore—how lovely was the range of ledge that rose beyond the pond that lay the other side of the narrow road.

"It's a deuced pretty place," he said, "and I ought to be able, considering affairs, to enjoy myself tolerably well for a few weeks this summer."

He turned again toward the ocean, and saw that the girl had come within sight, and was now standing on the outermost verge of the rock where the incoming tide sent its spray over her.

She was standing perfectly motionless, her gaze directed across the water toward the white shaft of Boston light was shining in the sun.

Caryl resolved to gain a position near her in order that he might scan her more closely, and he sprang along rapidly.

Kate Purcell, for it was she, did not appear to hear his approach. In a moment she stooped to examine some moss on the rock, and as she did so a wilder dash of spray came into her face, blinding her and causing her to lose her balance and slip forward into the water beneath her.

Caryl was not one to hesitate a moment; the next instant he also was in the water, regardless of the rocks, but half concealed by the waves.

Accomplished in all athletic sports, it was but a moment before Ralph Caryl had Kate Purcell upon his arm, and was swimming round the rock for a more convenient landing place on the sands.

Evidently she had struck something in falling, for she hung pallid and lifeless, and Caryl half feared she was dead.

Not until he had gained the shore did he look in her face, and then he was startled by her pallid hue—the inanimate expression that made it seem as if he held some marble statue in his arms.

Hastily he chafed her temples and hands, and he had not long to do so, for she had only been stunned, and she soon opened her eyes, meeting the anxiously earnest gaze of a pair of very handsome blue ones, and seeing a handsome, albeit a somewhat reckless face bent above her.

"You are not hurt? I feared you were injured seriously," he said in the tones of a gentleman—tones that at once reassured the girl.

"I think I am quite recovered now," she made answer, removing herself from him. "It was very careless in me to go so near the edge of the rock. I am very grateful to you."

"The service I have rendered you is very slight, so far as I myself, am concerned," he replied, "still I am going to be so bold as to ask a guerdon."

She looked at him in surprise. What manner of man was this, who talked in such an easy, debonair manner?

"I should be strange indeed, indeed, if I refused your request," she said.

"It is that you tell me your name, and allow me to accompany you home. You must still be weak and dizzy from the blow you have received."

For the second time within twenty-four hours she told her name to an unknown man.

"My name is Kate Purcell; it is entirely unnecessary that you go home with me. I am entirely recovered."

Caryl disguised the astonishment and pleasure her reply gave him. He could not have planned a meeting better for himself than chance had afforded him now. He congratulated himself on the probability that his luck had turned—and high time it did.

He did not betray the surprise he felt as he heard her name; he only said, with a kind of pleading in his tone:

"Ralph Caryl begs that you will allow him to walk across the sands with you; it is a guerdon, remember."

"In that case," she replied, with a smile, "I cannot refuse Mr. Caryl. And we must not linger in our wet clothes, although salt water is said to be so harmless."

She moved onward in the direction of the clump of houses he had noticed, and he sauntered along by her side, chatting gaily where almost any other man would have been obliged to be silent because he could think of nothing to say.

Caryl's manner was very respectful, with just a decided tinge of admiration in it—very sincere admiration it was, too.

At the door he took off his hat as he said:

"I beg you will allow me to call to-night and inquire if your involuntary bath has done you any harm. I am selfish enough not to be sorry that I have met you—even thus—if you receive no injury from your fall."

Certainly this Ralph Caryl was a very pleasant fellow. What could Kate do but give consent? She added:

"Both my father and myself are very busy now; a gentleman is ill here, and we have little time to spare from our cares. I had gone out for a breath of air when I met with the accident."

"Evidently she expects me to make my visit very short," he thought, and said aloud: "I will not intrude upon you long," and bowed and departed.

On his way to his lodging house for a change of clothing, he again met Dick Burt, who shouted to him to know why in the world he had gone into the water in that suit.

Nothing loth to stop, Caryl paused in his walk until Burt joined him, and then said:

"I went in to pick a woman out."

Something of triumph in his tone made Burt ask, quickly:

"What woman?"

"Kate Purcell."

"You did?"

"Certainly. Why not? You would not have me stand by like a brute and see her drown, would you?"

"Are you telling me the truth, Caryl?"

"If I never told it in my life, I am telling it now. She fell off that ugly rock yonder, and I picked her up and walked home with her, and, what is more, I am going to call upon her to-night. Will you go with me?"

"Thank you, no," with a vicious look in his eyes.

"Then I must go alone."

Burt caught Caryl by the arm with an unpleasantly tight grip, when he said, with low emphasis:

"Now, see here, Ralph Caryl, mind you, don't play any game with me! You know I can stop it any minute, and I will, too, if you try it! You are not going to try to flirt with Kate Purcell, you know that."

"Never know anything better," was the apparently careless answer. "Burt, you are the most suspicious biped that walks. You are too absurd to talk with. The veriest boor would have gone into the water after Miss Purcell as I did. Pshaw! Haven't I told you, you should have my help?"

Burt looked closely at his friend, the doubt he felt visible in his face.

"You are a slippery one," he said, at last, "but you have had your warning. You'll repent it to the last day of your life if you try on any treachery with me!"

"Thanks for your kind, thoughtfulness!" was the airy response. "And now I believe due attention to my health requires that I change my clothes, and as, unfortunately, my wardrobe is very scantily furnished at present, I shall have to keep dark until these things are dry. I must run up to Boston and get a new suit to-morrow. Which reminds me—if you could increase your loan of this morning to fifty, I should be greatly obliged."

Burt stared sullenly a moment before he replied.

"No, sir. I need the fifty as much as you do."

"Very well," easily "just as you please; only don't forget, my dear Dick, that I have it in my power to sell a strange story, of some of your doings to Miss PPurcell—a tale that would not advance you in her eyes."

"As for that, quickly replied Burt, "if you have come here to tell tales of me, why, I can do the same of you."

Caryl laughed.

"Very true," he said, "but, then, what do I care? I am not courting a fair lady; I am fancy free, and can flit from here at any moment. Be a good fellow, now, and hand over the cash."

Burt looked as if he would like to knock the speaker down, but he thrust his hand into his pocket and counted out the money, saying:

"You have the trumps in your hand this time, but next time I'll hold the winning hand."

"Thanks! I thought you would come to your senses," said Caryl, and he walked away.

CHAPTER VI.

Rothesay Recognizes a Voice.

Ralph Caryl did not present himself at Charles Purcell's house until he had been to Boston and spent Richard Burt's money in the purchase of the best clothes he could get for the sum.

"It will do her no harm to allow her to expect me a little, providing she hasn't forgotten me entirely, and that depends wholly on the amount of interest that unknown stranger has awakened. When I have seen him with her, I shall know my ground."

Thus Caryl thought as he stood on board the steamer from Boston the next day.

Meanwhile, within Purcell's humble home, in the little chamber under the roof, the stranger was fighting the battle with the fever. It was not a fierce and raging illness, but one that bade fair to continue for some time.

"He is booked for it now," said the doctor, "but the fever will not run very high. Miss Purcell, I must get some good woman to come as nurse. You can't take charge of the patient and of the house also. I will send some one to-morrow."

Thus the quiet of the little house woman came to take the place of nurse, and now Purcell, whose mind had been occupied with other things, again reverted to the topic which absorbed him most, and Kate knew it instantly by the look on his face; but she dared not say anything more to him about it. She must wait.

Dick Burt, after pondering upon his course of action. He could not afford to go away and leave Kate Purcell. Had she been there alone, as she had been accustomed to being, he should have left the place for awhile. But circumstances were different now.

After a few days, having watched his opportunity, when he saw Kate going out with her basket to pick up driftwood, he joined her, and he hastened to reassure her, and he acted his part well.

"Let's us be friends again," he said. "I've been very unhappy since our last talk together. Of course I can't promise not to love you, but the dream that was so dear to me is over. All I expect now is to have matters as they were before. I can promise not to annoy you again."

He was so humble and seemed so sincere that Kate looked at him in surprise. He met her gaze with apparent frankness. Though she distrusted him, she reproached herself for doing so, and that very self-reproach made her more cordial.

"Say we may be friends again, and that you will not fear that I shall speak of my love," he repeated.

"Certainly we can be friendly," she returned, holding out her hand, which he took and dropped directly. "I am glad you have come to such conclusion. You will find some one whom you will love much better, and you will laugh at the thought you could ever have spoken such words to me."

"We will say nothing of that," he responded, quickly. "So its all right now, is it? And you are not going to be afraid of me?"

She shook her head smilingly, and he began helping her gather driftwood, congratulating himself on the fact that he could now watch her closely and know Caryl's game, as well as the way in which that sick man would behave when getting well. Yes, he had made a good move, he thought.

It had happened that Purcell did not know of his daughter's misadventure on the rocks, and when Ralph Caryl appeared on the evening of the second day, he was at a loss to know to know why the young man had come.

Kate hastened to explain, and Caryl assisted her in his easy way. But he did not mention his name, and Kate said, apologetically:

"I am ashamed to have forgotten the gentleman's name."

Caryl was inwardly chagrined at this, but did not betray that feeling as he said: My name is Ralph Caryl," looking sharply at her father, "and I am very glad to make your acquaintance."

Kate looked at her father in amazement as he heard those words. He started back, staring hard at the guest.

"Ralph Caryl!" he exclaimed. "You are not one of the Caryls of Carylville? That is impossible!"

"No, not impossible," was the answer, "since I am one of that family—the last member in the direct line. I am happy to know that my name is not unfamiliar to you, and proud to think it is an honorable one."

He did not choose to say how he had disgraced his honorable name.

"Yes, yes," half murmured Purcell, "it is an honorable name."

Then he roused himself to say:

"It's very strange, when one comes to know what a wandering life I have led," said Caryl, with an intonation of sadness.

"Do you not, then, inherit the Caryl property?" asked Purcell.

Ralph did not give a direct answer. He said:

How Ermine Are Captured.

Perfect fur, of the delicate ermine, at least, would be marred by the ordinary snare, so the trapper devises a cunning a death for the ermine as the ermine devices when it darts up through the snow with its spear-teeth clutched in the throat of a poor rabbit. Smearing his hunting knife with grease, he lays it across the track. The little ermine comes trotting in dots and dashes and gallops and dives to the knife. That greasy smell of meat it knows, but that frost-silvered bit of steel is something new. The knife is frosted with ice. Ice the ermine has licked, so he licks the knife. But alas for the resemblance between knife and steel! Ice turns to water under the warm tongue; steel turns to fire that blisters and holds that foolish little stoat by his inquisitive tongue, a hopeless prisoner until the trapper comes. And, lest marauding wolverine or lynx should come first and gobble up the priceless ermine, the trapper comes soon. And that is the end of the ermine.—Agnes C. Laut, in Leslie's Monthly.

His Fond Hopes Blighted.

"Dearest! Say 'yes.'"

She hung her head and was silent.

"Say 'yes,'" he entreated.

The maiden raised a cold, determined face and looked him squarely in the eye.

"Percival, I cannot."

"But why?" he persisted. "Surely, you do not hate me?"

"Hate you?" her voice broke as she spoke. "Hate you? I love you more than words can tell. But—but—er—"

"But what?" he demanded, almost fiercely.

"Percival, do not pain me by asking me again. Do not cast temptation in my path. Once for all, I cannot. Your station is too far above mine."

At Fourteenth street she arose and left the car, while he, crestfallen and heartsick, continued on to One Hundred and Forty-fifth street.—New York Sun.

A Parthian Shot.

Mr. Beasley J. Robertson was for long editor of the Battleaxe. He always strove for accuracy, and when he did make a mistake he was not above acknowledging it, as witness the following, which he one week printed:

"We deem a word of explanation due our readers with regard to an item which appeared in the last Battleaxe, in which we stated that Mr. Henry R. Brown of Long Prairie township had been brought before Justice of the Peace James Hargrave and bound over for stealing chickens and resisting an officer. It appears that Hargrave was the man guilty of the crimes, and Mr. Brown was the official before whom he was arraigned. Mr. Brown has not stolen any chickens yet."—Harper's Weekly.

A Hair in the Head.

"What's the matter with your hair?" asked Oliver Herford of a friend who had suddenly grown bald. "It seems to be leaving you."

"I'd give anything I own to get it back," said the friend.

"I've always noticed," returned Herford, "that a hair in the head is worth two in the brush."—New York Times.

SOME CALLED TOWER A DUDE.

American Ambassador Had a Duluth Reputation as a Dandy.

The announcement of Charlemagne Tower's new diplomatic position at Berlin has recalled to many Duluth persons his five years' residence in this city in the capacity of president of the Duluth & Iron Mountain road. He was much admired and respected, but was considered rather distant, despite the fact that he was really quite approachable. A Duluth man who knows Mr. Tower quite intimately says:

"Charlemagne Tower was at once the most expensively and at the same time the worst dressed man in Duluth. This is accounted for from the fact that he had his clothes made in London. In the early 80s, when Mr. Tower was here there not as many fashionably dressed men here as now, and I must confess that a large number considered him a dude. He was nothing of the sort. He was an aristocrat and that was all there was to it, and he was a gentleman every inch of the way. Mr. Tower doubtless felt the responsibilities of the great wealth of the Tower family, and as president of the Iron Range road and a member of the executive committee of the Minnesota Iron company.

"The only time that Mr. Tower ever showed the white feather was when the mosquitoes got after him. I recall that when he made his first trip to the present site of Tower he was accompanied by William Bassett, now a member of the soldiers' home at Old Point Comfort, and John Mallman, explorers. The trip up over the trail had been difficult and tiresome, but Mr. Tower stood it like a veteran and found no fault with anything. Bassett and Mallman had voted him a trump. But he fell a few notches in their estimation the first night in camp. Just as Bassett and Mallman had fallen asleep Mr. Tower called out:

"'Mr. Bassett, Mr. Bassett, there's a mosquito in the tent.'

"'Is that so,' growled Mr. Bassett. 'Well, get an ax and kill it.'"—Duluth Tribune.

PICKED MONEY FROM BUSHES.

Fairy Tale Was Real to Gang of Section Men.

The fairy tale of money growing on bushes was realized this week along the right of way of the Burlington railroad, between Hyannis and Alliance.

A gang of section men were at work, when one of them noticed something that looked like a bill waving from the tangled top of a sunflower growing by the roadside. He investigated. It was a treasury note for $10.

He walked a few steps farther and there, nodding from a branch of a bit of dog fennel, was another bill of similar denomination.

He called to his companions, and the entire gang threw down their tools and started on a money hunt. For three hours they searched up and down the right of way and far afield.

The entire day's clean-up of the eight was $2,135. When the find was reported, word came from headquarters that a money pouch containing $3,500 had been lost from an express shipment the day before.

The supposition is that the bag fell out of the open car door and was ground to pieces under the wheels, and the contents were scattered to the winds. This hypothesis is supported by the later discovery of portions of the damaged pouch.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Mother.

She will remember when they forget—
I knew it so in the hour I died;
The oil was touched and the candles set,
And the woman I worshiped sobbed beside;
And the friend I loved and had deified
Hid his face where the tears were wet.

And the mother who bore me spake no word,
But the break of her heart was the last I heard.

Oh, life was good in the world I know—
Shall I be sad that they find it such?
My friend hath gained him a friend as true—
The wife of me thrills to a new hand's touch;
(Oh, but the dead forgive so much!)
Tears are forgotten and grief is through.

And the mother who bore me—only she Hides her face on the grave of me.
—Theodosia Garrison.

Luxuries of Prosperity.

Almost no traveler from a foreign land comes here who does not express astonishment at our luxury. It is, at least, in certain sections of the country the most obvious feature of our civilization. Gorgeous apparel, homes that are palaces, feasts that are frequently marked by such splendor as almost to stagger the imagination, superb equipages and a riotousness in entertainments and amusements that we have to go back centuries to find precedents for—with all these things we are painfully familiar. They have become so much a matter of course as no longer to excite much comment.—Indianapolis News.

"Converted."

The late Elizabeth Cady Stanton was conversing with a minister who said:

"I object to the new fashion of changing names. There is no excuse for it."

Mrs. Stanton looked at his rotund figure meditatively.

"Suppose," she said, "your parents had been of the Puritan stripe and had named you 'Praise God Barebones?'"

"Think I would have changed," he replied. "You have converted me."

"Glad of it," said Mrs. Stanton.

THANKED IN BEHALF OF COLOMBIA FOR HIS GENEROUS INTERVENTION.

REBELS ARE GLAD IT IS OVER

THEY NOW HOPE FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A TRUE REPUBLIC.

Panama, Nov. 26. — The Star and Herald says that at the conference on board the Wisconsin a distinguished son of Uncle Sam, Rear Admiral Silas Casey, acted as a mediator and peacemaker, which conduct, it remarks, reflects great credit on a nation whose motives for doing good are too frequently disparaged. Admiral Casey, in a brilliant speech, extended to the negotiators his heartfelt good wishes, highly praising them for their judgment and patriotism and their arrangement of such an extremely delicate matter. Gen. Cobas, chief minister of state on Perdomo's staff, who spoke in good English, made an eloquent reply to the speech, and in the name of Colombia thanked the gallant admiral for the hospitality and attention the negotiators had received on board his flagship, also for his generous intervention in the arrangement to bring about peace in that zone of Colombian territory. It is said that the impassioned, patriotic utterances of Gen. Cobas brought

ORE DOCK IN RUINS

FATAL CONFLAGRATION ON THE LAKE FRONT AT ASHLAND.

THREE PERSONS ARE KILLED

WISCONSIN CENTRAL DOCK IS BURNED, CAUSING LOSS OF HALF A MILLION.

FIREMEN MAKE A HARD EIGHT

DOCK SUDDENLY COLLAPSES, CARRYING DOWN A NUMBER OF MEN.

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 25. — The Wisconsin Central ore dock was completely destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. The loss is about $525,000.

Three lives were lost, one person fatally and several more or less seriously injured.

The fire caught about 5 o'clock, presumably from a boat unloading lumber across the slip, and before the firemen arrived the entire ore dock, half a mile in length, was in flames. An engine was run into the tramway as near the fire as it could get, and a half-hundred men began tearing apart the timbers connecting the tramway and the dock to keep it from falling with the dock. Suddenly the dock fell with a crash, carrying with it 200 feet of the tramway. The engine from falling. Several hundred people were under the tram, and most of them escaped with slight injury. As the burning dock and tramway fell fully a dozen men were seen to go down in the ruins.

Had a Narrow Escape

When the fire was discovered the crews on the dock were just getting ready to quit work. Seeing flames the workmen rushed for land, but many were cut off and jumped into the bay, a distance of sixty feet. Twenty men who sought refuge on an outer end of the dock were scorched by the flames, but passing vessels succeeded in having a tug come to their aid just in time to save them.

The blaze was first seen in the center of the dock and spread rapidly both ways. Before ten minutes the entire dock was enveloped in flames. Fed by the seasoned and oily timbers and framework of the dock, they attracting thousands of people to the bay shore. All the fire departments were called into service, but to no avail. Business and professional men turned firemen. About one hundred climbed into the approach to the dock and with streams of water attempted to keep the flames confined to the portion of the dock over the water. After the fire had been going fifteen minutes the outer part of the dock fell, carrying with it the approach on which the men were fighting. With little or no warning the approach was dragged down, and with it the firefighters, most of whom were buried.

About ten men fighting fire with streams under the approach were pinned in, and for a time it was thought all were crushed. When the approach fell fully 7,000 people were lined up on the bay front and witnessed the awful scene.

BLOCKADE OF ORINOCO RIVER

CAUSES TROUBLE AMONG REPRESENTATIVES OF FOREIGN POWERS.

Willemstad, Curacao, Nov. 22.—The strain in the relations between Great Britain and Venezuela, already great, has been intensified by the refusal of the British government to give satisfaction in the Ban Righ affair, and by the publication by the government of Trinidad of the decree announcing that the blockade of the Orinoco river ports, declared by the Venezuelan government, is null and of no effect. The Trinidad government has also failed to recognize the presidential proclamation made the day following the flight of Gen. Matos, and President Castro regards this omission as further evidence that the British are encouraging the revolution. Mr. Haggard, the British minister at Caracas, reiterated a few days ago to the Venezuelan government that Great Britain did not hold herself liable for the action of the Ban Righ, that she continues perfectly neutral and that as an indication of her conciliatory attitude she refused to permit the Ban righ to refit at Trinidad. This statement is not acceptable to President Castro, who insists on having satisfaction.

The organ of the Venezuelan government publishes the decree of the Trinidad government and bitterly attacks Great Britain on that score.

Minister Bowen Refuses.

Caracas, Nov. 21—An effort is being made by the European diplomats to persuade the American minister, Mr. Bowen, to join in a declaration that the blockade of the Orinoco river is ineffective, which is the position taken up by Germany, France and Italy, as well as Great Britain. Mr. Bowen has given a discreet refusal and is avoiding the question with a view not to jeopardize American interests and to leave the hands of the Washington government free. Secretary of Legation W. W. Russell, in his report on the recent trip of the United States gunboat Marietta up the Orinoco, holds that the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar is effective, which is a partial support of the Venezuelan contention.

The strong stand taken by President Castro is based on a confidence that Great Britain will not invite complications with the United States by having to resort to force. The belief is entertained by shrewd and impartial diplomats that the ultimate object of Great Britain's action in making the issue a serious one is to bring about arbitration on all questions under dispute.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED.

Loss of Life and Damage to Property Not So Great in Guatemala.

Washington, Nov. 22. — Mr. A. E. Lazo Arriga, the minister from Guatemala to the United States, has just received from his government letters and telegrams stating that the reports published in this country about the loss of life and property caused by the eruption of the Santa Maria volcano, are exaggerated. While it is true that part of the present coffee crop is lost, the dispatches say it is generally expected that most of the plantations of the affected districts will recuperate. The loss of life was very small and the president of the republic from the first moment adopted the most energetic measures of relief which the dispatches say avoided considerable suffering and preserved peace and order in the affected region.

HIDES IN LEGATION

SON OF UNITED STATES MINISTER TO GUATEMALA COMMITS MURDER.

PUZZLES FOR THE DIPLOMATS

QUESTION ARISES AS TO HIS RIGHT OF EXEMPTION FROM ARREST.

KILLING SAID TO BE PROVOKED

POSSIBLE REASONS GIVEN THAT MAY HAVE CAUSED THE TRAGEDY.

Washington, Nov. 24. — The state department has been informed that Godfrey Hunter, Jr., son of the United States minister at Guatemala City, yesterday shot and killed William Fitzgerald of Grand Rapids, Mich. Hunter has taken refuge in the legation and an interesting question has arisen as to his exemption from arrest.

An important fact developed was that young Hunter was accompanied at the time of the shooting by the secretary of legation, James G. Bailey of Kentucky, who went to his post in June, 1901. The cablegram also, rather by suggestion than by direct statement, gave ground for an inference that the killing was provoked. Important details are lacking in the report of the affair, and the officials are in doubt as to what should be done. They have no notion of surrendering without protest an American citizen to the local courts of Guatemala, unless satisfied that the man is a proper subject for punishment. Even then it is not at all certain that the department itself has the right to waive any legal exemption that the man might have.

Possible Grounds for Enmity.

Not much is known here of the personality of Godfrey Hunter, Jr., and it is impossible to learn definitely whether or not he was actually connected officially with the United states legation at Guatemala City at the time of the killing. That he had been a clerk or typewriter in the legation is established. He was certainly a member of the minister's family, and that fact might be regarded as sufficient to base a claim of exemption.

It is suggested here that the shooting affray may have been the result of the recent relief of Dr. Hunter from his post as minister. The doctor has been steadily embroiled with members of the American colony almost since he assumed office in 1897, and lately, owing to his connection with a government railroad and other matters not supposed to be proper for a minister to meddle with, the pressure became so acute that the department was obliged to relieve him from office. It may be that Fitzgerald was connected in some way with the charges against the minister.

May Explain It.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 22. — William Fitzgerald, whom Clifford Hunter, Jr., killed in Guatemala, made charges about a year ago against Dr. Hunter. He criticised sharply the way in which Dr. Hunter conducted his office, and made some serious reflections on the minister. Fitzgerald, while on a trip to this country, gave out an interview at New Orleans in which he censured Dr. Hunter and young Godfrey severely. He announced that he would prefer charges against Dr. Hunter at Washington, but the mater was never taken up by the state department.

New York, Nov. 25. — William S. Vanderbilt Allen, great grandson of Commodore Vanderbilt, society man, artist and formerly well known here and at Newport, and who disappeared rather mysteriously six years ago, has been during that time an inmate of a private sanitarium in Connecticut. His whereabouts became known when he was brought to New Rochelle for examination before a commission as to his sanity. The action was brought by E. H. Sutton of Bloomfield, N. J., who is related to Allen, and who says that Allen suffered from hallucinations that he was being pursued by creditors, and asked that he be legally committed to an asylum, no such step having previously been taken. Allen then addressed the commission in carefully chosen language. He was utterly in the dark, he said, as to why the proceedings had been brought, and he asked for counsel. He was kidnapped six years ago, he declared, by two doctors. The commission decided that Allen should have a full examination with counsel, and set the hearing for Dec. 3.

FIX IT UP QUICKLY

MINEWORKERS AND MINE OWNERS AGREE TO ADJUST DIFFERENCES.

MOVE CAUSES BIG SENSATION

ARBITRATORS WILL NOW ACT AS A SORT OF BOARD OF CONCILIATION.

AGREE ON BASIS OF NEGOTIATION

BOTH SIDES SAW THAT PRESENT PROCEEDINGS WOULD BE INTERMINABLE.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 24.—The mineworkers, through their representatives, have agreed with the mine owners to adjust the differences existing between them outside the anthracite coal strike commission. The proposition was made on a compromise basis, and negotiations, it is expected, will be at once begun, with a reasonable hope of settlement with the aid of the arbitrators. The rough proposition which is to form the basis of negotiations, is a 10 per cent increase in wages, a nine-hour day, and trade agreements between the miners and the company by whom they are employed. The only one of the four demands not touched upon is that of the weighing of coal by the legal ton. While both sides have expressed the willingness to settle their differences among themselves, it is not to be construed that it carries with it the acceptance of the terms proposed. They are mentioned only as a basis, it is understood, from which a settlement is to be effected. It is possible that the foundation already laid can be holding out too strongly against some question and thus leave the whole matter in the hands of the commissioners, who, in the meantime, will act as a sort of a board of conciliation, rather than as a board of arbitration.

Few persons were aware that an attempt would be made at an outside settlement until it was practically so intimated by Judge Gray, the chairman of the commission, who read a carefully prepared announcement from the "bench." The move, one of the most important in the whole history of the coal strike, created a mild sensation when it became known. It is said it was all brought about by both sides seeing that the proceedings before the commission would be interminable, and that in the intermingling of the lawyers for both sides the outside agreement proposition was broached and taken up. It cannot be officially stated which party made the proposition first. Wayne MacVeagh, who carried on such a brilliant cross-examination of President Mitchell,

Is Given Credit

for bringing about the present situation. He went to New York after he finished with Mr. Mitchell and had a conference with certain persons connected with the coal industry, among them, it is reported, J. P. Morgan. He was in New York yesterday in connection with the matter.

The commissioners were informed of the new turn of affairs Thursday night and acquiesced in the proposed arrangement.

It was learned last night by the correspondent of the Associated Press that all the large companies have not yet assented to the proposed outside agreement, but that in all probability they will consent and continue to work as a unit as they did during the strike.

There is a wide difference of opinion as to whether the proposal to settle differences among themselves will meet with success. As a general proposition, it is believed by lawyers that it will succeed, but that some of the controversial points will have to go before the arbitrators.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 25.—Canada is to have a second transcontinental railway extending from ocean to ocean. The announcement was made yesterday by Charles Hayes, second vice president and general manager of the Grand Trunk railway. The construction work will be begun as soon as the necessary legislation can be obtained from the parliament. The Grand Trunk will be behind the new road and will operate it, but as in the case of Grand Trunk lines west of the Detroit river, it will be constructed under a separate corporation name—the Grand Trunk-Pacific Railway company. The new line, according to Mr. Hayes' statement, will have a mileage of about 3,000 miles, and the construction, including equipment, stations, bridges, ships and other facilities, will involve an expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. According to the present arrangement the new system will run through that part of Northern Ontario known as New Ontario, starting from North Bay or Gravenhurst on the east, and extending through Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia to Butte Inlet or Port Simpson, B. C., as later may be determined.

KRUPP, GUNMAKER, DEAD.

Wealthiest Man in Germany Passes Away Suddenly.

Berlin, Nov. 25. — Frederick Alfred Krupp, the great gunmaker and the richest man in Germany, died of apoplexy at his villa at Huegel. He was forty-six years old. His annual income, it is said, was over $5,000,000. Frederick Alfred Krupp succeeded his father, Alfred Krupp, as head of the family and the great industry at Essen, Germany. The Krupp family is credited with having more of the virtues of peace, more sympathy with its employes, and greater regard for the simple kindnesses of life than any other that has grown powerful through a great industry. Herr Krupp was the largest employer of labor in the world. Twenty-five thousand men worked for him and each one was his friend. The great profits of the business brought comforts not alone to the owner. The laborers dwell in "model houses." Schools, baths, libraries, hospitals, and a pension system made them contented and valuable citizens of the empire.

Palming faith healing and crystal gazing have given way for the moment to the vibrationists, whose parlors are crowded with fashionable people.

ROBBERS ARE BOLD

STEAL A UNITED STATES MAIL WAGON AND CARRY OFF THE MAIL.

SECURE ABOUT $13,000 IN CASH

THEFT WITNESSED BY MANY PERSONS WHO WERE UNABLE TO PREVENT IT.

STOCK BROKERS WILL SUEFER

BONDS, STOCKS AND SIMILAR SECURITIES ARE TAKEN BY THE ROBBERS.

Chicago, Nov. 25. — An organized band of thieves Saturday night stole a United States mail wagon containing registered mail valued at $10,000 and the day's receipts from two postal stations. The robbery took place in Randolph street, at the south entrance to the Masonic temple.

Although the theft of the wagon was seen by persons in the passing crowd and by James Goss, the driver of another mail wagon, the thief mounted the stolen wagon, whipped up the horses and, turning into the alley back of the Masonic temple, he drove the wagon at breakneck speed north through the alley to Lake street, thence across the Rush street bridge, finally stopping in the darkness among the railroad tracks in front of the Kirk soap factory on Kinzie street. At this point the man who stole the wagon was joined by confederates, who, with an iron bar, twisted off the hasp which held the lock securing the iron door of the wagon.

The thieves quickly removed two large pouches of registered mail which a few minutes before had been collected from the postal stations in the stock exchange and Crilly buildings.

Heavy Loss to Many.

The robbery will cause certain New York stock brokers considerable inconvenience, as one of the stolen pouches contained several packages of stocks, bonds and similar securities, which it was intended should reach New York in time to be used when the stock exchange opened Monday morning. One man, a member of the Chicago stock exchange, whose name is not made public by the postoffice authorities, is said to have mailed a paper of the face value of $100,000, which was in one of the missing sacks. This paper was not negotiable, but its loss may cause a great amount of annoyance, as the brokers affected probably will have to furnish a bond to cover the temporary loss of the security.

As near as can be estimated by the postoffice officials the robbers secured between $12,000 and $13,000 in cash, certified checks and other negotiable paper. Of this amount $2,000 belonged to the postoffice, the receipts of one of the substations during the day. No trace of the robbers has yet been found.

MADE GOOD THEIR ESCAPE.

No Trace Can Be Found of Rock Island Robers.

Davenport, Iowa, Nov. 25.—It looks as though the Rock Island express robbers who successfully blew open the safe of the train they held up just outside the city Saturday morning had made good their escape. A sensation was created by the report that the bandits had been surrounded by a posse in a corn field near Buchanan. A sheriff's party was hurriedly made up and started for Buchanan. Word was received that the men had been captured before the train arrived, but the prisoners proved to be a gang of hoboes and not the men wanted. The amount of booty the robbers got is variously estimated at from $1,000 to $20,000.

After collecting a large fund the project was abandoned.

NEW PROMISED LAND.

Canadian Officials Making Arrangements for Disposal of Expected American Settlers.

Toronto, Nov. 22—Canadian officials in charge of crown lands and colonization in Ontario will decide in a day or two upon just what provisions are to be made for the American colonists from the Middle West. In a general way it has been agreed upon that the American settlers shall have two million acres of land, but the details of the contract are yet to be worked out. With the beginning of spring the American company expects to have colonists started for Ontario. These pioneers of the movement can have little choice of lands. There are three sections of the country in which they may go. If they come from the states of the Middle West they will be directed into the southern portions of the Rainy river and Thunder bay districts. If they come from the New England States, as it is expected many of them will, they will go to the southern part of the district of Nipissing. In the latter district partial surveys have been made and townships marked out. A partial settlement has been made by French Canadians from the province of Quebec. Until railroads are built these are the only parts of "New Ontario" which are open for settlement. The tracks are being laid to the further countries of the North where the real colonization is expected to take place. With the entrance to the country thus opened the new agricultural district will be ready to receive its settlers. At present this land is known only to the trappers, the Indians and the fur-bearing animals they hunt. The Hudson Bay company has its scattered posts through the pine forests, but aside from this human habitation is unknown.

WILD SCENE IN COMMONS.

Members of British Parliament Indulge in Scrimmage.

London, Nov. 22.—The completion of the stage of the education bill in the house of commons last night was the occasion of a curious scene. On what was thought to be the final division being taken, a knot of members came racing into the house in order to be the first to hand in amendments for the report stage of the bill, the foremost being Lord Hugh Cecil and Sir Charles Dilke. Hats rolled on the floor and one member fell down in the scrimmage. It then appeared that there was still another division to be taken, when the same scene was repeated, Sir Charles Dilke, an old athlete, beating many of the younger men in the race. The clerks at the table were almost overwhelmed by the mass of amendment papers, which will afford Premier Balfour a fine opportunity for the "guillotine" process.

RESCUED THE KAISER.

The Emperor's Horses Become Unmanageable.

Edinburg, Scotland, Nov. 22.—Emperor William, on his way to embark on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, lying in the Firth of Forth, arrived at Dalmeny yesterday afternoon and was met by Lord Rosebery. As his majesty's carriage was leaving the station the horses attached to it became frightened at the swaying of the colors of the detachment of the black watch, forming the guard of honor, and shied. The postillions lost control of the horses, which got mixed up in the crowd. An accident was averted only by the alertness of Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter, who seized the horses' heads and managed to control them. After lunch the emperor boarded the Hohenzollern and sailed for Kiel.

DRANK BLOOD TO LIVE.

Horrible Tale of Cannibalism by the Survivors of a Shipwreck.

London, Nov. 22. — A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Wellington, N. Z., says that the survivors of the wrecked steamer Elingamite admit that they prolonged their lives on the raft on which they escaped by mutual blood sucking through incisions in the skin, in most instances by consent, but those who refused to submit were tapped while they were asleep. It is alleged that the death of the stewardess of the steamer, who was conspicuously heroic in rescuing passengers from the wreck, was due to loss of blood. The story has horrified the public. The action of the survivors is regarded as inexcusable, as they were adrift only four days and a half.

CREW IN IRONS.

Ship Captured by Dewey Experiences a Mutiny.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The Isla de Luzon, one of the Spanish gunboats captured at Manila by Admiral Dewey, is en route to New York with forty-eight of her men in irons. The vessel, which has been doing guard duty in the Philippines for about three years, started recently for New York, proceeding from Manila to Singapore. Advices received at the war department indicate that on the trip to Singapore some of the machinery on the boat shifted badly, creating a panic among the crew and causing a substantial mutiny. The result was the placing of forty-eight of her crew in irons. After her capture the Luzon was repaired at Hongkong, and it is said that the repairs were not properly made.

Carnegie Better.

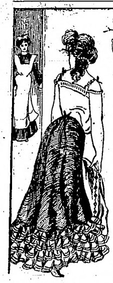
London, Nov. 22. — Andrew Carnegie, who is ill at Langham hotel, continues to improve.

Carrie Nation Roasts Society.

New York, Nov. 22. — Mrs. Carrie Nation created a sensation at the [illegible] gathering on the evils of overdress, attempted to break a bottle of champagne, and finally was ejected by the police.

The war department has been advised by Gen. Davis, commanding the division of the Philippine island, of the death of Maj. Robert P. P. Wainwright, Fifth cavalry, at Manila, Nov. 19, of cardiac embolism.

From Tip to Toe



To be truly artistic a thing must be natural and harmonious, to be harmonious it must be evolved with due attention to details. It is more essential to us if we would be truly fashionable to sit down and consider the oneness of every creation and to plan for it with absolute concentration than it is to fill our minds with endless stores of knowledge regarding the latest kind of embroidery, how to put circular frills on the newest thing in skirts, or whether hats are made with high crowns or low.

If a young lady should say that she intended to dress for the street, and at the same time she made the remark you saw her arrayed in delicate and flimsy lingerie, thin and brilliantly colored hose and the like, with a dainty dressing sack thrown over all, what would you expect her to do—go out and put on a tailor-made walking suit and walking shoes over all this flimsy underwear? Of course you would not expect her to do this, and of course she would not do it. On the face of it, it seems hardy worth bringing up as a point, and yet there is often as great incongruity in less conspicuous directions in what is considered a toilet. To be dressed for an occasion is to be dressed therefor from tip to toe, and some time has been spent during the past few days in finding out suitable ways in which one may dress for the street.

The young lady in question is in medium circumstances and the garments described neither extremely rich nor very plain. The first is a knit merino combination suit and black cashmere hose with panels of dark blue in diamond shapes across the instep. According to the most approved authority on hygienic as well as artistic dressing she will be very careful not to draw the garters, which are attached to the front of the corset, too tightly. The side supporters she will wear, as is customery, and the hygienic enthusiast will probably have nothing to say.

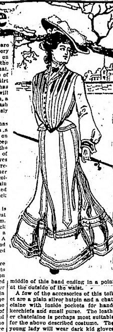
Next in order will be either a knitted corset cover and knitted short skirt or a muslin corset cover, preferably cut off at the waist, and a short skirt or muslin or light flannel, as taste or weather dictate.

Next she will put on the long petticoat, which, if it is silk will require frequent cleaning, or if it is desired that it should be washable it may be of pongee. The shoes will be medium weight walking shoes.

Next in order is the walking skirt, made of Scotch tweed, with seams strapped with black braid and a narrow circular flounce around the bottom, having three flat tucks at the bottom and three of the same heading the flounce. The straps on the seams are graduated, being long in front and very short in the back. Before putting on the shirt waist of white vesting the lady in question will adjust her hat, thus avoiding unnecessary wrinkles of the sleeves or pulling of the shirt waist out of the belt, where it has been carefully arranged. The hat will be a beaver felt, with plateau crown, a tilting slightly to the left, with a sash in contrasting color thrown carelessly across the top.

The shirt waist is of vesting, as has been mentioned, and is made with a wide panel of the same, finished on either edge with a tuck an inch deep extending from collar to belt in the front. On either side is a row of large flat pearl buttons. The sleeves are cut bishop style, with loose reverse cuffs, which are caught together with invisible hook and eye. The collar worn with this waist is a plain stock, with a band of white stitched about the top and a small tie of black silk is knotted in front.

Last of all is the jacket which is made with a blouse front, plain coat collar fitted back and a short peplum. The peplum is no longer in the back than at the sides and narrows to a point on either side in the front A girdle is stitched about the waist and crossed in front, where it is fastened by an invisible hook.



The side fronts of the blouse are laid in flat tucks or stitched plaits closely pressed with the tailor's iron and stripes of braid such as are used in the skirt extend from the shoulder to the bust line and are graduated in length, these at the outside of the shoulder being short and those in the middle longer. Two of these straps of braid are drawn over the shoulder and extend under the belt nearly to the ends of the peplum, where they are folded under so that points are formed. The jacket is fastened with small buttons and the sleeves are medium sized bishop style and are drawn into a wide band at the waist, which is pointed and hooked invisibly. A strap of the braid is laid through the middle of this band ending in a point at the outside of the waist.

A few of the accessories of this toilet are a plain silver hatpin and a chatelaine with inside pockets for handkerchiefs and small purse. The leather chatelaine is perhaps most suitable for the above described costume. The young lady will wear dark kid gloves and will carry a neatly folded umbrella with a straight natural wood handle capped with a silver ring inside of which is a mother of pearl medallion And this is one way that she will array herself for the street.—Mollie Morris in Chicago News.

Severer Styles are Coming.

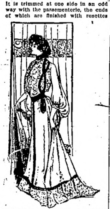
Strong contrasts in fabric and color are characteristic of the season's fashions. Black tones up white and light tints, white lightens black and dark shades, while fur and lace, velvet and chiffon, heavy cloths and airy tissues afford countless effective combinations. Just now, the woman who looks well in brown is having a costume of that color made.

In spite of elaborate designs and trimmings there is a hint in the air of a severer style to come. With the decadence of the craze for flappy collars there is a tendency to return to the tailor-mades of eight or nine years ago. Seasons of softer and more distinctly feminine fashions have taught the tailor many lessons, and with the return of the tight-fitting bodice and postilion back a decided improvement is manifest. The man modiste has learned that justice can be done to his beautifully cut garments even though arms and chest are free enough to be comfortable.

The most popular skirt is box plaited and just touches the ground all around. Basques are a pronounced element at the openings, and although many of them are yet absurdly short, it is probable that they will get longer as the mode advances.

House Dress or Tea Gown.

Princess gown of lilac crepe de chine trimmed with bands of lilac silk passe-menterie, one of which forms the heading to the ecru lace flounce. The bolero is also of lace opening over a chemisette of plaited mousseline de soie of the same shade. It is trimmed at one side in an odd way with the passementerie, the ends of which are finished with rosettes and tassels. The neck is finished with a delicate gold lace.



The wide girdle is of the passementerie. The sleeve has a large pouch at the elbow, where it is finished with a lace cuff.—Chic Parisien.

Worn by a Royal Bride.

It is always interesting to know what a royal bride has to wear. A Russian grand duchess had made for her in Paris recently for her trousseau an evening gown of pink velvet, copied by the couturier from a picture of Queen Marie Leczinska. It was embroidered by hand in silver thread and strass. Another was of ivory crepe de chine, with a stole of priceless Venetian guipure, pointed fichu-wise at the back. A sumptuous tea-gown was also of white crepe de chine, with a stole of chinchilla and encrustations of exquisite Irish point. A dress for morning wear was of clan plaid, bloused in front. The neck was finished with a flat trimming of black satin, continued down each side of the vest, with a frilled front of ivory tinted lace between.

Flowers in the Hair.

One long discarded custom is being brought into favor—that of wearing a flower in the hair. Had woman realized to what extent the pretty custom was admired and even loved by the majority of the opposite sex it never would have fraternized with the spinning wheel, the blue dishes and the lace mits in the dim and cobwebbed garret of things past.

To man, and that man a sweetheart, this little art, for such it is, of putting a flower in the hair is a signal to all the sensitive sentiment within him. If you doubt this, look to the voicings of the poets. There you will find holding sway and running riot as roses on an old wall, such phrases as "a blossom in her tresses," "a flower to bewitch me in her hair" and "that rose above her ear was my undoing."

Whether the hair be black or brown, red or gold, the charm of primeval femininity remains the same.

Novel Cotillion Figure.

"Dolly Varden" is one of the newest cotillion figures in vogue abroad. A screen is placed at one end of the ballroom, with an aperture at the base, the ladies on one side and the gentlemen on the other. The ladies walk in procession, holding their skirts so that their ankles are seen, and the gentlemen kneeling on the other side choose the particular ankles they wish to dance with, when the screen is removed and dancing becomes general, says the Pittsburg Press.

There ought to be a run on smart slippers and stockings if the "Dolly Varden" is introduced on this side of the sea.

A Substitute for Cupboards.

Dwellers in flats and apartments are often at a loss for storage room for preserves and jellies. An ingenious woman contrived a revolving stand, which takes up little space and holds forty pint jars. The shelves, four in number, are made of stout barrel-head pieces, fastened to a central shaft, which is run through holes pierced in the center of each shelf. The foot of the shaft is firmly fixed in a pivot, and the other end fits into a hole, in the top of the low closet or cupboard, where the shelves are kept. Any odd little cubbyhole can be utilized for the contrivance.

A CHAT with Housekeepers

Orange fritters make a delicious accompaniment to a breakfast dish of boiled ham.

To serve bologna sausage slice as thin as possible and garnish lightly with parsley.

Chicken salad goes further and tastes quite as well with the addition of a little cold roast pork.

A little sausage meat or pork chopped fine makes an excellent addition to "stuffing" or forced meat.

If a cork should be too large for the neck of a bottle, drop it into boiling water for three minutes and it will be found to fit quite easily.

An iodine stain, one of the most stubborn to encounter, can, it is said, be removed by soaking the fabric in sweet milk and occasionally rubbing the spot.

It is worth while to remember that the shine on the elbows and shoulders of a gown can be removed by gentle friction with emory cloth. Rub just enough to raise a little nap and then, in the case of cashmere or other smooth materials, go over the place a few times with a warmed silk handkerchief.

For the Boys' Room.

Blue and white barred gingham is a finishing which gives a delightful air of freshness to a boy's bedroom, without seeming effeminately dainty. It launders finely, and its clean blue and white gives a pleasing sense of immaculateness. Make a spread for the bed with wide ruffles around the sides and ends. The window seat can be made with a covering of the same, easily removable, and if the seat be made with a lid so that the interior can be used as a catch-all it will commend itself to the boy. Chair and couch cushions should be covered with ruffled slips of the same.

Popular Fancies in Skirts.

One of the popular fancies in the many gored skirts is the use of two contrasting materials. The gores flare very little and each is bordered at sides and bottom with stitching. Between each two gores is an inlay of violet—or of plain cloth mixed with cloth—which is narrow at the top and widens into a V at the bottom, thus giving the necessary ripple.

The choice of novel weaves and striking effects in materials is practically limitless, but many of them are available only for the Juno-like figure. Take the bold dashes and splashes and open plaids, for example, and imagine any but the woman of regal carriage in them. In flecked, flaked and knotted surfaces, however, the possibilities are wide for the less imposing figure, and the touches of warm or bright colors, contribute generously to beautiful effects.

Hints on Starching.

Use hard soap in washing clothes In boiling white clothes add a teaspoonful of turpentine to the water to assist in the whitening process Boiled starch is much improved by the addition of salt or a little gum arabic dissolved. Another hint in reference to starch is that the iron will not stick in ironing if the starch has been mixed with soapy water.

Coral Again Prized.

In the days of our grandmothers coral ornaments were quite common, but of late years there has been little demand for them, and apparently for the reason that women favored pearls. Now, however, there are indications that coral is to be restored to favor.

A Kimono for the Baby.

The pretty "Marguerites," as the dainty babies' kimonos are called, which busied so many feminine fingers on hotel verandas last summer, have appeared in the infants' departments in a variety of styles. One of the simplest to make is fashioned from a circle of white cashmere, nun's veiling, or albatross cloth, cut twenty inches in diameter.

Silk or Velvet Blouse.

Blouse of flame-colored taffeta, or of velvet of a darker shade, made with groups of plaits. The large shoulder collar is composed of blocks of cream linen or batiste, trimmed with lace, which are united by wedge-shaped pieces of the taffeta or velvet, trimmed with narrow black velvet ribbon. The cuffs are made in the same way.—Chic Parisien.

About Twenty Years From Now.

It was high noon in the palatial offices of the Hot and Cold Air Trust operator, Number One.

The great man himself had just come in, and after carefully drawing his day's profits from the safe, sat reading his morning's mail.

A messenger approached.

"Sir, there's a man outside to see you."

"Who is he."

"The president of the United States."

The great personage frowned.

"That fellow," he said, ominously, has been hanging around here for a week. Tell him to be off. I have nothing for him!"—Life.

THE BLOOD.

The blood is life. We derive from the blood life, power, beauty and reason, as the doctors have been saying from time immemorial. A healthy body, a fresh appearance, and generally all the abilities we possess depend on that source of life. It is therefore the duty of every sensible man to keep the blood as pure and normal as possible. Nature, in its infinite wisdom, has given us a thermometer indicating the state of the blood, which appeals to our reason by giving notice of its impurity. Small eruptions of the skin, to which we scarcely pay any attention, headache, ringing noises in the ears, lassitude, sleeplessness, are generally a sign that the blood is not in its normal state, but is filled with noxious substances. These symptomse deserve our full attention. If more attention were paid to those symptoms, and steps taken to remove them, then many illnesses from which we suffer would be come unknown and the human body would become stronger and healthier. Attention, therefore, should be paid to those warning signs, and the blood can be purified and poisonous substances removed from it by the use of Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops, discovered more than 60 years ago.

Mrs. Hildebrandt's Discovery.

Lake Sarah, Minn., Nov. 24th.—Mrs Hildebrandt of this place claims to have discovered a complete cure for Rheumatism, and numerous people can testify that as Mrs. Hildebrandt had the terrible affliction and is now a well woman, she appears to have good grounds for her claim. Mrs Hildebrandt speaks of her cure as follows:

"I had the Rheumatism in my arms so bad that I could not sleep at night. I was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and before I had taken two boxes I was much better. When I had taken four boxes I was completely cured."

It is only fair to state that others have made the same discovery as Mrs. Hildebrandt and that for Rheumatism and other diseases arising from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are recognized as the one sure and permanent cure.

THE PINKHAM CURES

ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E 114th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people.

Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A THOUGHT.

Life is but growth, and he is truly dead
Who finds no task for heart, nor hand, nor head;
Who smooths no path for coming feet to tread,
Because, perchance, his days of youth are fled!

For youth and age both have their store of joys—
A store that neither time nor change alloys;
And he who all his gifts for good employs
Has wealth that neither moth nor rust destroys.

—M. A. B. Kelly in Leslie's Weekly.

A VINDICATED PRODIGAL

By C. S. REX.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Publishing Company.)

A few of the most earnest and faithful of us had braved the inclement weather and were gathered in the cosy, comfortable room set apart for midweek service, in one of the most fashionable churches in our city.

Outside the wind howled unmercifully and as the little group of twenty-five or thirty silently awaited the coming of our minister, each uttered a silent prayer for the blessing of such pleasant surroundings.

Suddenly the door was gently pushed ajar and a vagabond, a typical specimen of the genus tramp, crept slowly within its portals; pausing, he glanced around the room, and, seeming satisfied with his surroundings he slowly walked towards the pulpit and found a seat directly in front of the minister, who had just entered the room from the door opposite the entrance.

The minister looked astonished at the seeming impudence of a dirty, ragged tramp presuming to coolly make himself at home in his stylish church, but without speaking to the vagabond quietly began the service for the evening.

He took for his theme the story of the Prodigal Son and very eloquently he talked, thinking, perhaps, he had a willing and appreciative listener in the tramp before him. Then songs were sung and prayers were said and finally the minister said the meeting was open to anyone who cared to speak or offer anything "for the good of all."

What was our surprise to see the vagabond slowly rise and with a defiant backward movement of his unkempt head turn towards his audience and told them this story:

"My friends (for so I deem you) that I was ever a decent man will be hard for you to believe, but I assure you, five years ago I was esteemed and worthy of any man's respect. Even as it is I have committed no crime that would call to my cheek a blush of shame. My hands are innocent of that. If you care to listen to my story I would be pleased to tell it. I think it will not only be interesting to you, but also prove beneficial to the people of this parish.

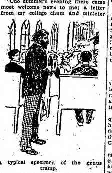
"I was once a minister of the Gospel and worthy to stand where your pastor stands. I sought to do my full duty as a teacher of the great Master's words, having for my creed, brotherly kindness; for my doctrine, brotherly love; I sought to honestly live the Golden Rule and was in a fair way to success in my chosen profession. I had preached in a pulpit once that had been occupied by the wonderful Beecher and my name had been frequently associated with the great church men of the day. Finally there came a call to a city church; would to God I might forget that; I accepted; I found my new parish was plastered o'er with pride; Mammon was their deity; gold was deified; hypocrisy was their creed and selfishness their doctrine. Their worship was a mockery and Christ was being re-crucified.

"I soon gained the respect of my people and was fairly successful in directing them to a better form of worship.

One of the most devoted co-workers I had was a young lady, whose beauty seemed so saint-like, I thought her soul must be divine.

"Friendship soon ripened into love, and after one short year we were married. Our merried life was an earthly Eden to me and all of Mary's smiles seemed so freely given that our happy home seemed too near heaven for the serpent to enter.

"One summer's evening there came most welcome news to me; a letter from my college chum and minister friend stationed in a distant city, who wrote that having some secular business of importance in my vicinity he would avail himself of the opportunity and privilege of paying me a long delayed visit, renewing old comradeship and further cementing our friendship.

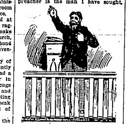


A typical specimen of the genus tramp.

He came, a tall, fair, handsome man, and what was my surprise to learn that my Mary was enchanted with him. She would sit silently watching the emotions play upon his face as we conversed about old college days.

"My God! There must be sins for which men cannot find forgiveness, nor can they atone for them. This priest, this friend, bah, after but one short week, stole my darling and I was left alone. Before a year of misery had passed away I heard that the jewel that I had once so treasured and prized, was dead.

"That, my friends, is why I left the church. That is why I took to drink. That is why I am a vagabond. That is why I am here to-night. The thief changed his name and fled to new pastures green and I have searched for him for five long years, but to-night my journey is ended. Yes, your preacher is the man I have sought,



Asked for the blessing of God to rest upon us * * an' I thank the God of Justice that once more we stand face to face in God's holy temple. Oh I shall not harm you. You need not shrink. May God forgive you for spoiling my life, I doubt if He ever will. I wish your people to know your crime. Your kind it is that makes men scorn religion and violate God's laws.

"Ah, my friends, my strength is almost gone and I know I have not much longer to live in this woeful world. I hope to be in peace with God before I die. He never will be. Will you join me in prayer?"

And as the kneeling vagabond uttered a simple earnest petition for mercy and forgiveness and even prayed for the villain who had so wronged him, the preacher we had thought the embodiment of almost heavenly virtues silently passed into the night.

We never saw or heard of him again.

As the tramp asked for the blessing of God to rest upon us all he attempted to rise, but tottered, staggered, fell,—was dead.

We never learned from whence he came nor anything concerning who he was, but we gave him a respectable burial and over his grave we placed a stone and on that stone this inscription,

"Here Lies a Vindicated Prodigal. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

The Other Side.

An author who illustrates his own novels has submitted to an interview.

"You find that it pays, don't you?"

"You bet!—in lots of ways. For instance, I get paid for the story?"

"Yes."

"Then, the illustrations of the author of a book are worth double those of the ordinary artists?"

"Of course!"

"Then some fool of a rich fellow comes along and offers a fabulous sum for the original drawings, and wants an introduction to you, and invites you to dine with him, and your fortune is made, and your future is safe! It's a great scheme, I tell you, and authors are fools who don't make the most of it!"

Unfortunate Combination.

The chief inn at a small English village had been known as the Clown, but the landlord, by way of compliment to a certain bishop who had resided there for some time, substituted the Bishop as a sign.

An innkeeper close by, who had frequently envied the host of the Clown his good fortune in securing a preponderance of visitors, took advantage of the change and put up the sign of the Clown over his own door.

The landlord of the Bishop was dismayed at seeing so many of his old customers deposited at his rival's house; so, by way of remedy, he painted, in big red letters, under the portrait of the Bishop—"This is the old Clown."

SUBSTITUTION.

Please listen to a short talk upon a most vitally important subject—one which is greatly disturbing the business world to-day.

You have doubtless heard of the word "substitution." You have probably read that "substitution is fraud." Tack that saying firmly in your mind and keep it there. It is worth something. It is true—almost invariably.

You call at a store and ask for an article of a certain brand or manufacture, one which has been thoroughly advertised for years, and which has earned an excellent reputation. The dealer says "here's something just as good for less money." That dealer thereby usually tells a direct falsehood. He knows that the article which he offers you at a lower price is inferior, but the point is that it yields him a greater profit; hence his desire to substitute.

You may ask if an article is superior just because it is advertised.—Yes, it is, and here's why. The many well-known houses which spend millions of dollars every year in the good publications of the country are managed by men of brains and wide business experience, and these men know only too well that unless an article has merit there is absolutely no business sense in spending good money to advertise it. It does not pay to advertise any article of general use for a short time only. Every advertiser must wait some time before his advertising has created the desired impression and while he is waiting his goods must have time to prove whether or not they are good. If they are good, they stick; if not, they do not, and if they were not good and did not stick, would this experienced business man continue to spend good money advertising the goods—throw good money after bad as it were? Never! He has too much business sense.

The average article which you see advertised month after month in good publications is itself good. Buy an advertised article. It is the true safe way.

When you are buying ask for what you want and get what you ask for.

A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA

REV. H. STUBENVOLL

Rev. H. Stubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubenvoll is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Favor Sending a Representative to Washington.

By a unanimous vote, the mass meeting held in the city hall last Saturday evening recommended that the city council appropriate money for the purpose of sending Mayor F. H. Kratka to Washington next month to work for the passage of the Red Lake bill.

The meeting was presided over by Daniel Shaw and numerous speeches were made by business men who favored the sending of a representative to Washington at the city's expense. Hans Langseth was just as heartily in favor of securing the opening of the reservation as anyone, but he did not think it was necessary for the city to go to this expense in order to accomplish this end. He argued that the people elect and pay representatives to go to Washington and work in their interest and that the matter would be attended to just as well if no representative was sent. He thought that as long as the city had already spent $3,000 that it was time to be a little cautious. Mr. Langseth, however, as one of the heaviest taxpayers in the city withdrew his personal objections and made the meeting unanimous.

It makes no difference now whether or not the coal trust is busted. The oldest inhabitant out in Beltrami county says the muskrats are making small and thinly covered winter residences and that is a sure sign of an open winter.

Gentlemen:

I desire to state that at your request I made a thorough examination of local beers sold in this market, among them yours, and have no hesitancy in saying that I find your beer to be an absolutely pure, well matured and healthful product. In fact, of the samples examined by me, yours was, particularly with reference to purity and age, above the others.

I would further say that these examinations were made by me without information to indicate the manufacturer of the respective brands until after the completion of the analyses.

Land Office Upheld

Attorney N. Campbell of Crookston, is in receipt of numerous decisions of the Secretary of the interior affirming the decision of the local office and the commissioner of the general land office, rejecting the applications to make homestead entry for lands on sections 16 and 36 upon the ceded portion of the Red Lake Agency.

Although these lands have been declared to be government lands they will not be subject to entry under the homestead law until said lands have been properly classified and ordered into market and entry by the department.

The question of the right of a settler to squat upon said lands was not determined by the department.

Some person or persons, entered Judge Tarrant's chicken house Tuesday evening and purloined two of his ducks. When the act was discovered Judge Tarrant's ire was at a white heat, and he has appointed H. W. Lee special judge and entered upon the roll of a detective himself. He promises that there will be some arrests made inside of a day or two and that the culprit will get the full limit of the law. If the crime had been committed down in "Mizzuro," the judge thinks it would probably be is allowed to go unnoticed, but up here in enlightened Minnesota it is different.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

WEEKLY MARKET LETTER.

The following market letter is furnished by Edward Wood & Co. Grain Commission Merchants. 110 Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis, 310 Board of Trade Duluth.

Last week's wheat market was a lively one and trading was on a large scale. The Armour influence is very apparent and more attention has been paid to this house than to ordinary market factors. It is supposed that the Armour Company sold out on Thursday, and Friday the larger part of its long line of wheat, but the crowd took it within two or three hours and without breaking prices badly, it being the general opinion that the selling was merely a shake out, and that Armour would take the wheat back on the decline. The action of the market so far this week indicates that there is an excellent buying of the day options, which is supposed to be by Armour. The western primary receipts last week were about 8,000,000 bushels; the domestic visible supply increased 3,640,000 bushels; exports from the United States were 5,277,000 bushels; world's shipments were a million and a half bushels less than for week before. Bradsteert's world's available supply increased east of the Rockies 3,338,000 bushels compared with an increase of 5,511,000 bushels of a year ago; the floating and abroad increased 1,400,000 bushels, the same as a year ago. Receipts of wheat so far this week are heavy. The State Chemists of Indiana report that growing wheat in that state is damaged from 15 to 75 per cent by the Hessian fly. The cash market continues strong, especially at Duluth where good sales have been made for shipment. Sales for export have been very good, 400,000 bushels reported on Saturday, and 200,000 bushels today. The premium of 1½ to 2 cents per bushel for cash wheat is still maintained. The demand for flour is good and it is thought that the mills will this week dispose of total output. We believe in higher prices for wheat and favor purchases on this price level, and especially on every decline of the price.

A Blind Bargainer.

Shoppers in one of the big stores down town last bargain day curiously watched the movements of a blind woman at the dress goods counter. She was about 50 years old, her face showing great intelligence and refinement. She was richly dressed for the street, and a girl about 20 years old accompanied her.

The blind woman examined the fabrics placed before her by passing them through her hands. She depended upon her own sense of touch apparently, for she seldom spoke to her companion, and then only in answer to questions. She appeared to be quite critical, and before she made her selection the counter was piled high with patterns of all kinds.

After she had examined a large number of pieces she took up one of the first that had been shown her and decided to buy it.

When the clerk had measured it, she verified the length herself by measuring it with her outstretched arms. Seemingly satisfied that the piece contained as much as she had bargained for, she took a transfer ticket and went to the counter where trimmings are sold. There she selected the material with which to finish her dress, examining the laces and other delicate fabrics most critically.

After the blind woman had left the store the floor manager said her shopping was not an unusual thing. She was but one of the many blind customers who come into the store regularly. This woman, he said, was not only able to make the nicest discrimination in the matter of trimmings, but so delicate was her touch she could often distinguish colors. He added, however that she never depended entirely upon her touch in matching shades, but verified her selections with the eyes of the clerk and her companion.—Chicago Tribune.

is a newspaper for bright and intelligent people. It is made up to attract people who think.

Is not neutral or colorless, constantly trimming in an endeavor to please both sides, but it is independent in the best sense of the word.

It has pronounced opinions and is fearless in expressing them, but it is always fair to its opponents.

Matters of national or vital public interest get more space in THE TRIBUNE than in any other paper in the West.

For these reasons it is the newspaper you should read during the forthcoming political campaign.

THE TRIBUNE'S financial columns never mislead the public.

Its facilities for gathering news, both local and foreign, are far superior to those of any other newspaper in the West.

It presents the news in as fair a way as possible, and lets its readers form their opinions.

While it publishes the most comprehensive articles on all news features, if you are busy the "Summary of THE DAILY TRIBUNE" published daily on the first page gives you briefly all the news of the day within one column.

Its sporting news is always the best, and its Sunday Pink Sporting Section is better than any sporting paper in the country.

It is the "cleanest" daily printed in the West.

REMARKABLE CURES BY DOCTOR REA.

Help for the Sick, Particularly Those Who Do Not Delay

Often a Few Weeks of Neglect Allows Diseases to Reach a State Where They Cannot Be Cured.

Dr. Rea heals not by Osteopathy, by Hypnotism, nor by Divine Healing, but by a system of natural science in combination with the most true and reliable remedies of the age. He is a man that cures the sick because he understands the nature, cause and the condition of circumstances which bring disease about. His discoveries are those made from personal experience and from long continued practice in his profession. An article published in the October number of the North American Medical Journal says: "Dr. Rea is a man who is eminently scientific in his profession a man far beyond the average doctor, a man who is capable, or otherwise he could not be "successful." Dr. Rea, as a practicing physician, is successful, and he is one of the greatest diagnosticians of chronic diseases of the age. Is it not reasonable to believe that if a man is successful in one branch of science that he is certainly capable of being successful in other branches? Analyze these matters yourself. Do not allow your thoughts and your opinions to be influenced by others who are not interested. One does not know how to appreciate health until they have lost it.

Dr. Rea has studied his profession both at home and abroad, and after a thorough and painstaking investigation, has succeeded in curing the diseases of his specialty when other physicians have failed. Why not? Some of these people were old, some were lame, some paralytic, scarcely able to move, others afflicted with Bright's disease, heart disease, consumption, cancer, other with kidney troubles, dyspepsia, insomnia and the thousand and one symptoms of those dreadful maladies. It is claimed by his friends that he can tell the disease of a patient without asking him a question. This is perhaps true, for since he is so learned in his profession and so experienced in treating diseases, why shouldn't he, and why shouldn't he know the exact cause and true reasons of symptoms which produce disease? For years he has been visiting professionally the largest cities of the United States. His opinions are quickly made, and if a cure can be made then and there he tells them, and if it can not be made he is equally honest and tells them so. We know that he has cured thousands of cases of disease. We doubt if there is onehundredth of one per cent of the cases that he treats that he fails to cure. We publish by permission the names of a few of his recent cures.

Andrew Anderson, Estherville, Ia., cured of blindness. Had to be led around. He is now able to be out at work.

A. W. Martin, Mora, Minn., cured of epithelial cancer on the face.

Mrs. C. N. Troxel, Fort Ripley, Minn., cured of early consumption chronic bronchial and stomach troubles.

Mrs. Gust Hammerback, Wheaton, Minn., cured of cancer of the leg. Cured with Dr. Rea's injection fluid with three treatments.

H. C. Myers, New Prague, Minn., cured of heart, stomach and liver troubles after all other doctors had failed.

Martin McCabe, Arvilla, N. D. cured of chronic, ulcerated sore leg of many years standing. Completely cured with a few months treatment.

Mrs. Nellie Dragsdale, Strout, Minn., cured of chronic, articular rheumatism, where all other doctors she had treated with failed.

Johnson Harris, Harris, Minn., an old man 83 years, cured of piles of 40 years' standing. No operation. Cured by Dr. Rea's injection treatment.

Swan Walters, Navy, Minn., cured of rheumatism. Joints had been stiff and he ached from head to foot. Only a few months treatment were neccesary to cure him.

Henry Schwalke, Nerstrand, Minn., cured of chronic kidney trouble which had given him rheumatism. Other doctors did not even know what was the matter with him.

O. W. Eishback, Fosston, Minn., cured of chronic stomach and liver troubles.

Mrs. Josia Short, Lillo, Minn., cured of a large rodent growth, cancerous in character. She had it a long while.

Victor Anderson, Fargo, N. D., cured of chronic rheumatic neuralgia of years' standing.

Dan Morrison, Larimore, N. D., cured of bad blood, nervous debility and rheumatism. Every one thought he would die as he had lost flesh for six months. Gained quickly and was cured in a few months.

Albert Burge, Andrea, Minn., cured of chronic catarrh of the stomach.

Gotleib Passbrig, Grant Bend, N. D. cured of catarrh of the head, throat and stomach, liver troubles and weak vitality.

Frank Freeman, Verona, N. D. cured of cancer of the lip.

Mrs. A. Richel, Red Lake Falls, Minn., cured of cancerous tumor of the wrist. This woman was cured by another doctor who used Dr. Rea's fluid treatment for cancer.

Erick Bjorkland, Cambridge, Minn., cured of chronic piles, with Dr. Rea's treatment. This treatment was also administered by another physician.

Dr. Rea is curing patients from all parts of the United States. His system of treatment is such that they soon get a relief and a permanent cure follows. His office is located at 329 Boston Block, Minneapolis, Minn., where he will examine and advise all persons who call on him. Consultation, examination and advice to those interested, $1.00.

Minneapolis, Minn., (Special.) Dr. Rea, the most noted specialist has arranged his next visit to the Northwest and will visit the following towns:

SUPPLEMENT.

BREESE.

Martin Everson gave a dance last Saturday night, and the young people east of here had a good time.

Mrs. S. Severson, six miles east of here, died suddenly Sunday morning from heart failure.

Mat Brandon, Jr., returned home from Thief River Falls last week, where he had been working all summer in the sawmill. He purchased a brocho from the Rollis herd while there, and when he got home tho't he would take her out and exercise her, but the broncho thought he was to slow in hitching up, so she just skipped out, and is at present exercising herself in the swamps east of here.

Henery Larson has just wound up threshing at Thief Lake and vicinity and will get back here as soon as it freezes enough to cross the swamps. He has about three weeks threshing five miles east of here that he intends to thresh as soon as he gets back. We are afraid he will have a cold job of it.

A party of hunters went through here last week. They said they would make the deer and moose look scarce when they got done.

A Missouri news paper tells of a German farmer who went to the depot to take a train, arriving half an hour before it was due. On satisfying himself that the train was still to come, he heaved a sigh and said: "Vell, today I am pefore at last. I vas always pehind pefore."

If you have a farm for sale call on the Northern Real Estate & Mortgage Co. Office next First State Bank.

MET DEATH.

James Gaffeny Hit by a Falling Tree.

The News has received word from Bulman Bros. camp on the Upper Red lake of a fatal accident, which occurred on Nov. 7th, and resulted in the death of James Gaffeny. Mr. Gaffeny was a sawyer, and while at work was struck on the top of the head by a falling tree. He was taken to the camp where the wound was dressed, but he died about eight hours after being hurt, and was unconscious all of the time.

Gaffeny was a stranger to all of the men employed in Bulman Bros. camp, and had only been at work there about ten days. He was about thirty-five years of age, sandy complextion, and had a heavy moustache. There were no papers or anything about his effects to show who he was or where he came from.

Happily Wedded.

In St Hilaire's Catholic church last Wednesday morning occurred the wedding of Thos. Little and Miss Octavia LeMay. Rev. Ansgar performed the ceremong according to the rites of the church in the presence of over a hundred guests. Mr. and Mrs Lewis Adams officiated as best man and bridesmaid. The music for the occasion was furnished by the choir from St. Bernard's Catholic church of Thief River Falls. After the ceremong was concluded the happy couple received the congratulations of the guests and then repaired to the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. Beaudry, where they partook of an excellent wedding dinner. The newly wedded couple left that evening for a short wedding tour, after which they will go to housekeeping in the Knudson residence on Water street.

Harry Anderson, of Newfolden, was in the city last week.

60 Cents Potatoes.

Agents of Armour & Co. have been busily at work and have almost completed arrangements by which the entire control of the potato crop of the northwest will be in the hands of that firm. Whole train loads of potatoes are already standing on the sidings throughout Minnesota and Michigan awaiting introduction to the cold storage warehouses of the firm. A jump to 60 cents a bushel is expected by Dec. 15.

An observing contemporary says that "we never saw a man well enough off so that he could afford to leave his farm implements in the field where he last used them, or leaning against the side of the barn or in the grove, neither did we ever see one who was so hard pressed that he could not afford to build a shed to receive the tools when the season is over. The fact of it is, the well-to-do farmer has become so by caring for everything as he went along, his tools included. That is one secret of success."

C. A. Brink: It is just nineteen years last Monday since I first set foot in St. Hilaire. I was one of the greenest Swedes you ever saw then, but I've been changing color right along over since.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Money to loan on improved farms, L. M. HOAG LAND & LOAN Co.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks 1903 Almanac.

To say that this splendid work of science and art is finer and better than ever, is stating it mildly. The demand for it is far beyond all previous years. To say that such results, reaching through thirty years, are not based upon sound sense and usefulness, is an insult to the intelligence of the millions. Prof. Hicks, through this great Almanac, and his famous family and scientific journal Word and Works, is doing a work for the whole people not approached by any other man or publication. A fair test will prove this to any reasonable person. Added to the most luminous course in astronomy for 1903, forecasts of storms and weather are given, as never before, for every day in the year, all charmingly illustrated with nearly two hundred engravings. The price of single Almanac including postage and mailing, is thiry cents. Word and Works with the Almanac is $1.00 a year. Write to Word and Works Publishing Co., 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo., and prove to yourself their great value.

After a thorough inspection and examination, I have decided to make Fant's Tropical Fruit and Confection'ry Store my headquarters for the Christmas and Holiday Goods for the year 1902.

BIG FIRE AT NORMAN.

Millions of Feet of Lumber, Six Steamboats and Other Property Destroyed.

Rat Portage, Ont., Dec. 1. — Fire started at Norman, near here, yesterday, and, notwithstanding every effort, the flames spread swiftly through immense piles of lumber to the docks and from the docks to the boats, until stopped in that direction by the water's edge. Dense showers of sparks were carried inland toward the residence section of the city and one by one the houses went up in flames and smoke. Twenty-five million feet of lumber destroyed as well as Lemay's shipyard, six steamboats, two barges, eleven dwellings and one stable.

The boats burned are: Phantom, $2,000; Kenen, $3,000; Spray, Pearl, Midge and Deystar, $1,000 each.

A number of wooden structures in the path of the fire were destroyed and the progress of the flames was checked. The lumber yards are great masses of glowing embers, but there appears to be no fear of a further spread of the fire. No accurate estimate of the loss can be secured at this time.

Berlin, Dec. 1. — The compromise on the tariff bill, said to have been agreed upon Nov. 25 at a conference held between Chancellor von Buelow and the leaders of the majority parties in the reichstag is, according to the Germania, generally accepted as correct and is as follows:

The motion of the members of the Central party applying the surplus derived from the duties on food stuffs to the insurance fund for widows and orphans, and the abolition of the urban octroi duties were agreed to. Apart from these the most noteworthy point is that the increases in duties decided on by the tariff committee shall be the basis of the next general tariff.

ONLY THE BRITISH REPLY.

One Answer to Russian Note on Sugar Conference.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 1. — It is officially announced that Great Britain is the only power that has replied to the Russian note regarding the sugar conference. Great Britain's reply hoped that the Russian government would still signify its adherence to the Brussels conference, but if not Great Britain would be compelled to impose a retaliatory duty on Russian sugar, provided it was determined a sugar bounty existed in Russia. The Russian government has replied to Great Britain's note, declaring that such an action would be an infringement on the Anglo-Russian commercial treaty of 1859. The Russian government maintains that it did not take part in the Brussels conference because it wished to assure itself of its right to adopt domestic measures for the protection of the Russian sugar industry.

FAMINE IN SWEDEN

SEVENTY THOUSAND PEOPLE ARE ON THE VERGE OF STARVATION.

HEAVY RAINFALLS RUIN FIELDS

BIRCH BARK AND SEED GRAIN COMMON ARTICLE OF DIET.

OUTLOOK EXCEEDING GLOOMY

DISTRESSING CONDITIONS PREVAIL IN NORTH PART OF SWEDEN.

Stockholm, Dec. 1. — Reports received here yesterday state that the famine is spreading throughout the extreme north of the country.

Seventy thousand people are on the verge of starvation.

Heavy and protracted rainfalls have inundated the fields and meadows and flooded many houses. Much of the livestock has been isolated on the hills, which are barren of pasture, and is likely to perish. In numerous localities the inhabitants are killing their flocks and herds and even their milch cows or selling them at ruinous prices. Cows bring only $5 and sheep 50 cents.

Even in districts where the famine has been comparatively slight the savings of the people, which are derived chiefly from stock raising, are greatly exhausted. Birch bark and seed grain ground together is the common article of diet. It is almost impossible for the farmers to get work, and they which the floods have temporarily rendered worthless. In certain districts the outlook is exceedingly gloomy. The people will have to depend on very light crops—less than half the previous minimum—of extremely poor quality.

These distressing conditions are to be found throughout the whole stretch of country between the 61st and 67th degrees of north latitude, and from the Gulf of Bothnia and the Russian border far into the interior. Southern Sweden has contributed $100,000 in money and 1,000 car loads of fodder and provisions. The municipalities in the starving area have been supplied with $75,000 five-year loans without interest. Nevertheless, it is feared that all resources of the famine-stricken district will be exhausted not later than the month of March.

Summer in those regions, which are mostly above the arctic circle, does not begin until June or July. The winters are characterized by polar severity and Egyptian darkness, relieved only by the northern lights.

GUESTS NARROWLY ESCAPE.

Calumet Hotel Is Destroyed by Fire in the Early Morning.

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 1. — Several people barely escaped from the Central house which was gutted by fire early yesterday morning. The fire started in the linen room, where, it is supposed, a lighted match was thrown, and spread rapidly. Forty guests were sleeping in the building, and were awakened with difficulty. Doors were smashed in to reach them. Five were overcome with smoke, but revived in the open air. Loss, $10,000; partly insured.

GAS TUBE DETACHED.

Aged Couple Asphyxiated After Preparing for Thanksgiving Dinner.

Chicago, Dec. 1. — Mr. and Mrs. William McIlwee, an aged couple, have been found dead from asphyxiation at their home in Austin. A rubber tube, which in some manner became detached from a gas range, allowed gas to escape. Many articles purchased in anticipation of a Thanksgiving dinner leave little doubt that the asphyxiation was an accident.

SUGAR HOUSE BURNED.

A Loss of $130,000 Entailed by a Fire in Louisiana.

New Orleans, Dec. 1. — The magnificent sugar house at Ashton plantation at Luling, La., formerly owned by John A. Morris and now the property of Charles A. Farewell and others, burned yesterday. The total loss on sugar houses and products is $130,000; insurance, $65,000.

SULLIVAN HARD UP.

New York, Dec. 1. — John L. Sullivan, former champion heavy-weight prizefighter of the world, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court. He said his liabilities were $2,658 and his assets $60 worth of wearing apparel.

Beaver Falls, Pa., Dec. 1. — Robbers broke into the postoffice at New Brighton, Pa., some time last night, and it is estimated carried off between $600 and $700 in stamps and several hundred dollars in cash.

Football Injuries Fatal.

Marshall, Mo., Dec. 1. — Bunce Farics of Boonville, the Kemper college student injured here two weeks ago in the football game between his college and the Wentworth academy, died here yesterday.

DISPLEASES BRITISHERS.

American Employers of Labor Pay Too Much.

London, Nov. 27. — The American plan of paying good wages and encouraging employes to increase the daily output, which was introduced by the manager of the American Electrical works at Manchester, has been formally protested against by the employers' federation of that district. The latter aver that the labor market is being demoralized and their works drained of their best men by the American officials, who pay their laborers 12 cents an hour, against 9 cents paid by the British employers, and get double the amount of work accomplished. The Americans intend to ignore the protest. They say the British workman is capable enough, but he is demoralized by low wages and the domineering of the English foremen, against whom they have no redress. The British employers blacklist the men their foremen discharge, and are attempting to prevent the American concerns from employing them. The Americans, however, propose to stand aloof from the employers federation and carry on their works in their own way.

GODSPEED TO CHAMBERLAIN.

Colonial Secretary Given Ovation on Departure for South Africa.

London, Nov. 27. — Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, accompanied by his wife, son and daughter, left Victoria station at 11:30 yesterday morning on the first stage of his journey to South Africa. The secretary arrived at the station at about 11 o'clock and was cheered enthusiastically by those who had come to say farewell to him. Many of Mr. Chamberlain's friends, political and social, were at the station to say good-bye. Among others present were Prime Minister Balfour and Lord Roberts. The affair was of a semi-private nature, but those who assembled to bid godspeed to the secretary were very enthusiastic. When the train moved out there was a great outburst of cheering, which was led by Premier Balfour. There was also considerable waving and raising of hats. Mr. Chamberlain acknowledged the cheers and raised his hat repeatedly.

New Cabinet Has Been Formed in British Columbia.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 27.—Col. Prybr, the new premier, filled up his cabinet when D. M. Eberts, the attorney general in the Densmuir government, accepted that position in his administration and W. B. McInnis of Nanimo, became president of the council. The Prior cabinet is as follows:

Wells, commissioner of lands and works; Dennis Murphy, provincial secretary and minister of education, and W. B. McInnis, president of the council. Eberts and McInnis will be sworn in to-day.

MRS. GORE WAS NOT MURDERED.

American Physicians Agree With Their Parisian Brethren.

Paris, Nov. 27.—In spite of the rigid secrecy which has been maintained by the officials and by the commission of American doctors concerning the result of the autopsy conducted by the latter on the body of Mrs. Ellen Gore, it is learned from an authoritative source that the doctors tend individually to the acceptance of the theory of an accident and the probabilities are that their official report will strongly incline to that theory if it does not positively assert it, thus bringing the French and American doctors into agrement and relieving the case of any international significance.

CZARINA'S SERIOUS CONDITION.

Greatest Anxiety Is Felt at the Russian Capital.

Brussels, Nov. 27. — An officer attached to the French diplomatic service who passed through Brussels yesterday on his way from St. Petersburg to Paris, informed the editor of the Belgian Society Journal L'Orchestre that the state of the czarina's health is causing the greatest anxiety at the Russian capital. Her nervous condition is such that she cannot eat, and she is losing strength at an alarming rate. The czar is greatly concerned over her ill health and is very much depressed.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC CROPS.

They Are Affected by a Series of Strikes.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 27.—The strikes here are threatening a general paralysis of business and are affecting the handling of crops. The government is thoroughly alive to the situation and has secured the passage of an expulsion law that will enable it to deal with foreign agitators, who are blamed for the labor troubles. Martial law has been declared, and it is believed that the new law, in conjunction with a military government, will soon remedy the situation.

Boundary Award.

London, Nov. 27.—The British award in the boundary arbitration between Chile and Argentina consists of a compromise between the claims of the two countries. The area in dispute amounted to about 58,374 square miles. The award gives Chile about 33,534 and Argentina about 24,840 square miles.

Nebraska Bank Robbed.

Bancroft, Neb., Nov. 27.—The Bancroft bank, owned by J. E. Turner, was broken into between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The vault door was blown off and between $3,000 and $4,000 taken.

Mad Dog Runs Amuck.

THROUGH MILES OF WRECKAGE

STEAMER ALBRIGHT BRINGS FRESH NEWS OF THE TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29. — In a furious southwest gale on Lake Erie Sunday night the steamer Sylvanus J. Macy sprung aleak off Port Burwell, Ont., and plunged to the bottom, probably carrying her entire crew with her. The barge Mabel Wilson, which was being towed by the Macy, broke away from the steamer in the darkness and succeeded in sailing up the lake to Amherstburg, where she arrived Thursday afternoon. The first news of the disaster was received from Capt. J. J. Auterson of the steamer Albright, which passed up the river early yesterday morning. She reported having passed through five miles of wreckage Wednesday thirty miles southwest of Longpoint, consisting of parts of the cabin, life preservers and doors of some vessel. The cabin was painted white, but there was no distinguishing marks to tell what vessel it was from. The arrival of the Wilson, however, leaves no doubt that the wreckage is from the Macy, as the last seen of the steamer was in the near vicinity.

Left to Shift for Herself.

The Macy, with the Wilson in tow, left Buffalo last Saturday with a cargo of coal. When half-way up Lake Erie the gale was encountered, and when abreast of Port Burwell the tow line of the barge was thrown off by the crew of the Macy, leaving the schooner to shift for herself. When last seen by the crew of the Wilson the Macy was laboring heavily in the sea and was evidently making for shelter. If the crew had time to leave their ship before the plunge to the bottom it is not believed the small boats could have lived long in the terrible sea running. That nothing has been heard of them has convinced the owners that all are lost.

The Macy was owned by P. J. Ralph & Co. of Detroit and was insured for $16,500. She is one of the older type of wooden steamers. She registered 752 tons. She was built in 1881.

As the personnel of the crew of the steamer changed at nearly every port visited a complete list is not available in the office. The crew of the Macy probably numbers eighteen, as that is the number necessary to man a ship of her size.

SEARCH FOR A SHIP.

Little Hope of Finding the Steamer Bannockburn.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Tugs are scouring Lake Superior in hopes of finding some trace of the missing Canadian steamer Bannockburn and her crew of twenty men. From Marquette a tug, under orders from the insurance underwriters, has been sent into the lake, and from Sault Ste. Marie tugs have been sent by the Montreal Transportation company, owners of the Bannockburn. Marine underwriters generally have given the boat up for lost, as nothing has been definitely heard from her since she left Port Arthur last Friday. It is reported that the steamer Algonquin passed the missing boat fifty miles southeast of Passage Island on Friday. This would be well into the middle of the lake, and in the direct path of boats traversing the lake. The only hope for the safety of the missing boat lies in the belief that she may have stranded on Caribou Island. This dangerous point is unlighted, the Canadian light tender having left his post for the season a week ago.

MEDAL FROM THE EMPEROR.

Ambassador White Highly Honored in Germany.

Berlin, Nov. 29.—Emperor William, in his farewell audience of Ambassador White yesterday, presented him with the gold medal of the empire for science and art, which is given once a year to a person, either a German or foreigner, who, in the opinion of the government, is best entitled to it. Emperor William said that while it was a pleasure to make the presentation, he did so on the recommendation of Chancellor von Buelow and Foreign Secretary von Richtofen. His majesty added that as a personal remembrance he was having a porcelain vase made at the royal works here for Mr. White. The emperor was very cordial in his reception of the retiring ambassador. His majesty said he appreciated how much Mr. White had done to forward a good understanding between the United States and Germany, and added: "The only thing you have ever done that I do not like is your leaving us."

He Did Not Sneak Away.

New Orleans, Nov. 29. — President Don Ramoro Iglesias arrived from San Jose yesterday. He denies that his departure was secret, saying there is a law prohibiting an ex-president from leaving within one year, and this permission was granted him. He is visiting his brother here.

Lutheran Hospital Dedicated.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 29.—The new Lutheran hospital was dedicated here yesterday with impressive ceremonies. Bishop von Rhoo officiated.

IN WOMAN'S INTEREST

Graceful Draperies.

The mirrored gagras, the picturesque skirts of the East Indian women, make a graceful drapery. One can buy the genuine skirts that have been worn by the natives, but not, of course, so old that they have grown dingy or faded. Oddly enough, the skirts are all a-shimmer with squares of mirror inset, a relic of the crude decorative instinct of half civilization. There is a peculiar fascination in adopting, now and then, one of the unguided customs of barbarity. The fascination grows, too, if the element of the picturesque crops out. The phulkorries are shoulder shawls worn quaintly over the shoulders of the East Indian women, and these shawls are used for graceful drapery to fill an empty looking spot in the nook.

Such a nook with the odd draperies and equipment named, valuable because they are genuine importations from the Orient, would approximate an expenditure of modest amount. One may make a lifetime hobby of adding to its treasures, and eventually an enthusiast may make its extravagance run into the hundreds.

Caramel Ice Cream.

Caramel ice cream is a delicious dainty and easily made. Brown until very dark a cup of brown sugar in a pan of water over the fire and add a little hot water, just sufficient to render the mixture liquid. Beat three eggs in a pint of milk with a cup of brown sugar and add to the caramel mixture. If any flavoring, such as lemon, orange of vanilla, is desired, add it and freeze.

Embroidered Linen Stock.

One of the oddest and prettiest stocks of the season is of embroidered linen in the natural color.

It has a pointed turnover with a triple row of fancy brown stitching above the tiny hem.

Triple pointed tabs are drawn around from the back and crossed in front, where they fasten with a pearl button.

An Autumn Toilette.

The smart toilette sketched is of royal blue cloth, made very simply with an embroidered collar and waistband. The skirt is cut in one of the most fashionable styles for autumn, which, although not exactly novel, is very popular, and well suited to a walking skirt. The skirt is arranged with a box-pleat introduced at the seams, and widening out into greater fullness below the knees, without being cumbersome. The coat is of the Russian blouse shape, a style very easy to turn out at home as the back is devoid of any seam at all, and allowed to pouch over the hand slightly. Of course on a stout figure it is best to avoid all pouching and keep the back as flat as possible. The coat is fitted to the figure at the side seams, and is completed by a basque. This is quite one of the features of autumn coats. It requires, however, a tall, slight figure to carry off this style successfully when expressed in heavy materials.

Crimson Clover for Hats.

White and green are pre-eminently popular for the country modes in hats. For the seaside a deep shade of crimson with white is much worn. For example, a white serge or cloth gown has deep folded sash of crimson silk with gold buckle, with which goes a turned-up sailor hat with crimson silk scarf and white wings. Crimson clover is also introduced, and is most effective in conjunction with natural colored leaves and foliage.

Fashions are eminently becoming just now; the simplicity of tailor gowns makes dressing comparatively easy as regards choice of styles, etc., but the intricacy of applications, encrustations, piques and strappings can only be carried out by ingenious and experienced fingers. It is rare to find a "little dressmaker" who can carry out a really chic model as it should be. Something is wanting, and it is only fair to those who have labored and toiled to reach the perfection of the couturier's art that the same result should not be attainable by all who compete.—The Ladies' Field.

Chop Suey and Chow Mein.

Shop suey, Chinatown's favorite dish with Americans, can reach perfection only in the Chinese kitchen, but a counterfeit enough like the original to suit the average Occidental taste can emanate from the American chafing dish or frying pan. A Chinese gentleman who often entertains his American friends with the savory dish gives these directions for preparing it: Put into the pan enough peanut oil to moisten it and cook a few narrow strips of fat pork without browning them. Add an onion, also cut to fine strips, a little water, and some bean and mushroom sauces. Boil ten minutes. Then add mushrooms cut into small pieces, sliced water nuts, sprouted beans, and celery and bamboo cut fine. These should all be in about equal proportions. Stir in a clove of chopped garlic, salt and pepper, and cook until all are tender; this will require only a few minutes. Butter or olive oil might be substituted for the peanut oil and pork.

Chow mein—in English fried noodles—is one of the Chinese dishes which the most conservative American diner usually likes. The noodle paste, made of flour and egg, is cut into the narrowest strips and fried in deep fat. It comes to the table an attractive, golden-brown heap, with the top delicately garnished with strips of green garlic and onion cooked in oil until they are clear, and over them is a lightly arranged layer of boiled ham and the white meat of chicken, also in tiny strips.

Soft tissue paper crumpled and bunched and placed beneath the folds of skirts in packing will prevent wrinkling. It is also useful in sleeves and fancy waists.

Guipure laces, especially in black, are noted on the new hats and dresses.

Suit of Black Velvet.

Simple and elegant is this Russian blouse and plain spirt of black velvet; the slip skirt being of black taffeta, the blouse lining of white with tucked chemisette of edged black baby velvet. The ruffle is of black net edged with black baby velvet, over ruffles of white silk. Ties of white and black ribbon.

White the Rage in Paris.

White is the rage in Paris. They are making as many white gowns there now as in the summer. A trousseau lately completed in a famous atelier contained twenty all-white costumes. For the ornamentation of the crepe de chine and gauzy evening gowns, silver embroidery was used, and the house frocks of wool and silk were trimmed with hand-done white embroideries, braid, gimp, and the like. It is easier to wear white in Paris than in London, for Paris is as clean a city as can be, and such is the "contrariness" of life, it is also the city of the cheapest and most perfect cleansing. The Parisienne may put on her white frock with a light heart. But even in cities not so clean, white serge and cloth, carefully worn, keeps fresh longer than the uninitiated could believe, and cleans again like new. As for white satin linings to coats, provided the satin be good, it is the best lining known for wear.

A CHAT with Housekeepers

Instead of raisins in cakes and puddings, try dates.

A pinch of salt will make the white of an egg beat more quickly.

A pinch of borax in cooked starch will make the clothes stiffer and whiter.

A spoonful of vinegar put into the water in which meats or fowl are boiled makes them tender.

A pillow of red clover blossoms will, it is said, be found soothing to persons who suffer from nervous headache.

To prevent articles of iron or steel from rusting immerse or wash them for a few moments with a solution of carbonate of potash or soda.

IS THE OLDEST CLERK.

A Kentucky Man Who Has Held Office for 66 Consecutive Years.

Richard White of Kentucky is the oldest clerk in the executive department in Washington, according to a correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. With the exception of a postmaster in New York state, who has held his office for 74 consecutive years, White is believed to be the oldest man in point of service, as well as in years, in the federal employ. He was appointed in 1836, and therefore has spent 66 years in the service of the government. He was a personal friend of Henry Clay, and the letter of Mr Clay to President Andrew Jackson recommending the appointment of "my dear friend, Richard White," is on file in the treasury department.

Mr. White was born in 1814, and thus has passed the Biblical term of human life by 18 years. In addition to his record of long-continuous service, he holds another record that is without parallel. Nearly every government clerk takes the full 30-day annual leave of absence authorized by law, and the majority of them also take advantage of the 30-day sick leave in each year. In all his experience Mr. White has never exceeded 10 days in his absence from the department in any one year. Throughout his remarkable career he has been employed in the office where the accounts of the postoffice department are audited. He was appointed at a salary of $640 a year. For a brief time he drew $1,000 a year, but five years ago, because of growing feebleness, he was reduced to $840.

Auditor Castle, in whose department Mr. White is employed, says the veteran does his work to the satisfaction of his chiefs in spite of his great age. While no civil pension list is maintained by Uncle Sam, it is safe to say that Richard White will be assured of remaining on the government pay roll as long as he lives.

HOW THE ANIMALS FEED.

Characteristics of the Beasts When in Captivity.

An animal is almost as demonstrative when he is hungry as when he is in a rage. They are both natural feelings, and he sees no reason for disguising them. Human beings, who are affected in the same way as animals by hunger, pay tribute to civilization by not letting this appear. At an animal show in New York the wild occupants of the cages get very wild when the hour comes for them to be fed. A truck laden with meat and vegetables is wheeled around. Long before it gets to their cages the lions act as if beside themselves over the maddening prospect of food. The cages are very small, and yet a lion and lioness will often be in one. They tear from one side to the other, the lion jumping over the body of the lioness, rather than make a "longer trip around." Though they ought to have learned that each will get a share, they both plunge for the great chunk of meat. Once they get at it, they eat with a certain intensity, but deliberation.

The hyenas, "bounders," of the animal realm, are horribly greedy, and will steal from each other every chance they get. The apes, the "snobs" of animal kind, are rather fastidi- robust bird that it is, awaits its food with much stolidity, and when it gets its head of cabbage, pecks at it in a most contained, ladylike fasion. The stoical elephant is a placid eater, also, cus, if greedy. The ostrich, large,

Open Secrets.

The truth lies round about us,
All too closely to be sought;
So open to our vision that
'Tis hidden to our thought.

We know not what the glories
Of the grass, the flower, may be;
We needs must struggle for the sight
Of what we always see.

Waiting for storms and whirlwinds,
And to have a sign appear,
We deem not God is speaking
In the still small voice we hear.

In reasoning proud, blind leaders
Of the blind through life we go;
And do not know the things we see,
Nor see the things we know.

Single and indivisible,
We pass from change to change
Familiar with the strangest things
And with familiars strange.

We make the light through which we see
The light, and make the dark;
To hear the lark sing we must be
At heaven's gate with the lark.

The Point of View.

Old Moses, who belonged to Judge J——, of Macon, Miss., "befo' the wah," was for many years sexton and a devout member of the Presbyterian church, says Harper's Monthly. Shortly after the war the colored Methodists of the community held a rousing meeting, in which Moses loudly professed conversion, and joined the Methodist church. Some days afterward the judge met him, and asked: "How's this, Mose? I hear you have joined the Methodists. I thought I brought you up better than that."

Mose took off his hat and solemnly scratched his woolly pate as he, replied: "Yessir, massa, dat's so—dat's so—de 'Presbyterian people am a mighty fine people, and de Presbyterian church am a mighty fine church —but—massa—don't you tink it am powerful dismal fer a nigger?"

Realities of Life in Southern Cotton Mills

There is, in a corner of a far southern state, a little factory town, built in the heart of radiant nature, where blue skies, shining water and wood-crowned hills form a brilliant background, against which the colorless life of a cotton-mill people stands in startling contrast.

Hurrying to and from the mills at early morning, noon, or evening, you can see here a throng of weary women, boys and girls, young in years, and old in faces—one and all stamped with the mechanism of a work which has crowded out of their lives beauty, sweetness, ambition and aspiration.

They live in dreary little houses, cramped in space, without books, or pictures, or music, or social enjoyment. They have no recreations, no comforts, and their ignorance of all domestic science is truly deplorable. Their homes are seldom well kept. Night workers from the mill sleep almost all day in many of the houses, and Saturday afternoon, the half-holiday at the mill, is the only available time for some of the women to attend to domestic duties. They are always poorly clad. The flimsy cottons and cheap worsteds for which they spend their hard-earned pittance are usually gaudy deceptions, which never wear, and lose all semblance of color in the first washing.

Wash-day, by the way, is a movable feast in this district, for the women are bound by no fossilized traditions concerning Monday.

The most pitiable deficiency, however, in the housekeeping of these poor women, who have had so little time or opportunity to learn, is their inability to cook. They cannot properly prepare the simplest food, and when you see their unattractive, indigestible meals of heavy biscuit, ill-done meats, and indescribable slices of potato, you can no longer wonder at the pallid faces, poor constitutions and early aging of this people.

There is not a man, woman or child, though, in the whole community, who would not share the last crust of ill-baked bread with you, for generosity is their characteristic virtue.

They are singularly without imagination. "It wasn't drawed out of them when they were children," and no subtile touch of fancy ever gilds the commonplace for them. The mill is real; work is real; they must have real money to buy real food, and anything that does not bear the hallmark of materialistic reality is, to say the least, suspicious. The very children turn a deaf ear to the most alluring fairy tale. Fairies are foreign to the environment.

Funerals, marriages, and quarrels are the diversions of the neighborhood.

Funerals are of paramount interest, being, as it were, outside mill limits, and appealing to the sensational side of their nature.—New York Evening Post.

Beware of the man who owns a soft, persuasive voice.

Clergyman to Listen Silently to Heresy

When the Methodist Episcopal church at Stratford, Conn., is built it will stand upon land secured in a stranger fashion than congregations usually adopt to establish their places of worship.

It will be paid for by a man who believes Methodist doctrines almost blighted his life and who devotes himself to arguing against them. In recompense he demands that the minister, the Rev. Royal W. Raymond, listen to him expound his doctrines for eleven hours, during which time he is to endeavor to convert the clergyman to his own theories.

For eleven hours Mr. Raymond will listen to heresy, and he will be paid at the rate of $20 an hour.

Thaddeus E. Peck is the theist who is willing to pay this price for the undivided attention of a clergyman while he expounds his theories of religious belief and endeavors to prove that Methodism is built upon a fallacy. He is a chemist. For a long time he and the minister, being neighbors, had been accustomed to undertaking long arguments on religious subjects until the clergyman, seeing that he was wasting his force on an obstacle which had no intentions of being converted, quit the pastime—as it was to the chemist—and refused to be drawn into discussion.

The chemist found that he could not engage the minister in conversation regarding religion and there were no more arguments until the church decided to build a new place of worship. There were no funds with which to buy the land, and then the chemist came forward with his startling proposition.

He proposed to pay the minister for listening to him discuss religious beliefs as he held them. The minister laid the proposal before his congregation, and after due debate it was decided to accept this sacrifice on the part of the clergyman, who was willing to make a martyr of himself for the good of his congregation.

The arrangements have been made and the chemist will soon begin his conversations. The Rev. Mr. Raymond has stipulated that he shall not have to undergo all the discussion at one time. He will take an hour one week and another the next. Thus he will distribute the ordeal over several months.

The condition is that he shall not dispute or argue. He must sit at respectful attention and hear the doctrines he holds most highly subjected to the most caustic criticism the chemist is capable of delivering. He and his congregation are positive that nothing but good will come of this strange way of raising money for a church.

Buried Pine Forest a Profitable Find

The collecting of what is called rainbow wood is a comparatively new industry in Maine.

Though the dwellers along the seaboard have known for years that driftwood picked up from salt water gave out iridescent tints when burned in open grates, they attached no value to the coloring of the flames until the rich summer visitors came down East and changed the picking of driftwood from an occupation akin into idleness into a profitable calling.

For five years the whole coast line of Penobscot bay has been scoured in quest of wood, and when the supply grew scarce and the price advanced from $10 to $25 a cord, a Boston chemist grew rich from inventing a powder which when burned with dry wood yielded colors nearly as bright as the genuine wood from the sea.

This fall Emery Bowden, a farmer, who sold considerable driftwood in former years, went to the salt meadows at the foot of his field and began to dig his year's supply of muck, which was used as bedding for his stock and for house-banking. When he had excavated a hole about ten feet deep he came to a flooring of great pine trees, which had been imbedded in the peat for ages.

The limbs had rotted away and the bark and sapwood had gone, but the dry heart of the trees was as sound as in life. Kindling a fire about a log of this wood, Bowden found that it gave out very brilliant hues of indigo and green, showing that the aged wood was filled with salts of iodine and chlorine.

No sooner had he made this discovery than he stopped digging muck and went to mining rainbow wood. He loaded a schooner with cut wood and sent it to his Boston patrons, who paid him $22 a cord for the cargo and asked for more.

Since then Bowden has hired all the men who are willing to work and is digging out the trunks in his fossil forest and selling them at fancy prices. The deposit of pine trees lies between the clay subsoil and the overgrowth of peat, and is fully six feet in depth.

A EUROPEAN PRACTICAL JOKE.

All Right in Theory, but Somewhat Dangerous in Practice.

Here is a practical joke which is now causing much amusement in Europe. As you walk along a street with some friend say to him: "You see that man in front of us? Well, I'll bet you $5 that I'll knock his hat over his ears."

Your friend will naturally accept your wager, and all you have to do is to step up behind the unsuspecting man and hit his hat such a blow with your fist that it will come down over his eyes. Ten to one he will begin to fume and swear like a trooper, and while he is struggling to get his hat back into its former position, you must pull your own hat down over your eyes, just as though someone had subjected you to similar treatment.

As a result, when he turns around to attack you, he will conclude that you, too, have been insulted by some one, and the next minute both of you will be looking in every direction for the ruffian who has damaged your hats and disturbed your temper.

Then you will condole with each other for a few minutes, after which you will rejoin your friend and demand the $5 you have won.

Preacher Tells Good Story.

Dr. William McElveen, the popular clergyman of the Shawmut Congregational church, appeared in a new role the other evening when he took the stump at a Foss rally in the South End. Dr. McElveen, while preserving all the dignity of a minister, was exceedingly funny. He kept the audience laughing all the time he was on the platform, and when he concluded and sat down they insisted that he continue.

He then told a story about a negro who called his sixteenth child Judas Iscariot because, like Judas of old, "it would have been better for him if he had never been born." The story brought down the house. There are few men who can speak from the pulpit and from the stump with equal success.—Boston Journal.

13 LIVES ARE LOST

EXPLOSION IN ELECTRIC PLANT OF SWIFT PACKING ESTABLISHMENT.

CAUSE OF DISASTER NOT KNOWN

HUGE BOILERS CRASH THROUGH ROOF AND FLY HUNDREDS OF FEET.

FLAMES ATTACK THE PLANT

RESCUE OF INJURED HINDERED BY GREEDY FLAMES THAT ADD TO HORROR.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—With a deafening noise a boiler in Swift & Co.'s plant exploded shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Thirteen lives were sacrificed and scores of employes, visitors and others were injured. Huge boilers were sent through the roof of the structure and hurled hundreds of feet. Nobody within the boiler room survived to tell the story of the accident, and it may never be known what caused the explosion. A careful investigation, however, convinced the experts that the explosion was the result of carelessness on the part of an employe, whose life was lost.

Five minutes after the explosion nothing of the building but a pile of twisted iron, bricks and mortar remained.

Flames Attack Wreck.

Sheets of flame sprang from the ruins and the spectators realized that it would be impossible to save the lives of those who were caught in the wreck. The explosion was of such force that adjoining buildings were wrecked, torn and twisted like toys.

Men, women and boys at work in adjoining departments were hurled through the windows to the ground below. Many of them escaped with but slight bruises, but most of the victims were hurt to such an extent that it was necessary to remove them to hospitals. The others were taken to their homes.

While the fire was still burning, police, firemen and employes of the packing firms began digging in the ruins. Soon the mangled remains of a man was discovered. At the same time other rescuers were digging with desperation to rescue several victims who were still alive.

Bodies, Torn, Bruised.

Bodies, torn, bruised or mangled, were taken from the ruins and sent to the morgues.

Many theories were advanced as to the responsibility for the disaster. One inspector declared that the explosion had been caused by cold water injected into the boiler, but a majority of the investigators hold the opinion that the catastrophe had been caused by low water.

Nothing definite was learned, however, and as all the men in the boiler room were killed, it is not likely the cause of the accident will ever be known.

It is not thought the loss to Swift & Co. will amount to more than $50,000.

DRIVEN ASHORE.

Two Barges Strike a Reef and May Be a Total Loss.

Put-in-Bay, Ohio, Dec. 2—The steam barge D. M. Frost, owned by L. B. Harker of Marine City, Mich., and the barge Mosher, owned by Capt. David Hutchinson of Port Huron, struck Starve island reef in Saturday night's gale, and it is feared that both vessels will be a total loss.

The Ross was beached on the south shore of Put-in-Bay, and the Mosher lies on the reef with her back broken. The Mosher is not insured.

FIGHT WITH ROBBERS.

Sheriff and His Deputy Come Out Second Best.

Lamar, Colo., Dec. 2.—While pursuing three men suspected of having held up and robbed the postmaster at Carlton, near here, on Friday last, Sheriff Frank M. Tate and Deputy J. H. Frisbie came suddenly upon the men early this morning. The latter opened fire on the officers, wounding Tate in the arm. Frisbie's horse was shot from under him. The three men escaped. A large band of cowboys is on the trail of the men.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 2.—Fred Kohlepp, a jeweler of Lewiston, in this county, was accidentally shot by a comrade, Newmann of this city, a member of the Winona high school football team, while hunting in the vicinity of Utica to-day. A full charge of shot from a gun which Newman was carrying struck Kohlepp in the right shoulder. He was picked up and taken to the farm of Mr. Woodworth, where he was given attention until a physician could arrive. It was found that the wound was of a very serious nature, and he was brought to this city on an extra train to-night and taken to the hospital. He is very low, and it is thought that he cannot live twenty-four hours. His parents reside at Alma, Wis.

NO HOPE FOR BANNOCKBURN

Canadian Steamer and Crew of Twenty Given Up for Lost.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 2. — The steamer Bannockburn with her crew of twenty men is given up for lost by local marine men. The report that she was ashore near Michipicoten seems to be without foundation. This is supposed to be the missing boat.

Electric Line a Certainty.

Black River Falls, Wis., Dec. 2. — The surveyors of the new electric railroad between here and La Crosse are now working between Melrose and this city, and will no doubt reach here this week. The survey being made follows the route last surveyed by the McHugh surveyors three years ago, until it passes Melrose, then instead of following the river it keeps due north to Disco, thence to this city. From Melrose it runs about four miles west of the old survey, and it is thought the route will be much easier to work. The projectors consider the road a certainty this time and that work may be begun on the grading early in the spring.

CAUSES FOR ALARM

GREAT DANGER OF FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE BECOMING EPIDEMIC.

GREAT LOSS TO STOCK DEALERS

SHIPMENTS OF STOCK ALL OVER THE COUNTRY WOULD BE AFFECTED.

EXPERTS WILL STAMP IT OUT

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT IS WORKING TO CHECK THE EPIDEMIC.

Chicago, Dec. 2—That Chicago's live stock business is in danger of thousands of dollars damage from the foot and mouth disease that has attacked cattle and sheep and swine all over New England is the opinion of Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture.

"If the disease gets west of the Hudson river it will affect shipments of live stock all over the country," he said at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon, soon after his arrival from Washington. "The disease spreads like a prairie fire, and should it get into Chicago the damage to the business of this city and the country shipping here would be thousands upon thousands of dollars."

The secretary, accompanied by his son Jasper, is in Chicago to attend the International Live Stock exposition at the stock yards. He will remain here until this evening, and then return to Washington to direct the experts of the agricultural department in the work of checking the spread of the epidemic in New England.

"To protect the ports of New York and Baltimore the department has closed up the ports of Boston and Portland to shipments of cattle, sheep and hogs," said Secretary Wilson. "The order closing up these ports went into effect yesterday. As long as the

Epidemic Is Confined to the New England States exporting can continue out of New York and Baltimore. But there is much danger of the disease spreading outside of the states in which it is now thought to be confined, for the efforts to fight it are hampered by stock owners not reporting the epidemic, and the experts from the department having to ferret out the places where it is prevalent. We do not know exactly how bad the epidemic is, or how long it has been in the country. The department heard of it only four days ago. I have sent Dr. Solomon, chief of the bureau of animal industry; Dr. James Law of Cornell university and Dr. Pearson of Philadelphia, all well known authorities in veterinary surgery, into New England to investigate the conditions, and they will report to me in a few days as to how bad the epidemic is."

This is the first time in eighteen years that the foot and mouth disease has attacked cattle or sheep or swine in any part of the United States. Secretary Wilson said that it was brought to this country without any doubt from Europe, where it is prevalent all the time.

"We hope to get it entirely stamped out in a short time," he said. "Perhaps in three or four weeks."

To Kill Infected Animals.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Dr. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry of the agricultural department, will leave for Boston to-day to take personal charge of the war which will be waged by the department against the dread foot and mouth disease now prevalent among the New England States.

Dr. Salmon will have from 50 to 100 assistants distributed throughout the infected districts and cattle will be slaughtered whenever necessary, as there is no effectual remedy against the disease, and the killing of all infected animals will prove cheapest in the long run.

KILLED BY BURGLARS.

Watchman Loses His Life While Defending Property in His Charge.

Valparaiso, Ind., Dec. 2.—In the little town of Westville, six miles east of here, Wesley Reynolds, watchman of the Westville State bank, was shot and instantly killed by burglars last night while defending the bank safe from their attack. After killing Reynolds the desperadoes, who were followed by citizens, fought their way to liberty and are still at large. The watchman saved the bank at the cost of his life, for the burglars did not have time to blow open the safe after killing the watchman. It is thought one of them was wounded.

D., where his parents reside. He was a member of Grigsby's rough riders in 1898, and had also spent several years in South Africa in the mines. His remains will be shipped to Vermillion.

Gruenhagen at Prior and University avenues, and resulted in the serious injury of Swan Johnson, 24 Phalen Creek, and Patrolman W. Gavin of the Prior avenue police station. FRAUD IN THE LAND OFFICES.

Minnesota Will Come In for a Share of Investigations Ordered.

Washington, Dec. 1. — The land office department has decided to make a thorough investigation of the Northern Minnesota land offices at Duluth, Crookston and St. Cloud. It is claimed that many fraudulent entries have been reported, and, as there is a general shaking up all over the country as a result of recent disclosures made by special agents of the general land office, Minnesota is to be included. Some of the special agents who unearthed the frauds in Nebraska are to be detailed on the Minnesota work.

COLLISION OF TRAINS.

East-Bound Passenger Crashes Into a Work Train.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 1. — An open switch caused the Northwestern passenger train, east-bound, to run into a work train on that road near Lytle's, fifteen miles above here. Four men, members of the bridge crew, were eating dinner in the tool car, which was struck by the engine, and quite seriously hurt. They were brought to the city and taken to the La Crosse hospital. The engineer and fireman jumped and were badly scratched. Aside from the shaking up, the passengers experienced no trouble.

La Follette early in January, will recommend that an appropriation be made for the establishment of a state hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis. It will also urge the legislature to appropriate a large enough fund to carry on the work of stamping out this disease, which, it is believed, can be done if the outdoor treatment now in vogue in the East is introduced.

ARSON AT YANKTON.

Three Attempts Are Made to Burn Buildings.

Yankton, S. D., Dec. 1. — Three attempts were made by incendiaries to burn buildings here last night. Only one was successful. Daniel Piggott's barn was burned. In the Pierce hotel the floors were soaked with oil before the match was applied. At the house of Mrs. Fall, excelsior was pushed in the cellarway and then fired. The latter attempts were frustrated without serious loss. There is no clue to the identity of the firebugs.

ANOTHER CRUELLY MUTILATED

BLINDED AND HIS TONGUE AMPUTATED AS AN EXAMPLE TO OTHERS.

WELCOME TO CAPT. PERSHING

MOROS EXTEND CORDIAL GREETING TO THE AMERICAN FORCE.

Manila, Dec. 2. — Five natives of Zambales province, who had volunteered to guide the constabulary in the mountains where they were hunting ladrones, were left temporarily while the constables were on a reconnaisance.

They were captured by ladrones under the command of Manalang, and four of them were brutally murdered. The fifth was blinded and his tongue amputated, after which he was conducted to the outskirts of the town in which he had been captured and abandoned as an example to other natives. Strong forces are in pursuit of Manalang, who is the last ladrone leader in Zambales, the province being otherwise pacified.

A hundred Aetac Pagans have visited the governor of Tarlac and asked permission to build a town in the lowland. The request was made on behalf of several tribes numbering 500, who desire to abandon their wandering life in the hills. They requested also that the Americans for them. The committee proposes to journey to Manila to interest the bureau of non-Christian tribes in their proposed plan. The action of these natives will have a gratifying effect on the pacifying of the province.

Capt. Pershing and the sixty men who accompanied him across Lake Lanao, Island of Mindanao, safely reached the camp at Madayo. Capt. Pershing met numerous friendly Moros, who invited him to visit their rancherias. He received formal salutes at Madayo in the presence of 500 natives from all the adjacent districts, including Bacolod, Macin and Taraca, besides others from more remote districts who had never before met Americans.

Capt. Pershing explained the objects of his expedition. His propositions were well received. Two dattos petitioned him to visit a neighboring district to arbitrate between the combattants in a petty war that existed there. The expedition will proceed to Iligan.

MUCH BOODLE FOR THE BOERS.

Kruger and Leyds Thought to Be Feathering Their Nests.

Berlin, Dec. 2.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports, making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which it is supposed have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight.

The bars are destined for Former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located, on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

Gen. Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter Gen. Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. Gen. Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused, averring that the money was to be used in upholding Boer nationality in the future. Gen. Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

KING EDWARD SUFFERS A FALL.

Misses the Banister While Going Down Stairs.

London, Dec. 2.—King Edward had a narrow escape from a serious accident at Windsor castle last Tuesday evening. In going down the stairway leading from his private apartments he put out his hand to grasp the banister, but, miscalculating the distance, lost his foothold and plunged heavily forward. Fortunately a servant who was just ahead, caught him and checked a fall which might have had serious consequences, as the king would have dashed against the heavy marble base of a statue standing on the landing. The king was much shaken, but uninjured. He handsomely rewarded the servant who saved him.

The next day the king had a broad, white satin tape laid along the banisters, and ordered the lighting of this and other staircases in the castle improved.

TO AVOID A CONFLICT.

Plan Proposed to Satisfy the Debtors of Venezuela.

London, Dec. 1. — Important steps were taken in London yesterday with a view to satisfying all the financial and diplomatic claims by foreign powers and bondholders against Venezuela. It is maintained that if the contemplated action meets with approval, Germany and Great Britain will have no cause to take the vigorous steps now contemplated. The details of the suggested settlement have not been communicated to the European governments as yet. Their gist first will be known to the United States government, probably to-day. The medium of such communication is one of the most important Anglo-American bankers. Venezuela's propositions were mentioned to Ambassador Choate yesterday, but pending the result of the direct representations at Washington no action will be taken by the embassy toward suggesting that Venezuela be given time to submit her proposals.

The new development in the crisis which is regarded as hourly growing more serious, is due to the arrival in Europe of a secret delegation from the Venezuelan government empowered to deal with the outstanding liabilities of that republic. Until a suitable plan could be arranged it was considered inadvisable to communicate with the foreign ministers at Caracas, with whom relations have become so strained. Such a plan has now, in the belief of the delegation, been arrived at and unofficially, through the Anglo-American banker, the attitude of the United States will be ascertained. Besides, the state department will be put in a position to be able to judge of the value of Venezuela's offer and her good faith in the matter.

TORTURE THE CHRISTIANS.

Revolting Barbarism in the Methods of Turks.

London, Dec. 1.—Mail advices received here from Constantinople under date of Nov. 24 say:

"In spite of all official denials the porte is adopting barbarous methods in crushing the Macedonian peasants. The winter has set in and the danger from revolutionary bands is over, yet the Turkish authorities seem to think the time has come to act. In the face of promises of free pardon to those who returned to their homes, Christian villagers have been shockingly tortured to make them betray alleged concealed depots of arms or give information regarding the working of the Macedonian committees. The bastinado has been frequently employed until the victims were crippled for life, their feet being beaten to a pulp by Turkish soldiers. Peasants were also hung by their heels to the ceiling and hot eggs were put in their arm-pits. Even priests were not spared, while the troops openly plunder the peasants, who are being driven to despair."

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

COUNTRY STILL CONTINUES IN A PERIOD OF UNBOUNDED PROSPERITY.

REGULATION OF THE TRUSTS

PRESIDENT URGES CONGRESS TO GIVE THE SUBJECT EARNEST ATTENTION.

TARIFF MUST NOT BE DISTURBED

FINANCIAL LEGISLATION — HARMONY BETWEEN CAPITAL AND LABOR.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

We still continue in a period of unbounded prosperity. This prosperity is not the creature of law, but undoubtedly the laws under which we work have been instrumental in creating the conditions which made it possible, and by unwise legislation it would be easy enough to destroy it. There will undoubtedly be periods of depression. The wave will recede; but the tide will advance. This nation is seated on a continent flanked by two great oceans. It is composed of men the descendants of pioneers, or, in a sense, pioneers themselves; of men winnowed out from among the nations of the Old World by the energy, boldness and love of adventure found in their own eager hearts. Such a nation, so placed, will surely wrest success from fortune.

As a people we have played a large part in the world, and we are bent upon making our future even larger than the past. In particular, the events of the last four years have definitely decided that, for woe or for weal, our place must be great among the nations. We may either fail greatly or succeed greatly; but we cannot avoid the endeavor from which either great failure or great success must come. Even if we would, we cannot play a small part. If we should try, all that would follow would be that we should play a large part ignobly and shamefully.

But our people, the sons of the men of the Civil war, the sons of the men who had iron in their blood, rejoice in the present and face the future high of heart and resolute of will. Ours is not the creed of the weakling and the coward; ours is the gospel of hope and of triumphant endeavor. We do not shrink from the struggle before us. There are many problems for us to face at the outset of the twentieth century—grave problems abroad and still graver at home; but we know that we can solve them and solve them well, provided only that we bring to the solution the qualities of head and heart which were shown by the men who, in the days of Washington, founded this government, and, in the days of Lincoln, preserved it.

No country has ever occupied a higher plane of material well-being than ours at the present moment. This well-being is due to no sudden or accidental causes, but to the play of the economic forces in this country for over a century; to our laws, our sustained and continuous policies; above all, to the high individual average of our citizenship. Great fortunes have been won by those who have taken the lead in this phenomenal industrial development, and most of these fortunes have been won not by doing evil, but as an incident to action which has benefited the community as a whole. Never before has material well-being been so widely diffused among our people. Great fortunes have been accumulated, and yet in the aggregate these fortunes are small indeed when compared to the wealth of the people as a whole. The plain people are better off than they have ever been before. The insurance companies, which are practically mutual benefit societies—especially helpful to men of moderate means—represent accumulations of capital which are among the largest in this country. There are more deposits in the savings banks, more owners of farms, more well-paid wageworkers in this country now than ever before in our history.

Of course, when the conditions have favored the growth of so much that was good, they have also favored somewhat the growth of what was evil. It is eminently necessary that we should endeavor to cut out this evil, but let us keep a due sense of proportion; let us not in fixing our gaze upon the lesser evil forget the greater good. The evils are real and some of them menacing, but they are the outgrowth, not of misery or decadence, but of prosperity—of the progress of our gigantic industrial development. This industrial development must not be checked, but side by side with it should go such progressive regulation as will diminish the evils. We should fail in our duty if we did not try to remedy the evils, but we shall succeed only if we proceed patiently, with practical common sense as well as resolution, separating the good from the bad and holding on to the former while endeavoring to get rid of the latter.

Public Regulation of Trusts.

In my message to the present congress at its first session I discussed at length the question of the regulation of those big corporations commonly doing an interstate business, often with some tendency to monopoly, which are popularly known as trusts. The experience of the past year has emphasized, in my opinion, the desirability of the steps I then proposed. A fundamental requisite of social efficiency is a high standard of individual energy and excellence; but this is in no wise inconsistent with power to act in combination for aims which cannot so well be achieved by the individual acting alone. A fundamental basis of civilization is the inviolability of property; but this is in no wise inconsistent with the right of society to regulate the exercise of the artificial powers which it confers upon the owners of property, under the name of corporate franchises, in such a way as to prevent the misuse of these powers. Corporations, and especially combinations of corporations, should be managed under public regulation. Experience has shown that under our system of government the necessary supervision cannot be obtained by state action. It must therefore be achieved by national action. Our aim is not to do away with corporations; on the contrary, these big aggregations are an inevitable development of modern industrialism, and the effort to destroy them would be futile unless accomplished in ways that would work the utmost mischief to the entire body politic. We can do nothing of good in the way of regulating and supervising these corporations until we fix clearly in our minds that we are not attacking the corporations, but endeavoring to do away with any evil in them. We are not hostile to them; we are merely determined that they shall be so handled as to subserve the public good. We draw the line against misconduct, not against wealth. The capitalist who, alone or in conjunction with his fellows, performs some great industrial feat by which he wins money is a well-doer, not a wrongdoer, provided only he works in proper and legitimate lines. We wish to favor such a man when he does well. We wish to supervise and control his actions only to prevent him from doing ill. Publicity can do no harm to the honest corporation, and we need not be overtender about sparing the dishonest corporation.

In curbing and regulating the combinations of capital which are or may become injurious to the public we must be careful not to stop the great enterprises which have legitimately reduced the cost of production, not to abandon the place which our country has won in the leadership of the international industrial world, not to strike down wealth with the result of closing factories and mines, of turning the wage-worker idle in the streets and leaving the farmer without a market for what he grows. Insistence upon the impossible means delay in achieving the possible, exactly as, on the other hand, the stubborn defense alike of what is good and what is bad in the existing system, the resolute effort to obstruct any attempt at betterment, betrays blindness to the historic truth that wise evolution is the sure safeguard against revolution.

No more important subject can come before the congress than this of the regulation of interstate business. This country can not afford to sit supine on the plea that under our peculiar system of government we are helpless in the presence of the new conditions, and unable to grapple with them. The power of the congress to regulate interstate commerce is an absolute and unqualified grant, and without limitations other than those prescribed by the Constitution. The congress has constitutional authority to make all laws necessary and proper for executing this power, and I am satisfied that this power has not been exhausted by any legislation now on the statute books. It is evident, therefore, that evils restrictive of commercial freedom and entailing restraint upon national commerce fall within the regulative power of the congress, and that a wise and reasonable law would be a necessary and proper exercise of congressional authority to the end that such evils should be eradicated.

I believe that monopolies, unjust discriminations, which prevent or cripple competition, fraudulent overcapitalization and other evils in trust organizations and practices which injuriously affect interstate trade can be prevented under the power of the congress to "regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states" through regulations and requirements operating directly upon such commerce, the instrumentalities thereof, and those engaged therein.

I earnestly recommend this subject to the consideration of the congress with a view to the passage of a law reasonable in its provisions and effective in its operations, upon which the questions can be finally adjudicated that now raise doubts as to the necessity of constitutional amendment. If it prove impossible to accomplish the purposes above set forth by such a law, then, assuredly, we should not shrink from amending the Constitution so as to secure beyond peradventure the power sought.

The congress has not heretofore made any appropriation for the better enforcement of the anti-trust law as it now stands. Very much has been done by the department of justice in securing the enforcement of this law, but much more could be done if congress would make a special appropriation for this purpose, to be expended under the direction of the attorney general.

Tariff Must Not Be Disturbed.

One proposition advocated has been the reduction of the tariff as a means of reaching the evils of the trusts which fall within the category I have described. Not merely would this be wholly ineffective, but the diversion of our efforts in such a direction would mean the abandonment of all intelligent attempts to do away with these evils. Many of the largest corporations, many of those which should certainly be included in any proper scheme of regulation, would not be affected in the slightest degree by a change in the tariff, save as such change interfered with the general prosperity of the country. The only relation of the tariff to big corporations as a whole is that the tariff makes manufactures profitable, and the tariff remedy proposed would be in effect simply to make manufactures unprofitable. To remove the tariff as a punitive measure directed against trusts would inevitably result in ruin to the weaker competitors who are struggling against them. Our aim should be not by unwise tariff changes to give foreign products the advantage over domestic products, but by proper regulation to give domestic competition a fair chance; and this end cannot be reached by any tariff changes which would affect unfavorably all domestic competitors, good and bad alike. The question of regulation of the trusts stands apart from the question of tariff revision.

Stability of economic policy must always be the prime economic need of this country. This stability should not be fossilization. The country has acquiesced in the wisdom of the protective tariff principle. It is exceedingly undesirable that this system should be destroyed or that there should be violent and radical changes therein. Our past experience shows that great prosperity in this country has always come under a protective tariff; and that the country can not prosper under fitful tariff changes at short intervals. Moreover, if the tariff laws as a whole work well and if business has prospered under them and is prospering, it is better to endure for a time slight inconveniences and inequalities in some schedules than to upset business by too quick and too radical changes. It is most earnestly to be wished that we could treat the tariff from the standpoint solely of our business needs. It is, perhaps, too much to hope that partisanship may be entirely excluded from consideration of the subject, but at least it can be made secondary to the business interests of the country—that is, to the interests of our people as a whole. Unquestionably these business interests will best be served if together with fixity of principle as regards the tariff we combine a system which will permit us from time to time to make the necessary reapplication of the principle to the shifting national needs. We must take scrupulous care that the reapplication shall be made in such a way that it will not amount to a dislocation of our system, the mere threat of which (not to speak of the performance) would produce paralysis in the business energies of the community. The first consideration in making these changes would, of course, be to preserve the principle which underlies our whole tariff system—that is, the principle of putting American business interests at least on a full equality with interests abroad, and of always allowing a sufficient rate of duty to more than cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well-being of the wage-worker, like the well-being of the tiller of the soil, should be treated as an essential in shaping our whole economic policy. There must never be any change which will jeopardize the standard of comfort, the standard of wages of the American wage-worker.

One way in which the readjustment sought can be reached is by reciprocity treaties. It is greatly to be desired that such treaties may be adopted. They can be used to widen our markets and to give a greater field for the activities of our producers on the one hand, and on the other hand to secure in practical shape the lowering of duties when they are no longer needed for protection among our own people, or when the minimum of damage done may be disregarded for the sake of the maximum of good accomplished. If it prove impossible to ratify the pending treaties, and if there seem to be no warrant for the endeavor to execute others, or to amend the pending treaties so that they can be ratified, then the same end—to secure reciprocity—should be met by direct legislation.

Wherever the tariff conditions are such that a needed change cannot with advantage be made by the application of the reciprocity idea, then it can be made outright by a lowering of duties on a given product. If possible, such change should be made only after the fullest consideration by practical experts, who should approach the subject from a business standpoint, having in view both the particular interests affected and the commercial well-being of the people as a whole. The machinery for providing such careful investigation can readily be supplied. The executive department has already at its disposal methods of collecting facts and figures; and if the congress desires additional consideration to that which will be given the subject by its own committees, then a commission of business experts can be appointed whose duty it should be to recommend action by the congress after a deliberate and scientific examination of the various schedules as they are affected by the changed and changing conditions. The unhurried and unbiased report of this commission would show what changes should be made in the various schedules, and how far these changes could go without also changing the great prosperity which this country is now enjoying, or upsetting its fixed economic policy.

The cases in which the tariff can produce a monopoly are so few as to constitute an inconsiderable factor in the question; but of course if in any case it be found that a given rate of duty does promote a monopoly which works ill, no protectionist would object to such reduction of the duty as would equalize competition.

In my judgment, the tariff on anthracite coal should be removed, and anthracite put actually, where it now is nominally, on the free list. This would have no effect at all save in crises; but in crises it might be of service to the people.

Financial Legislation Desirable.

Interest rates are a potent factor in business activity, and in order that these rates may be equalized to meet the varying needs of the seasons and of widely separated communities, and to prevent the recurrence of financial stringencies which injuriously affect legitimate business, it is necessary that there should be an element of elasticity in our monetary system. Banks are the natural servants of commerce, and upon them should be placed, as far as practicable, the burden of furnishing and maintaining a circulation adequate to supply the needs of our diversified industries and of our domestic and foreign commerce; and the issue of this should be so regulated that a sufficient supply should be always available for the business interests of the country.

It would be unwise and unnecessary at this time to attempt to reconstruct our financial system, which has been the growth of a century; but some additional legislation is, I think, desirable. The mere outline of any plan sufficiently comprehensive to meet these requirements would transgress the appropriate limits of this communication. It is suggested, however, that all future legislation on the subject should be with the view of encouraging the use of such instrumentalities as will automatically supply every legitimate demand of productive industries and of commerce, not only in the kinds of money interchangeable, and, at the will of the holder, convertible into the established gold standard.

I again call your attention to the need of passing a proper immigration law, covering the points outlined in my message to you at the first session of the present congress; substantially such a bill has already passed the house.

Harmony Between Capital and Labor.

How to secure fair treatment alike for labor and for capital, how to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employe, without weakening individual initiative, without hampering and cramping the industrial development of the country, is a problem fraught with great difficulties and one which it is of the highest importance to solve on lines of sanity and far-sighted common sense, as well as of devotion to the right. This is an era of federation and combination. Exactly as business men find they must often work through corporations, and as it is a constant tendency of these corporations to grow larger, so it is often necessary for laboring men to work in federations, and these have become important factors of modern industrial life. Both kinds of federation, capitalistic and labor, can do much good, and as a necessary corollary they can both do evil. Opposition to each kind of organization should take the form of opposition to whatever is bad in the conduct of any given corporation or union—not of attacks upon corporations as such, nor upon unions as such; for some of the most far-reaching beneficent work for our people has been accomplished through both corporations and unions. Each must refrain from arbitrary or tyrannous interference with the rights of others. Organized capital and organized labor alike should remember that in the long run the interest of each must be brought into harmony with the interest of the general public; and the conduct of each must conform to the fundamental rules of obedience to the law, of individual freedom and of justice and fair dealing toward all. Each should remember that in addition to power it must strive after the realization of healthy, lofty and generous ideals. Every employer, every wage-worker, must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor so long as he does not infringe upon the rights of others. It is of the highest importance that employer and employe alike should endeavor to appreciate each the viewpoint of the other and the sure disaster that will come upon both in the long run if either grows to take as habitual an attitude of sour hostility and distrust toward the other. Few people deserve better of the country than those representatives both of capital and labor—and there are many such—who work continually to bring about a good understanding of this kind, based upon wisdom and upon broad and kindly sympathy between employers and employed. Above all, we need to remember that any kind of class animosity in the political world is, if possible, even more wicked, even more destructive to national welfare, than sectional, race or religious animosity. We can get good government only upon condition that we keep true to the principles upon which this nation was founded, and judge each man not as a part of a class, but upon his individual merits. All that we have a right to ask of any man, rich or poor, whatever his creed, his occupation, his birthplace, or his residence, is that he shall act well and honorably by his neighbor and by his country. We are neither for the rich man as such nor for the poor man as such; we are for the upright man, rich or poor. So far as the constitutional powers of the national government touch these matters of general and vital moment to the nation, they should be exercised in conformity with the principles above set forth.

New Seat in the Cabinet Recommended.

It is earnestly hoped that a secretary of commerce may be created, with a seat in the cabinet. The rapid multiplication of questions affecting labor and capital, the growth and complexity of the organizations through which both labor and capital now find expression, the steady tendency toward the employment of capital in huge corporations, and the wonderful strides of this country toward leadership in the international business world justify an urgent demand for the creation of such a position. Substantially all the leading commercial bodies in this country have united in requesting its creation. It is desirable that some such measure as that which has already passed the senate be enacted into law. The creation of such a department would in itself be an advance toward dealing with and exercising supervision over the whole subject of the great corporations doing an interstate business; and with this end in view the congress should endow this department with large powers, which could be increased as experience might show the need.

Reciprocal Trade Relations Favored.

I hope soon to submit to the senate a reciprocity treaty with Cuba. On May 20 last the United States kept its promise to the island by formally vacating Cuban soil and turning Cuba over to those whom her own people had chosen as the first officials of the new republic.

Cuba lies at our doors, and whatever affects her for good or for ill affects us also. So much have our people felt this that in the Platt amendment we definitely took the ground that Cuba must hereafter have closer political relations with us than with any other power. Thus in a sense Cuba has become a part of our international political system. This makes it necessary that in return she should be given some of the benefits of becoming part of our economic system. It is, from our own standpoint, a short-sighted and mischievous policy to fail to recognize this need. Moreover, it is unworthy of a mighty and generous nation, itself the greatest and most successful republic in history, to refuse to stretch out a helping hand to a young and weak sister republic just entering upon its career of independence. We should always fearlessly insist upon our rights in the face of the strong, and we should with ungrudging hand do our generous duty by the weak. I urge the adoption of reciprocity with Cuba not only because it is eminently for our own interests to control the Cuban market and by every means to foster our supremacy in the tropical lands and waters south of us, but also because we, of the giant republic of the north, should make all our sister nations of the American continent feel that whenever they will permit it we desire to show ourselves disinterestedly and effectively their friend.

A convention with Great Britain has been concluded, which will be at once laid before the senate for ratification, providing for reciprocal trade arrangements between the United States and Newfoundland on substantially the lines of the convention formerly negotiated by the secretary of state, Mr. Blaine. I believe reciprocal trade relations will be greatly to the advantage of both countries.

Good Word for International Arbitration.

As civilization grows warfare becomes less and less the normal condition of foreign relations. The last century has seen a marked diminution of wars between civilized powers; wars with uncivilized powers are largely mere matters of international police duty, essential for the welfare of the world. Wherever possible, arbitration or some similar method should be employed in lieu of war to settle difficulties between civilized nations, although as yet the world has not progressed sufficiently to render it possible or necessarily desirable to invoke arbitration in every case. The formation of the international tribunal which sits at The Hague is an event of good omen from which great consequences for the welfare of all mankind may flow. It is far better, where possible, to invoke such a permanent tribunal than to create special arbitrators for a given purpose.

It is a matter of sincere congratulation to our country that the United States and Mexico should have been the first to use the good offices of The Hague court. This was done last summer with most satisfactory results in the case of a claim at issue between us and our sister republic. It is earnestly to be hoped that this first case will serve as a precedent for others, in which not only the United States but foreign nations may take advantage of the machinery already in existence at The Hague.

I commend to the favorable consideration of the congress the Hawaiian fire claims, which were the subject of careful investigation during the last session.

Panama Canal and Pacific Cable.

The congress has wisely provided that we shall build at once an isthmian canal, if possible at Panama. The attorney general reports that we can undoubtedly acquire good title from the French Panama Canal company. Negotiations are now pending with Colombia to secure her assent to our building the canal. This canal will be one of the greatest engineering feats of the twentieth century; a greater engineering feat than has yet been accomplished during the history of mankind. The work should be carried out as a continuing policy without regard to change of administration; and it should be begun under circumstances which will make it a matter of pride for all administrations to continue the policy.

The canal will be of great benefit to America and of importance to all the world. It will be of advantage to us industrially and also as improving our military position. It will be of advantage to the countries of tropical America. It is earnestly to be hoped that all of these countries will do as some of them have already done with signal success, and will invite to their shores commerce and improve their material conditions by recognizing that stability and order are the prerequisites of successful development. No independent nation in America need have the slightest fear of aggression from the United States. It behooves each one to maintain order within its own borders and to discharge its just obligations to foreigners. When this is done, they can rest assured that, be they strong or weak, they have nothing to dread from outside interference. More and more the increasing interdependence and complexity of international political and economic relations render it incumbent on all civilized and orderly powers to insist on the proper policing of the world.

During the fall of 1901 a communication was addressed to the secretary of state, asking whether permission would be granted by the president to a corporation to lay a cable from a point on the California coast to the Philippine islands by way of Hawaii. A statement of conditions or terms upon which such corporation would undertake to lay and operate a cable was volunteered.

Inasmuch as the congress was shortly to convene, and Pacific-cable legislation had been the subject of consideration by the congress for several years, it seemed to me wise to defer action upon the application until the congress had first an opportunity to act. The congress adjourned without taking any action, leaving the matter in exactly the same condition in which it stood when the congress convened.

Meanwhile it appears that the Commercial Pacific Cable company had promptly proceeded with preparations for laying its cable. It also made application to the president for access to and use of soundings taken by the United States steamer Nero, for the purpose of discovering a practicable route for a transpacific cable, the company urging that with access to these soundings it could complete its cable much sooner than if it were required to take soundings upon its own account. Pending consideration of this subject, it appeared important and desirable to attach certain conditions to the permission to examine and use the soundings, if it should be granted.

In consequence of this solicitation of the cable company, certain conditions were formulated, upon which the president was willing to allow access to these soundings and to consent to the landing and laying of the cable, subject to any alterations or additions thereto imposed by the congress. This was deemed proper, especially as it was clear that a cable connection of some kind with China, a foreign country, was a part of the company's plan. This course was, moreover, in accordance with a line of precedents, including President Grant's action in the case of the first French cable, explained to the congress in his annual message of December, 1875, and the instance occurring in 1879 of the second French cable from Brest to St. Pierre, with a branch at Cape Cod.

These conditions prescribed, among other things, a maximum rate for commercial messages and that the company should construct a line from the Philippine islands to China, there being at present, as is well known, a British line from Manila to Hongkong.

The representatives of the cable company kept these conditions long under consideration, continuing, in the meantime, to prepare for laying the cable. They have, however, at length acceded to them, and an all-American line between our Pacific coast and the Chinese empire, by way of Honolulu and the Philippine islands, is thus provided for, and is expected within a few months to be ready for business.

Among the conditions is one reserving the power of the congress to modify or repeal any or all of them. A copy of the conditions is herewith transmitted.

Of Porto Rico it is only necessary to say that the prosperity of the island and the wisdom with which it has been governed have been such as to make it serve as an example of all that is best in insular administration.

Peace and Happiness in Philippines.

On July 4 last, on the one hundred and twenty-sixth anniversary of the declaration of independence, peace and amnesty were promulgated in the Philippine islands. Some trouble has since from time to time threatened with the Mohammedan Moros, but with the late insurrectionary Filipinos the war has entirely ceased.

Civil government has now been introduced. Not only does each Filipino enjoy such rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as he has never before known during the recorded history of the islands, but the people taken as a whole now enjoy a measure of self-government greater than that granted to any other Orientals by any foreign power and greater than that enjoyed by any other Orientals under their own governments, save the Japanese alone. We have not gone too far in granting these rights of liberty and self-government; but we have certainly gone to the limit that in the interest of the Philippine people themselves it was wise or just to go. To hurry matters, to go faster than we are now going, would entail calamity on the people of the islands. No policy ever entered into by the American people has vindicated itself in more signal manner than the policy of holding the Philippines. The triumph of our arms, above all the triumph of our laws and principles, has come sooner than we had any right to expect. Too much praise cannot be given to the army for what it has done in the Philippines both in warfare and from an administrative standpoint in preparing the way for civil government; and similar credit belongs to the civil authorities for the way in which they have planted the seeds of self-government in the ground thus made ready for them. The courage, the unflinching endurance, the high soldierly efficiency, and the general kind-heartedness and humanity of our troops have been strikingly manifested. There now remain only some fifteen thousand troops in the islands. All told, over one hundred thousand have been sent there.

Of course, there have been individual instances of wrongdoing among them. They warred under fearful difficulties of climate and surroundings; and under the strain of the terrible provocations which they continually received from their foes, occasional instances of cruel retaliation occurred. Every effort has been made to prevent such cruelties, and finally these efforts have been completely successful. Every effort has also been made to detect and punish the wrongdoers. After making all allowance for these misdeeds, it remains true that few indeed have been the instances in which war has been waged by a civilized power against semi-civilized or barbarous forces where there has been so little wrongdoing by the victors as in the Philippine islands. On the other hand, the amount of difficult, important and beneficent work which has been done is well-nigh incalculable.

Taking the work of the army and the civil authorities together, it may be questioned whether anywhere else in modern times the world has seen a better example of real constructive statesmanship than our people have given in the Philippine islands. High praise should also be given those Filipinos, in the aggregate very numerous, who have accepted the new conditions and joined with our representatives to work with hearty good will for the welfare of the islands.

General Staff for Army Recommended.

The army has been reduced to the minimum allowed by law. It is very small for the size of the nation, and most certainly should be kept at the highest point of efficiency. The senior officers are given scant chance under ordinary conditions to exercise commands commensurate with their rank, under circumstances which would fit them to do their duty in time of actual war. A system of maneuvering our army in bodies of some little size has been begun and should be steadily continued. Without such maneuvers it is folly to expect that in the event of hostilities with any serious foe even a small army corps could be handled to advantage. Both our officers and enlisted men are such that we can take hearty pride in them. No better material can be found. But they must be thoroughly trained, both as individuals and in the mass. The marksmanship of the men must receive special attention. In the circumstances of modern warfare the man must act far more on his own individual responsibility than ever before, and the high individual efficiency of the unit is of the utmost importance. Formerly this unit was the regiment; it is now not the regiment, not even the troop or company; it is the individual soldier. Every effort must be made to develop every workmanlike and soldierly quality in both the officer and the enlisted man.

I urgently call your attention to the need of passing a bill providing for a general staff and for the reorganization of the supply departments on the lines of the bill proposed by the secretary of war last year. When the young officers enter the army from West Point they probably stand above their compeers in any other military service. Every effort should be made, by training, by reward of merit, by scrutiny into their careers and capacity, to keep them of the same high relative excellence throughout their careers.

The measure providing for the reorganization of the militia system and for securing the highest efficiency in the national guard, which has already passed the house, should receive prompt attention and action. It is of great importance that the relation of the national guard to the militia and volunteer forces of the United States should be defined, and that in place of our obsolete laws a practical and efficient system should be adopted.

Provision should be made to enable the secretary of war to keep cavalry and artillery horses, worn out in long performance of duty. Such horses fetch but a trifle when sold, and rather than turn them out to the misery awaiting them when thus disposed of, it would be better to employ them at light work around the posts, and when necessary to put them painlessly to death.

An Efficient Navy Insures Peace.

For the first time in our history naval maneuvers on a large scale are being held under the immediate command of the admiral of the navy. Constantly increasing attention is being paid to the gunnery of the navy, but it is yet far from what it should be. I earnestly urge that the increase asked for by the secretary of the navy in the appropriation for improving the markmanship be granted. In battle the only shots that count are the shots that hit. It is necessary to provide ample funds for practice with the great guns in time of peace. These funds must provide not only for the purchase of projectiles, but for allowances for prizes to encourage the gun crews, and especially the gun pointers, and for perfecting an intelligent system under which alone it is possible to get good practice.

There should be no halt in the work of building up the navy, providing every year additional fighting craft. We are a very rich country, vast in extent of territory and great in population; a country, moreover, which has an army diminutive indeed when compared with that of any other first-class power. We have deliberately made our own certain foreign policies which demand the possession of a first-class navy. The isthmian canal will greatly increase the efficiency of our navy if the navy is of sufficient size; but if we have an inadequate navy, then the building of the canal would be merely giving a hostage to any power of superior strength. The Monroe doctrine should be treated as the cardinal feature of American foreign policy; but it would be worse than idle to assert it unless we intended to back it up, and it can be backed up only by a thoroughly good navy. A good navy is not a provocative of war. It is the surest guaranty of peace.

Each individual unit of our navy should be the most efficient of its kind as regards both material and personnel that is to be found in the world. I call your special attention to the need of providing for the manning of the ships. Serious trouble threatens us if we can not do better than we are now doing as regards securing the services of a sufficient number of the highest type of sailormen, of sea mechanics. The veteran seamen of our war ships are of as high a type as can be found in any navy which rides the waters of the world; they are unsurpassed in their profession, in resolution, in readiness, in thorough knowledge of their profession. They deserve every consideration that can be shown them. But there are not enough of them. It is no more possible to improvise a crew than it is possible to improvise a war ship. To build the finest ship, with the deadliest battery, and to send it afloat with a raw crew, no matter how brave they were individually, would be to insure disaster if a foe of average capacity were encountered. Neither ships nor men can be improvised when war has begun.

We need a thousand additional officers in order to properly man the ships now provided for and under construction. The classes at the naval school at Annapolis should be greatly enlarged. At the same time that we thus add the officers where we need them, we should facilitate the retirement of those at the head of the list whose usefulness has become impaired. Promotion must be fostered if the service is to be kept efficient.

The lamentable scarcity of officers, and the large number of recruits and of unskilled men necessarily put aboard the new vessels as they have been commissioned, has thrown upon our officers, and especially on the lieutenants and junior grades, unusual labor and fatigue and has gravely strained their powers of endurance. Nor is there sign of any immediate let-up in this strain. It must continue for some time longer, until more officers are graduated from Annapolis, and until the recruits become trained and skillful in their duties. In these difficulties incident upon the development of our war fleet the conduct of all our officers has been creditable to the service, and the lieutenants and junior grades in particular have displayed an ability and a steadfast cheerfulness which entitles them to the ungrudging thanks of all who realize the disheartening trials and fatigue to which they are of necessity subjected.

There is not a cloud on the horizon at present. There seems not the slightest chance of trouble with a foreign power. We most earnestly hope that this state of things may continue; and the way to insure its continuance is to provide for a thoroughly efficient navy. The refusal to maintain such a navy would invite trouble, and if trouble came would insure disaster. Fatuous self-complacency or vanity, or short-sightedness in refusing to prepare for danger, is both foolish and wicked in such a nation as ours; and past experience has shown that such fatuity in refusing to recognize or prepare for any crisis in advance is usually succeeded by a mad panic of hysterical fear once the crisis has actually arrived.

Extension of Rural Free Delivery.

The striking increase in the revenues of the postoffice department shows clearly the prosperity of our people and the increasing activity of the business of the country.

The receipts of the postoffice department for the fiscal year ending June 30 last amounted to $121,848,047.26, an increase of $10,216,853.87 over the preceding year, the largest increase known in the history of the postal service. The magnitude of this increase will best appear from the fact that the entire postal receipts for the year 1860 amounted to but $8,518,067.

Rural free delivery is no longer in the experimental stage; it has become a fixed policy. The results following its introduction have fully justified the congress in the large appropriations made for its establishment and extension. The average yearly increase in postoffice receipts in the rural districts of the country is about 2 per cent. We are now able, by actual results, to show that where rural free delivery has been established to such an extent as to enable us to make comparisons the yearly increase has been upward of 10 per cent.

On Nov. 1, 1902, 11,650 rural free delivery routes had been established and were in operation, covering about one-third of the territory of the United States available for rural free delivery service. There is now awaiting the action of the department petitions and applications for the establishment of 10,748 additional routes. This shows conclusively the want which the establishment of the service has met and the need of further extending it as rapidly as possible. It is justified both by the financial results and by the practical benefits to our rural population; it brings the men who live on the soil into closer relations with the active business world; it keeps the farmer in daily touch with the markets; it is a potential educational force; it enhances the value of farm property, makes farm life far pleasanter and less isolated, and will do much to check the undesirable current from country to city.

It is to be hoped that the congress will make liberal appropriations for the continuance of the service already established and for its further extension.

Irrigation and Protection of Forests.

Few subjects of more importance have been taken up by the congress in recent years than the inauguration of the system of nationally-aided irrigation for the arid regions of the Far West. A good beginning therein has been made. Now that this policy of national irrigation has been adopted, the need of thorough and scientific forest protection will grow more rapidly than ever throughout the public land states.

Legislation should be provided for the protection of the game, and the wild creatures generally, on the forest reserves. The senseless slaughter of game, which can by judicious protection be permanently preserved on our national reserves for the people as a whole, should be stopped at once. It is, for instance, a serious count against our national good sense to permit the present practice of butchering off such a stately and beautiful creature as the elk for its antlers or tusks.

So far as they are available for agriculture, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the remaining public lands should be held rigidly for the home builder, the settler who lives on his land and for no one else. In their actual use the desert land law, the timber and stone law, and the commutation clause of the homestead law have been so perverted from the intention with which they were enacted as to permit the acquisition of large areas of the public domain for other than actual settlers and the consequent prevention of settlement. Moreover, the approaching exhaustion of the public ranges has of late led to much discussion as to the best manner of using these public lands in the West which are suitable chiefly or only for grazing.

The sound and steady development of the West depends upon the building up of homes therein. Much of our prosperity as a nation has been due to the operation of the homestead law. On the other hand we should recognize the fact that in the grazing region the man who corresponds to the homesteader may be unable to settle permanently if only allowed to use the same amount of pasture land that his brother, the homesteader, is allowed to use of arable land. One hundred and sixty acres of fairly rich and well-watered soil, or a much smaller amount of irrigated land, may keep a family in plenty, whereas no one could get a living from 160 acres of dry pasture land capable of supporting at the outside only one head of cattle to every ten acres. In the past great tracts of the public domain have been fenced in by persons having no title thereto, in direct defiance of the law forbidding the maintenance or construction of any such unlawful inclosure of public land. For various reasons there has been little interference with such inclosures in the past, but ample notice has now been given the trespassers, and all the resources at the command of the government will hereafter be used to put a stop to such trespassing.

In view of the capital importance of these matters, I commend them to the earnest consideration of the congress, and if the congress finds difficulty in dealing with them from lack of thorough knowledge of the subject, I recommend that provision be made for a commission of experts specially to investigate and report upon the complicated questions involved.

Alaska in Need of Better Laws.

I especially urge upon the congress the need of wise legislation for Alaska. It is not to our credit as a nation that Alaska, which has been ours for thirty-five years, should still have as poor a system of laws as is the case. No country has a more valuable possession—in mineral wealth, in fisheries, furs, forests, and also in land available for certain kinds of farming and stockgrowing. It is a territory of great size and varied resources, well fitted to support a large permanent population. Alaska needs a good land law and such provisions for homesteads and preemptions as will encourage permanent settlement. We should shape legislation with a view not to the exploiting and abandoning of the territory, but to the building up of homes therein. The land laws should be liberal in type, so as to hold out inducements to the actual settler whom we most desire to see take possession of the country. The forests of Alaska should be protected, and, as a secondary but still important matter, the game also, and at the same time it is imperative that the settlers should be allowed to cut timber, under proper regulations, for their own use. Laws should be enacted to protect the Alaskan salmon fisheries against the greed which would destroy them. They should be preserved as a permanent industry and food supply. Their management and control should be turned over to the commission of fish and fisheries. Alaska should have a delegate in the congress. It would be well if a congressional committee could visit Alaska and investigate its needs on the ground.

In dealing with the Indians our aim should be their ultimate absorption into the body of our people. But in many cases this absorption must and should be very slow. In portions of the Indian Territory the mixture of blood has gone on at the same time with progress in wealth and education, so that there are plenty of men with varying degrees of purity of Indian blood who are absolutely indistinguishable in point of social, political, and economic ability from their white associates. There are other tribes which have as yet made no perceptible advance toward such equality. To try to force such tribes too fast is to prevent their going forward at all. Moreover, the tribes live under widely different conditions. Where a tribe has made considerable advance and lives on fertile farming soil it is possible to allot the members lands in severalty much as is the case with white settlers. There are other tribes where such a course is not desirable. On the arid prairie lands the effort should be to induce the Indians to lead pastoral rather than agricultural lives, and to permit them to settle in villages rather than to force them into isolation.

The large Indian schools situated remote from any Indian reservation do a special and peculiar work of great importance. But, excellent though these are, an immense amount of additional work must be done on the reservations themselves among the old, and above all among the young, Indians. The first and most important step toward the absorption of the Indian is to teach him to earn his living; yet it is not necessarily to be assumed that in each community all Indians must become either tillers of the soil or stock raisers. Their industries may properly be diversified, and those who show special desire or adaptability for industrial or even commercial pursuits should be encouraged so far as practicable to follow out each his own bent.

Every effort should be made to develop the Indian along the lines of natural aptitude, and to encourage the existing native industries peculiar to certain tribes, such as the various kinds of basket weaving, canoe building, smith work and blanket work. Above all, the Indian boys and girls should be given confident command of colloquial English, and should ordinarily be prepared for a vigorous struggle with the conditions under which their people live, rather than for immediate absorption into some more highly developed community.

The reports of the several executive departments are submitted to the congress with this communication.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

"Do not let us speak of this subject. There are many reasons why it is unpleasant."

"I beg your pardon," responded Purcell, looking more keenly at the young man, and not liking the signs of his past life visible on his face.

"He may have squandered that magnificent property," the old man thought.

Caryl read disapproval on the old man's countenance, and he set himself to work to remove that feeling, and few could succeed better in such an undertaking.

Before the evening had gone by Purcell was sure he had misjudged his visitor.

Very wisely, Caryl did not pay any special attention to Kate, but his shrewd glance told him that she was entertained.

"I hope you'll allow me to call here frequently while I'm in the place, Mr. Purcell, he said, as he rose to depart. "It will give me great pleasure to do so."

Of course the request was granted, and Caryl went away thinking that the first wedge was entered.

Up stairs, in the stranger's sick room, was the sound of voices as soon as Caryl had gone. The man had been lying quietly, and the nurse had thought him asleep. But when the door closed he turned his eyes toward her and asked, imperatively:

"Who has been below?"

"I don't know—some of the neighbors, I suppose," carelessly.

"No," raising himself on his elbow—"no, it wasn't one of the neighbors. I wish you'd ask Miss Purcell to come up here a moment."

Of course the woman could not refuse to do as he asked, though she was a little out of patience with his whim. She thought she could attend to him quite as well.

She went down stairs and summoned the girl.

"You will think me childish," he said, with a wan smile, when Kate came to him, "but will you tell me who has just been down stairs with you? You know how plainly one hears through these unplastered walls, and his voice— Well, it cannot be, however," breaking off, abruptly.

"His name is Caryl. He came to this place quite by accident, I think, and the other day he pulled me out of the water when I was so foolish as to fall in."

Kate saw, with surprise, the emotion in the patient's face as he heard her words.

At another time he might have controlled himself better, but he was weak now. His hot fingers clenched themselves as he exclaimed, violently:

"I know it was his voice—suave and charming! He here! Curse him!,,

Kate knew not what to think. She stood in silence, wondering how both her father and this man were so moved at the sound of that name.

She thought it very odd that everybody should meet in this out-of-the-way place.

The sick man was not looking at her now; he was moving his head to and fro restlessly, while the flush on his face grew deeper and deeper.

At last he asked, turning again to the girl:

"Is he going to stay long here?"

"He did not say. I don't see why he should."

The stranger, looking at the girl, could easily guess why Ralph Caryl might decide to stay—the scoundrel!

"Does he know I am here?" was the next question.

"He does not know your name."

"How very strange that both he and I should happen here!" repeated the young man again. "I had hoped he never would cross my path again."

Then there was silence for so long that Kate moved toward the door, thinking he nothing more to say. But he detained her, this time speaking on a different subject.

"The doctor is sure I shall have a fever."

"He is sure you have one," was the answer.

"And how long am I to be laid up?"

"He thought you would not get out under a fornight at the least."

The look of pain and impatience in the man's face was sad to see, and Kate pitied him with all her heart, saying to herself:

"He is thinking of the woman he loves."

Presently he asked.

"Miss Purcell, will you write a note for me? I had hoped not to need it, but it's inevitable, I suppose."

Kate brought pen and paper, and waited his dictation.

"It is to Miss Lauriat. Just tell her how I am detained, and say that there is no cause for anxiety."

Kate did as she was told, making the letter as short as possible.

"Address it to Miss Laura Lauriat, No.— Locust street, Philadelphia. And will you please see that it is mailed immediately?"

Kat bowed her assent, and quickly sealed the letter, and rose to leave the room, but was stopped by his voice, saying:

"Stay one moment!" He extended his hand, and took hers as she came to the bed. "I have not thanked you," he said, looking at her with eyes that gave to Kate a momentary envy of Miss Laura Lauriat.

She had never seen such eyes before—so deep, so full of a passionate strength and truth.

"Do not thank me," she said, in her quiet, sweet tones. "It is but a trifle for me to do."

"Nevertheless, allow me to feel the pleasure of gratitude," he responded.

She withdrew her hand, smiling as she answered:

"I would not deprive you of any pleasure."

Then she left the room, and he fell into an uneasy sleep, in which he did not dream of his betrothed.

CHAPTER VII.

The Buried Paper.

Another week had passed, and matters were much in the same condition at Purcell's house. The low typhoid fever still continued to hold the stranger prisoner.

Richard Burt was in and out as he had been, treating Kate precisely as though he had never made a declaration, and succeeding in making her feel more at ease with him than ever before.

Ralph Caryl was very circumspect, and had called but twice, though he had managed to meet Kate, apparently by accident, several times in the course of the seven days.

When he had been told the sick man's name, if he had felt any surprise, Caryl did not show it in the least, and Kate almost began to think that the words the stranger had uttered concerning Caryl were the result of feverish fancies.

"Vance Rothesay," Caryl had repeated—"it's a very good name. It seems to me I have known people of all sorts of cognomen's, but I believe I never knew a Rothesay, did you?" looking up at Purcell.

And so keenly was Kate watching him that she fancied the look he gave her father was one of more curiosity than the question warranted; but she was not sure even of that, and she wondered, silently, about the matter, scarcely hearing the discussion concerning the Scotch name of Rothesay.

There were but two regular sleeping rooms in the little house, and now that Kate's was occupied, her father insisted upon giving up his own to his daughter, and himself occupying the lounge in the front room below stairs.

He liked the arrangement, for it enabled him to leave and enter the house with less noise than if he had to ascend the stairs, and he felt the desire for prospecting for treasure strong upon him again.

He had not yet looked at the papers he had found in that chest; he had refrained from doing so from day to day, with a sort of hoarding feeling, as one thinks of something precious that is hid away.

He had not the slightest reason for feeling thus. It would have been more just had he thought only with a shudder of that paper which he had taken from its dreadful resting place.

But, slowly and surely, Charles Purcell's mind was growing weak, and he had still a strange notion that near the spot where the skeleton of the child had been found the buried treasure was hidden from sight, and he had a vague idea that some hint of use might be found in the paper.

It was after 11 o'clock, and Kate had gone to bed, leaving her father sitting up reading.

He had seemed uneasy and restless, frequently asking why she did not retire, until she had left him, refraining from expressing any anxiety, for she knew such expressions annoyed him.

As soon as she had mounted the stairs, Purcell went to a cupboard and withdrew from it an oaken box, carefully locked.

It was in this he kept his drawings and plans concerning the piratical treasure of which he dreamed day and night. He would not allow even Dick Burt to take them.

He spread them before him beneath the light of the lamp, and his anxious face brightened as he examined them.

"They are title deeds to fortune," he muttered. "It's a fact that gold is hidden here, and I have only to find it. I can have missed it but by a few feet. Only let me have patience! I begin to wish Burt was not connected with me in this business. When I find the money I can pay him what I owe him, and have done with him. He seems to have given up the notion about Kate, and I am glad of it. I do not know how I could refuse him if he persisted; but 'twould be hard to compel Kate in a matter like that. Just let me pay all the obligation I'm under to Burt, and then I'm a free man again."

While he was murmuring thus to himself he was laying out the papers before him on the table, arranging and rearranging them.

Among them was the antiquated yellow book, which had pointed out, as he believed, the spot, near Gun Rock, where he and Burt had found the chest and its strange contents.

At length he took up the paper, blackened by the moisture of many years—the paper which had rested beneath the bones of that mysteriously-buried child.

In spite of his preoccupied mind, Purcell could not repress a shudder as he unfolded the manuscript. The touch of it reminded him too strongly of the feeling of horror and disappointment which had come over him when, expecting to see piles of gold, he had found but the withered body of an infant.

He was surprised to find so few written lines, for the paper seemed a sheet of foolscap folded three times; he had thought to see a page, at least of something, either of print or writing. Instead, there were only a few lines, and it was not easily that he deciphered them, so cramped were the words, and so time-stained and blackened the paper on which they were. But he read them at last:

"I am not used to defeat, and I defy fate to count me its slave. This child was in my way, and here it is. I shall never be found out, and I laugh at what men call justice. If I am ever such a fool as to be discovered, then let me suffer the fate of a fool."

Purcell read the words again and again, for their dreadful bravado was strangely fascinating. For the moment he forgot that there was no hint of the buried treasure, and, consequently, he had no interest in it.

He sat gazing at the paper, and his eye caught some characters in the corner below the lines, and he made them out to be the figures 1818. If that was the date, and it seemed likely, then the child had been buried forty years.

The boast of the guilty man had probably been fulfilled; he must be either dead now or an old man—a very old man, for it seemed impossible that a young man could have done this deed.

Purcell sat still, bent over the paper, and he did not heed the opening of the outer door and the entrance of some one.

It was Ralph Caryl, who had been smoking on the beach, and, seeing a light, had made bold to enter.

He looked rather astonished at sight of the papers spread on the table, and he wondered where that musty old document beneath Purcell's hand had come from.

His sharp, quick eyes had seen the writing on it—the peculiar, crabbed hand that would be remembered if ever seen, and, forgetting that he could have no right to read it, he bent over and mastered the lines in half the time that it had taken Purcell to read them.

As he drew back from the perusal his face was very white, and the hand that still held the cigar trembled so that the ashes fell to the floor.

Roused now, Purcell hastily huddled the papers together and exclaimed, angrily:

"How came you here?"

It was an instant of perceptible hesitation before Caryl replied. Then he said, in nearly his usual voice:

"I beg your pardon. I was smoking a cigar on the beach here, and, seeing a light, I took the liberty of entering. I am sorry to have disturbed you."

All the while that Caryl was speaking his glance kept wandering towards the manuscript, which was half-concealed by Purcell's hand. He longed to snatch it away and examine it at his leisure; but he dared not do it.

"You did rather startle me, to tell the truth," replied Purcell, with a forced smile. "I was amusing myself with these papers, instead of going to bed, as I ought."

"I should imagine you were studying geometry," went on Caryl, determined not to appear to notice that the old man did not wish to be asked about the papers. "There seems to be a lot of diagrams and figures among them. I wonder if you could explain this to me, now," putting his finger on one of the papers.

Purcell, alarmed, snatched the papers away, and then proceeded to gather them up, thus preventing Caryl from saying anything more concerning the one paper in which he was interested.

"Excuse me," said Purcell, hurriedly, "but I cannot endure to have my papers touched."

And in another moment they were all locked up in the oak chest.

Caryl had no pretext for lingering, and soon left, walking rapidly to his lodgings, his face set, his eyes filled with a look of horror and amazement, mingled with incredulity.

When he reached his own room he did not go to bed. He quickly found a Boston paper of that date, and ran his finger down the list of times when the trains left the Worcester depot for a town in Western Massachusetts.

"There's no way of starting tonight," he whispered. "I can go to Boston in the 6 o'clock train in the morning and catch the 8 o'clock train for Springfield. It's the best I can do, and why need I be in such a hurry? I'm a fool! But that handwriting could not be mistaken; there's no other like it. And yet horrible to think of such a thing! I'm not an innocent lamb myself—but that sort of thing is beyond me!"

With these words on his lips, he had taken up a volume of Voltaire in the original, and turned to the fly-leaf on which his name was written, together with a few lines of quotations from the author.

It was in precisely the same handwriting as that on the paper so strangely come into Charles Purcell's possession.

"If I could only have asked him where he found it," murmured Caryl, as he tore the leaf from the book and held it in the flame of a match until it was ashes. "But the old fellow acted so oddly that I couldn't do it—and he wouldn't have told me if I had."

Caryl drank a large glass of whisky and then went to bed. But he was so accustomed to the potation that it did not induce slumber, and he had only just fallen asleep when the newly-risen sun, sending its rays across his bed, awakened him.

He dressed quickly, went down stairs and announced that business called him away for a few days, gulped down the coffee they gave him, and started for the railroad station, about a mile away.

CHAPTER VIII.

Caryl Visits his Home.

The bright sunlight of the morning did something toward dissipating the depression that had been upon Ralph Caryl the night before.

He hurried along the road that led between the pond and the ocean, finding it in his heart to admire the sheen of the ocean—the white sails that stood out like things beautifully alive in the shine of the sun and sky.

"I was a bit silly last night," he thought, lighting a cigar as he strode on; "but 'twas enough to give a fellow a shock. I shan't be easy until I have been up home. Still, it is the most unlikely thing that they will know anything. However, I'll play the part of a dutiful son, and go."

It was toward sunset on that afternoon that he was riding in a country stage toward a village nestled among the hills of Western Massachusetts. Caryville had not been intruded upon by railroads, and the traveler was forced to go a dozen miles by coach before reaching the place.

As he came nearer it seemed more and more foolish that he should have taken this journey.

What if he had not seen his mother and sister for two years? His domestic affections were not so active as to have made him miserable at the separation.

But he was conscious of an unusual sensation when he saw the gray walls, the tower, the avenue of trees of the Caryl place in Caryville.

It looked just the same as ever; but when he left the coach and was walking up the approach, he saw that everything showed signs of decay. The grounds were a mass of weeds; some of the trees had been cut down; in short, Caryl Hall was very different from what it had been in his father's time.

He mounted the steps and rang the bell, something like remorse in his heart that he should have squandered so much.

A middle-aged woman, the sole remaining servant in the place, opened the door, uttering an exclamation at sight of "Mr. Ralph," and he pushed past her, impatient to see his mother.

Where are they?" he asked.

"In the dining room; it's just supper time," was the answer.

And he went along the well-remembered passage to the dining room, which had been grand carved oak and walnut—resplendent with shining silver.

The oak and the walnut panelings were still there, but all the other grandeur had departed.

Two women sat at a small table at the end of the room. There was an odor of tea and hot cake in the air.

Both figures rose as Caryl appeared, and the elder one uttered an exclamation.

"It is Ralph!" and she came forward to embrace him.

"It is your long-lost child!" airily said Ralph. "'Home returned to love and thee,' mamma. Do I bring joy to your fond heart?"

"Of course you do," was the reply. "But where have you been, and what did make you stay so ?It has been difficult for me to reply to everybody, as if I knew where you were, when I had not the remotest idea. I've mentioned Baden, a general remark about the Rhine, and so on, until I was at my wit's end, and everybody in Caryville inquiring for 'Mr. Ralph.'"

"How kind of them!" he said. "I suppose it was all affection and no curiosity on their parts. Is that Julia?"

The other figure came forward at this, and extended her had, which Ralph took, kissed her, and exclaimed, in real earnest:

"I vow, the Caryl's are a handsome family, Jue! I should say you had improved, and there was no particular need of that; you were beautiful when I saw you last. Where in the deuce are the men? I should say you ought to have been snapped up long ago!"

"Thank you, brother, you are very good," said Julia, in a quiet, satirical voice; "but men are not so eager to 'snap up' a girl without a penny. And then, again, there isn't a man in this miserable little village."

"You ought to go to some large city," said Ralph. "You'd find a parti there, without doubt."

"One can't go to a large city without money—unless you have found the way to do so, Ralph," was the meaning reply.

"Nonsense, Julia!" he responded. "Don't begin taunting me at the first moment. I don't set up for a saint, and if you were a man, I think you'd not be much better than I am."

"I would go out into the world, at least," Julia said.

"Come, Ralph—come and have a cup of tea," interrupted Mrs. Caryl. And please don't begin sparring as soon as this."

The three sat down at the table, which was very sparingly laid, and when the mother mentioned the fact, Ralph said:

"Don't mention such a thing to me; I've been on short rations myself too much lately not to think this is luxury."

Reckless though he was, Ralph was not sufficiently hardened not to feel uncomfortable at the thought that intruded itself very strongly here—that it was owing a great deal to his guiltily-expensive habits that his mother and sister were obliged to scrimp in their daily food. But he allowed none of that feeling to be seen. He gay and chatty, told stories, made the two women laugh, and enlivened them greatly.

"But how did it happen, Ralph, that you went to Europe so suddenly?" asked Julia, looking sharply at her brother.

"Don't be curious, Jule," he said, with perfect self-possession. "You ought to know by this time that it is not always for fair women to know what brave men are doing. I was in a scrape—that's enough to know."

"Well, I hope you'll tell the minister's wife the same story that I did about it, that's all. 'Twouldn't be pleasant for them to differ in that respect."

"Decidedly not! And if you'll kindly mention to me your version of the affair, I'll make it my own."

"Certainly. I said that your health had so far given out on account of the unusual confinement of the counting room that your employer had sent you to Europe to look after his interests there, hoping it would benefit your health."

"Capitally done! I'll remember it—and also that my health is much improved."

"I never saw you dressed so unlike yourself, Ralph," went on Julia, who was secretly furious that her brother should have squandered so much money. "If you have been in London, why didn't you get your coat at Poole's, and your pantaloons—"

"Spare me, sweet sister!" interrupted Ralph, secretly annoyed, but determined not to show it. "I am very conscious that I am dressed infernally—for me; but, by Jove, I wouldn't be if I had the cash! As it is, I am much more presentable than when I landed. I'm afraid you would not have recognized me. But these are 'ready-made' clothes, and are despicable. Still, I don't think the villagers here would know the difference."

"Probably not—and Miss Ainslee is not here now."

Ralph could not keep his countenance from changing a little at mention of the only woman he had ever loved; but he said, coolly:

"Miss Ainslee is married long ago, I suppose?"

"No; but she is to be married next month."

"Who is the happy man?"

"A Mr. Vernon, from New York—immensely rich."

"That is well. Of course, she loves him?"

Ralph could not look at his sister as he said this.

"I have not the slightest idea. They say he's everything a woman could wish, noble, upright, and all that."

"I congratulate her, most sincerely," said Ralph, in an intensely bitter voice.

Julia observed, in a softer tone:

"Of course, you could never expect to marry Marion Ainslie, Ralph; although I do think she was rather taken with you that summer. But she is really a glorious woman."

"And I am not a glorious man," with an unpleasant laugh. "Well, we won't discuss the matter."

When the two women rose to retire, late that night, as Ralph opened the door for them, after his sister had passed out, he put his hand on his mother's arm and said:

"I want to see you a moment, mother. Don't be alarmed; I haven't got into any new scrape."

Julia looked curiously back, but was obliged to leave them.

When his mother sat down, Ralph did not immediately speak. He stood leaning against the mantelpiece, looking down on the floor, his face showing that his thoughts were not pleasant.

"Well, what is it?" at last asked Mrs. Caryl.

"Do you know where my father was in 1818?"

"Why, that is the year we were married!" exclaimed Mrs. Caryl.

"That is true; but I had forgotten it. Where did father spend his time? Can you tell me?"

"Bless me, Ralph! You ask questions as if you were a lawyer. What are you trying to get at?"

"Never mind now; only answer me," said her son.

"Where was your father? He was, most of the time, in Philadelphia. I was there at the time, and he was very assiduous in his attentions. You know at one time my father refused his suit, but your father was poor then. Two or three months later he came into this Caryl property, and then we were married directly. I was such a young thing, and I was so pleased with the dresses, the presents, the journey! Your father was nearly forty then, and he tired of me when my beauty faded, after you were born, Ralph."

The woman sighed deeply. She had never loved her husband, but he had proved far from kind to her when his infatuation was over.

"How did he come into the property?" asked Ralph. "Tell me again. This place always used to be in the possession of the other branch of the Caryls."

(To be Continued.)

The Only Way.

"I'm going to study law," he announced.

"And practice it?"

"Oh no."

"Then why study it?"

"Well, I've always been told that a man never should sign a document that he does not thoroughly understand."

"That. I believe, is generally considered to be a good business principle."

"And I'm going to be a thorough-going business man or know the reason why."

"Well?"

"Well, I've just been looking over the lease of my flat, and it occurs to me that if I study hard from now until the first of next May I'll have a glimmering idea what it's all about when I have to sign another. What the agent told me I was signing could have been put in 100 words; what I actually signed amounted to about 2,000 words, badly tangled. I've either got to study law or violate a great business principle, unless we quit housekeeping and go to boarding."

That Settled It.

A butcher hastened to consult a neighboring lawyer, whose offices were down town, and to seek advice concerning damage done to his window by a boy that morning.

"Can I make the boy or his father pay?" inquired the client.

"You can, certainly," evasively replied the lawyer. "What is the value of the damage?"

"Two dollars," replied the butcher, triumphantly.

"Good! I will write a demand note—what's the name?"

"It was your boy," was the reply.

"Oh! Very well," remarked the lawyer, sitting back in his chair," you can consider the matter settled. My charge for the advice is $2."—New York Times.

The Coal Exchange.

He was from Chicago, and was seeing New York for the first time. Near the bridge entrance he stopped a district messenger and asked questions, explaining that this was his first visit.

"Yes," remarked the boy, "dat is der postoffice and dat is der city hall. All de exchanges is down Broadway."

"The coal exchange would be interesting just now," said the stranger. "Of course you have a coal exchange."

"Why, soit'nly," replied the boy. "Can't yer tell by de tall chimneys we changed hard for soft!"—New York Sun.

New "Wireless" Triumph.

Accounts of another wireless triumph are reported. The staff of the torpedo schoolship Vernon, at Portsmouth, England, has succeeded, after many experiments, in devising a scheme of keeping up communications by means of wireless telegraphy with submarine vessels when they are under water, and so ingenious is the contrivance that no part of the apparatus used for receiving purposes is visible on the surface when the boat in communication is beneath the water.—New York Times.

Excuses.

Excuses for absence handed to public school teachers are often calculated to evoke smiles. Here are two that were received on the same day last week by a teacher in one of the Manhattan schools:

Mendicant's Poetical Appeal.

A few additions to the list of mendicant's poetical appeals which the Evening Post printed some time ago, have been furnished by the Charity Organization society. The following is probably one of the most lugubrious bits of poetry extant:

Do you ever think as the Black Hearse passes by
That it won't be long until you and I
Goes riding out in a big Plumed Hack
And never remember of coming back?
Do you ever think as you strive for Gold
That a Dead Man's hand a Dollar can't hold?
You may pinch and tuck, and strive to save,
But you lose it all when you reach

As to the Manner of His Going.

"And must I walk the planks?" faltered the captive.

"Certainly," replied the smart Corsair, with a frown. "You don't suppose I'm going to supply you with an automobile, do you?"

Lost Twenty Years.

Kokomo, Ind., Dec. 1st.—Twenty years is a long time to take out of one person's life but that was the fate of Anna M. Willis of this place. For twenty years she suffered all the torments of Kidney Trouble, and anyone in that state is not living, but simply existing.

Now Anna M. Willis is fully recovered. She appreciates the pleasure of living again and never forgets to tell you how it is all because a friend advised her to try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

In speaking of her wonderful cure she says: For twenty years I suffered from Kidney Trouble. The disease was terrible in itself and it was all the more terrible because I could get no relief and my case seemed hopeless.

"But one day I got six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and by the time I had taken five boxes my pains had left me and I was a free woman."

Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heartfelt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly is it said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

GOMEZ SETTLES IT

AGED CUBAN WARRIOR TAKES A HAND IN THE LABOR TROUBLES.

"THROWS THE SCARE" INTO THEM

THREATENS TO CALL OUT WAR VETERANS TO MAINTAIN ORDER.

MEN WILL RETURN TO WORK

CENTRAL LABOR UNION DOES NOT CARE TO BRAVE GOMEZ'S WRATH.

Havana, Nov. 27.—The Central Labor union last night decided to call off the strike, and committees were appointed to inform the various unions of this decision. There probably will be a complete resumption of work today.

Much of the credit for the settlement of the strike is due to Gen. Gomez, who headed the committee which consulted yesterday the officials of the Havana Commercial company, against whom the strike was first directed.

After the conference Gen. Gomez and the majority of the committee expressed themselves as satisfied at the stand the company had taken. The officials maintained that they had not discriminated against Cuban apprentices, the fact being that the company's books showed that over 90 per cent of its apprentices were Cubans.

The company would maintain and even increase this ratio, but it refused to treat with the Central Labor union in matters pertaining to its employes. The officials said that they were always willing to meet a committee from their factories, and they agreed to open the factories again if the men returned to work.

Gen. Gomez and the committee afterward met the Central Labor union and the old warrior did not spare words in his condemnation of the action of the union in calling out the workmen. He said it was a revolution and not a strike, and that the war veterans stood ready to take up arms in support of the government in order to maintain order.

That ended the strike as far as the Central Labor union was concerned. It did not care to brave Gen. Gomez's wrath, and word was sent out as soon as possible to have the men return to work. There may be some difficulty with the local unions, but the backbone of the strike is broken and today will undoubtedly see most of the laborers at work.

DISTURBANCES RENEWED.

Conflicts Between Turkish Troops and Bulgarian Brigands.

Constantinople, Nov. 27.—Renewed disturbances are reported from the neighborhood of Monastir, seventy-five miles northwest of Salonica. Conflicts between the Turkish troops and Bulgarian brigand bands have taken place and some men have been killed and wounded on both sides. Reliable details concerning the situation are not obtainable. The British consul at Salonica, in a report to the British embassy here on the recent troubles in Northern Macedonia, said the agitators did their utmost to incite the Turks and provoke a massacre of the Christians, but the Turks remain quiet. The rebels even went to the length of murdering their own kinsmen in the hope of incriminating the Turks.

CONVICTED OF BIGAMY.

Appearance of First Wife Brought About the Verdict.

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 27.—Samuel Powell was placed on trial at 9 o'clock yesterday morning on a charge of bigamy, and convicted and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary at 3 o'clock, the jury having been out three minutes. Powell had deserted his wife and child in Cornwall, England, and married Mrs. Williams in Calumet a year ago, leaving his first wife destitute. Cornishmen throughout the copper country raised funds to bring her here to testify against her recreant husband.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court on Dec. 9 will have completed twenty-five years of service as a member of that court, and his friends at the bar have arranged to express their appreciation of his success by a dinner on that evening at the new Willard hotel in this city.

Foul Play Suspected.

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 27.—The body of Leon Tobear, an old resident of Clarksburg, was found near the South Shore track, at his home. No marks were found to indicate that Tobear was struck by a train. He had trouble with a neighbor a year ago, when he was almost clubbed to death. Tobear returned from Ishpeming late at night. Foul play is suspected.

WONDERFUL WORK.

Case No. 11,077.—David M. Bye, P. O. Address, Box 297, Midland, Mich., says: "Three months I was almost incapacitated from labor; could not sleep at night; had to walk the floor, owing to terrible pain in the hips, in the small of the back, in my instep and ankle of the right leg.

I was treated for sciatic rheumatism in the hospital, but received no benefit. One month ago I returned home and was given a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. To-day residents of the city can bear witness to the fact that I am able to work, and can also walk to my work without the aid of a walking stick or crutch.

In speaking of the immediate effect of Doan's Kidney Pills, I did not find them to deaden the pain, but quickly and surely to eradicate the cause of it.

I am of the opinion that Doan's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for kidney ailments that can be procured.

I was especially careful in my diet, in order to give the treatment fair play.

In conclusion, I shall be pleased, at any time, to answer any inquiries regarding my case, from anyone desirous of obtaining it."

PEANUT CURE INSOMNIA.

Man Who Tried the Experiment Says It Succeeds All Right.

Peanuts as a cure for consumption are widely known, and believed in. Now a Roxborough man comes forward with a peanut cure for insomnia. He says of it: "I had been a poor sleeper for five years. Violent exercise, drugs and other remedies had given me no relief. Finally, at the suggestion of a vegetarian, I tried the peanut. I put beside my bed a bag of peanuts newly roasted, shelled and salted, and on my first attack of insomnia I ate fifty, masticating them very thoroughly—giving, in fact, twenty-five chews to each nut. While taking this large dose, I felt a gradual drowsiness stealing over me, and as soon as the dose was ended I fell asleep. Since that time I have always kept fresh peanuts by me at night. They have never failed.—Philadelphia Record.

Just Resting His Eyes.

A Front street jobber is responsible for the story of an old man who could not read and who was sitting in his easy chair in his home on a Mississippi plantation holding a paper in his hand.

At first glance it would have appeared that he was reading with more than usual eagerness. He looked straight forward at his paper and seemed completely absorbed.

On looking close it became apparent that his paper was upside down, and he was asked forthwith why he held it thus.

His reply almost knocked the questioner out of his chair. It was:

"Just to rest my eyes."—Memphis Scimitar.

CATARRH OF LUNGS.

A Prominent Chicago Lady Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Miss Maggie Welch, secretary of the Betsey Ross Educational and Benevolent Society, writes from 328 North State street, Chicago, Ill., the following glowing words concerning Peruna:

"Last fall I caught the most severe cold I ever had in my life. I coughed night and day, and my lungs and throat became so sore that I was in great distress.

Miss Maggie Welch.

All cough remedies nauseated me, and nothing afforded me relief until my doctor said rather in a joke, 'I guess Peruna is the only medicine that will cure you.'

"I told him that I would certainly try it and immediately sent for a bottle. I found that relief came the first day, and as I kept taking it faithfully the cough gradually diminished, and the soreness left me. It is fine."—Maggie Welch.

THE NEWS.

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Editor Kaufer, of the Red Lake Falls Gazette, gives this piece of advice to the newly elected representative from this district:

L. C. Simons attended a meeting of the legislators elect of the Ninth congressional district, called for the purpose of getting at the sentiment of the salons in the speakership contest. Dr. Babcock of Wadena and J. N. Johnson, of Minneapolis, are the leading candidates, and the fight is assuming interesting proportions. Babcock is backed by the anti-administration forces. This alone should be sufficient to bring the legislators in the Ninth in line against him. In no district of the state did the voters speak with greater emphasis in the indorsement of Gov. Van Sant's policy, and the legislator who will willingly or unwillingly him himself in a position of hostility to the administration and incidentally to the wishes of the people will hear from his constituency in no uncertain tones. No Ninth district legislator is justified in supporting Babcock, the Great Northern candidate. The fate of W. F. Street should serve as a wholesome example. The caucus at Crookston showed six for Babcock and seven for Johnson.

Mr. Simons is reported to have been one of the most outspoken Babcock men at the Crookston caucus, and in this he did not represent the sentiment of the people who elected him. The people of this legislative district are with the governor in his fight against the railroads and big corporations, and if Mr. Simons has any future political aspirations he will do well to stand by the people who elected him.

Here is one sample, among many such of the way business is booming in Minnesota's northern counties. The extract is from the Blackduck (Beltrami County) American:

"Loggers are offering the biggest wages known in the industry, and while there are hundreds arriving almost daily the hundred or more camps that depend on Blackduck for men and supplies are far from having enough men. The ordinary woodsman (familiarly known as lumberjack) is paid from $30 to $40 per month—unheard of wages for this class of work—and the early advent of winter insures a long and prosperous season. In the village, hotels and eating places are crowded, often being filled before the arrival of the train, and those who have not telegraphed ahead for beds are gald to sleep wrapped in blankets on the floor of the office. There are now several hotels one a three-story structure, under construction, and by the first of December these are expected to afford shelter to a large number. During October there were sold at the Bemidji ticket office 1,861 tickets for Blackduck, not to mention the through traffic from Brainerd and the Twin Cities."

Max Koenig, of this city, won the prize of a pair of gloves for making the highest score on the Crookston bowling alley for the month of November. His score was 226.

Red Lake Bill.

A special telegram from Washington to the St Paul Dispatch says:

The Red Lake reservation bill is to be pushed in the house of representatives next week. It went over last session on objection of Mr. Cannon, for the reason that it carried about a million-dollar appropriation to pay the Indians for 250,000 acres of land. This money will come back to the government when the land is sold to settlers.

There is still opposition to sending F. H. Kratka to Washington at the city's expense, and if Mr. Kratka goes down the money for his expenses will probably be raised by private subscription. It is understood that the city authorities do not wish to appropriate money for this purpose unless it is the unanimous wish of the people.

The chimney in Mrs. Kretzschmar's residence burned out yesterday morning, and it was thought for a time that the building would burn up. City Clerk Backe took the chemical engine down and put out the blaze. The fire department was not called out.

WEEKLY MARKET LETTER.

The following letter furnished by the Edwards, Wood & Co.

WHEAT.—The market was slightly lower and ruled heavy during the early part of the session on account of further liquidation in the December and some changing. The December is now about evened up and interest will from now on center principally in the May future, and with increased speculation prices will be carried up sharply to a much higher level. The market is in a strong position indeed and should be bought on every decline. Northwest cars today 1017 against 1201 last week and 1051 last year. Primary receipts today 1,328,000 bushels, last week 1,627,000 bushels, last year 1,490,000 bushels. The world's visible supply of wheat increased 1,200,000 bushels. The weather forecats is for rain turning to snow with generally colder weather throughout the Northwest. For May wheat 73⅞ 74 was high and the close.

REFUSED TO TELL

MINE OPERATOR IS QUESTIONED AS TO THE PRICE OF COAL.

MINERS SPRING A SURPRISE

CALL ON AN INDEPENDENT OPERATOR TO TAKE THE STAND.

GOT $20 A TON DURING STRIKE

MINERS ANNOUNCE THEY WILL CLOSE THEIR CASE SATURDAY.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 13.—The representatives of the miners during the course of yesterday's proceedings before the anthracite coal strige commission, called one of the independent operators to the witness stand to tell the exact price he received for coal, and the mine owner refused, giving, instead, after much questioning, an average of the price he received, which he placed at $2.50 a ton. The operator was L. N. Crawford, president of the People's Coal company, which operates the Oxford colliery in Scranton. The request for him to take the stand was a surprise. The Oxford colliery during the strike managed to get enough men to operate the plant, and for one month, according to Mr. Crawford, his company received $20 a ton for its coal. Objection was raised to the miners' lawyers trying what he received from the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company for its production, but the examination was permitted to proceed for what it was worth, the committee stating that the exceptional high price of coal during the strike was not pertinent to the present inquiry. The miners announced that they expected to close their case on Saturday and thus gave notice to the other side to be ready to proceed with their testimony. In reply, the companies' attorneys announced that they may have to ask a short recess in order to properly prepare their case. Judge Gray, for the commission, in reply, said he hoped there would be no interruption in the proceedings and that the companies will be able to proceed as soon as the miners have concluded their case.

To Get Him to Tell

CONGRESS.

Senate Passes Bill Fixing Compensation for Coal Commission.

Washington, Dec. 13. — Senator yesterday afternoon passed, with several amendments, the bill fixing the compensation of the anthracite coal commission and it now goes to conference. The sentiment of the senate was strongly in favor of allowing the members of the commission who are not in the civil or military service of the United States a lump sum, and after considerable debate $4,000 was settled upon as the proper amount, thus taking the responsibility out of the hands of the president, as originally proposed.

At 2 o'clock the statehood bill came up and there was a brisk exchange between Mr. Quay, who favors the omnibus bill and senators who oppose it regarding its consideration. Mr. Quay and Mr. Bate said they were ready to vote. Mr. Beveridge, Mr. Lodge, Mr. Hale and others protested against pressing the bill so soon after it was reported and it went over until Monday.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 11. —It was decided by the cabinet yesterday to permit the shipment of skins and hides through New England in bond. The order in council dealing with the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the New England States, prohibited the entry into Canada not only of animals from those states, but also hides and skins. One of the results of this prohibition was to seriously embarrass the leather trade of Canada, which depends largely on the foreign supply of heavy hides, particularly from South America, and as the bulk of these are received via Boston, their importation was stopped. It accordingly was decided to have the regulation amended so as to permit hides and skins to pass in bond through the New England States and to come into Canada when accompanied by a certificate showing that they did not originate in the infected district. An order in council also was passed prohibiting wool grown in the New England States from being imported into Canada during the existence of the foot and mouth disease.

DON'T WANT BARRETT.

Japan Would Prefer Some One Else as Minister.

Washington, Dec. 11. — The appearance at the state department yesterday of Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, taken in connection with the rumors that there was to be opposition in the United States senate to the nomination of John Barrett to be minister to Japan, gave rise to the surmise that perhaps Minister Barrett was to be declared persona non grata to the Japanese government. It is believed, however, that the minister's representations to Secretary Hay went no further than an intimation that his government would be glad to see another choice, and that he lodged no formal objection.

PROMOTION FOR TAFT.

May Go on Supreme Bench When Justice Shiras Retires.

Washington, Dec. 11. — The prospective retirement of Justice Shiras from the supreme court which was announced by his son some time ago would take place at no very distant date, it is believed here may result in the promotion to the supreme bench of William H. Taft, the chairman of the Philippine commission. Gov. Taft's elevation to that court would be the fulfillment of the general understanding that he would be appointed to that court at the time he resigned from the federal court bench in Ohio and took up his present duties at the request of President McKinley.

There are some indications of a possible settlement, though, apparently, nothing definite has yet been decided.

STATE HEADS OFF DOCTORS' BILLS

EXPERTS UNEARTH MUCH BAD FOOD OFFERED FOR SALE.

Report of the State Chemist Shows That Not All Butter and Meat Is Good to Eat—Preservatives Found in Many Samples—Much Adulterated Baking Powder.

The use of preservatives in the lower grades of butter and in renovated butter is very common, according to the report of State Chemist Julius Hortvet, which was received by Dairy and Food Commissioner McConnell yesterday. There were 116 of the 227 samples of butter analyzed by the chemist that contained preservatives. Borax was found to have been used in most instances, although salicylic acid was used in two cases. There were 175 samples of normal butter, usually of poor grade. There were 27 samples of renovated butter and 25 samples of oleomargarine examined.

The chemists made chemical analyses of 85 samples of milk and 87 samples of cream during the year, besides of 2,000 samples of milk and cream which was analyzed by the Babcock test, with respect to the amount of butter fat contained. The chemists found 46 samples of milk below standard and 79 samples of cream did not come up to the legal requirements. Twenty samples of milk having been watered or skimmed.

One Adulterant to Hide Another.

A thickener had been used on 14 samples of cream and 12 samples showed the use of coloring matter. Gelatine was usually used as the thickener, although some samples showed annatto, which had probably been added to disguise the presence of the gelatine, so the report says.

The department analyzed 2,066 samples of meat and meat products before the preservatives act was declared unconstitutional, and 511 samples showed the presence of preservatives. Borax was used in 466 cases and sulphites in 45 cases. Preservatives were found only in sausages, minced ham and other products in which the meat was cut into small bits.

The chemist also analyzed 150 samples of baking powder, comprising 63 different brands, and 116 samples were found to be illegal. Some had not been labeled, showing the ingredients, as required by law, some had labels misrepresenting the composition of the powder, but the most bore labels that did not comply with the law. Improper labeling was most common on the alum-phosphate powders.

Of eleven samples of alum baking powder examined, 8 were illegal; of 12 samples of phosphate powder 6 were illegal; of 58 samples of alum-phosphate baking powder 50 were illegal; of 42 samples of cream tartar baking powder 32 were illegal, and 20 of the 27 samples of unclassified baking powder examined were found to be illegal.

TWO PROTESTS ARE REGISTERED

SAN FRANCISCO PEOPLE AND RED CROSS SOCIETY MAKE A KICK.

These Two Declare That Transfer of Transport Base From Frisco to Seattle Would Be Bad — Representatives of the Boston Steamship Follows Them With an Argument for the Change.

Washington, Dec. 11.—A delegation of prominent citizens of San Francisco, consisting of R. P. Schwerin of the Pacific Mail Steamship company; W. W. Douglass, state controller, and ex-Mayor Phelan, headed by Senator Perkins, called upon the president to-day to discuss with him the pending proposition to place the government transport service on the Pacific in private hands, with headquarters in Seattle.

The Boston Steamship company, which runs out of Seattle, has made a bid for the handling of the government transport business on the Pacific, which the war department now has under consideration. The people of San Francisco are urging the government not to accept the proposition, as it acceptance probably would result in the loss to San Francisco of much government business.

The delegation informed the president that the people of San Francisco had erected a monument to commemorate Dewey's victory at Manila and that of the navy generally, and invited the president to attend the dedication ceremonies while on his trip to the coast next spring. The president accepted the invitation and a date will be named to suit his convenience.

The delegation went from the executive offices to the war department to discuss the matter with the secretary of war. Mr. Schwerin was the principal speaker, and put forward the proposition that if the government did not care to operate its own transport service his company would conduct the transport business for the government, using the government vessels now employed, under charter or for direct compensation.

Miss Clara Barton of the National Red Cross society and Samuel W. Briggs, secretary of the society, also saw the president, to protest against the removal of the transport service from San Francisco to Seattle. They expressed the belief that the removal would be a mistake, because, they maintained, the facilities for caring for sick or wounded soldiers at San Francisco were superior to those at Seattle. They, too, went to the war department to see Secretary Root about the matter.

Immediately following the departure of the San Francisco delegation, Alfred Winsor, representing the Boston Steamship company, appeared before Secretary Root and made a brief argument in favor of the acceptance of the bid of that company for transportation of troops and supplies between Seattle and Tacoma and Manila.

RECORD OF THE PAST.

The best guarantee of the future is the record of the past, and over fifty thousand people have publicly testified that Doan's Kidney Pills have cured them of numerous kidney ills, from common backache to dangerous diabetes, and all the attendant annoyances and sufferings from urinary disorders. They have been cured to stay cured. Here is one case:

Samuel J. Taylor, retired carpenter, residing at 312 South Third St., Goshen, Ind., says: "On the 25th day of August, 1897, I made an affidavit before Jacob C. Mann, notary public, stating my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. I had suffered for thirty years, and was compelled at times to walk with the aid of crutches, frequently passed gravel and suffered excruciatingly. I took every medicine on the market that I heard about and some gave me temporary relief. I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and the results I gave to the public in the statement above referred to. At this time, on the 19th day of July, 1902, I make this further statement that during the five years which have elapsed I have had no occasion to use either Doan's Kidney Pills or any other medicine for my kidneys. The cure effected was a permanent one."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Taylor, will be mailed on application, to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists. Price 50 cents per box.

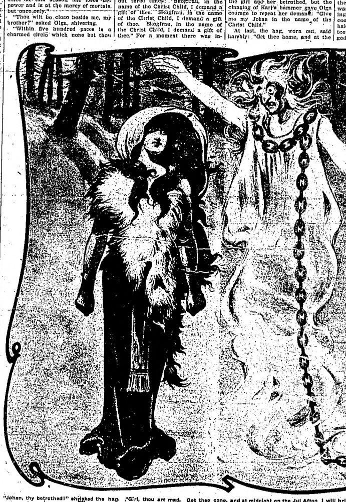
The Skogfrau's Christmas Gift

BY CHAS. H. ROBINSON



"Johan, thy betrothed!" shrieked the hag. "Girl, thou art mad. Get thee gone, and at midnight on the Jul Afton I will bring thee a jewel such as none can boast, but not Johan. He is mine, I tell thee, mine forever. I will not give him up," and she raised her arm as if to strike, but now Olga feared her not.

AHA! KARA barn, the smell of thy coffee is like the taste of wine to the thirsty after my long tramp in the crusty snow," and Karl the iron-founder threw off his huge skin coat and emptied at a gulp the brimming cup of coffee handed him by his sister Olga. Then placing a finger on his lip:

"Var stilla, my Olga, I have somewhat to tell thee, but yonder little pitcher has long ears. So," he continued, turning to a mite of a girl sitting sedately near the blazing fireplace, intently engaged in thumbing a well-worn primer book, "thou art studious, min lilla flicka, as I told thee to be. Come hither, my little maid, and show me thy book."

He took the book quickly offered him, and deftly placing in it something he secretly drew from his pocket, thrust it out of sight behind him.

"Dost remember, sweetheart, that I told thee the rooster pictured on the front page of thy book would bring thee something if thou wert good?"

"Ja, brother Karl, and so I have been good; ask sister Olga," said the child, smiling up into his face.

"Indeed, yes," answered Olga, drawing the little sister close into her arms, and giving her a hug and a kiss. "Thilda is always sweet and good."

"Well, then, let us see what the rooster has brought thee, my Thilda,"

Opening the book, Karl pretended to be amazed at something he saw, and showing it to Olga, she raised her hands in well-assumed astonishment. Thilda, unable to restrain her curiosity, suddenly seized the book carelessly held in Karl's huge hand just within her reach, and opening it, uttered a shout of delight as she drew forth a beautiful white candy dog, with a pink ribbon round its neck.

"Thank you, good Karl," she said, simply, pouting up her lips for a kiss.

"Nay, child, 'tis not me thou hast to thank, but the rooster," he explained, adding: "Now, min lilla flicka, thou knowest that the good Johan is far away from home, wilt go into thy chamber and pray for thy sister's betrothed? I have that to say to her which thou mayst not hear. Good child," he continued, patting her head as she turned obediently to obey.

"I have some news, my sister, about thy sweetheart. It is of some importance, since it tells me that thy Johan still lives."

"May the good God so ordain," said Olga fervently, "and may He restore him to my arms."

"Amen," murmured Karl, "but to the news. 'Tis now three days since Johan went into the dark forest to cut the firs for the Jul Tieden and returned not as he should have done that same night. The next day we found his ax buried deep in a tree, as thou knowest, but all other trace of him was lost. Well, to-day we penetrated as far as the gloomy Falun mines and found his empty wallet."

"And—and—thou didst follow his steps in the snow?" stammered Olga. "Tell me quickly, Karl, my brother."

"That is what we did not do, Olga, for the reason that there were no footprints in the snow. The wallet could not have been cast there by any one, for we tracked a circle of a hundred yards and found the snow unbroken. Moreover, a piece of ore was laid upon it as if to prevent its being blown away. It was placed there, but not by Johan, Olga."

"Thank God, he has found a shelter there, some miners, perhaps. He may even now be on his way to me," said Olga, joyously. "Go quickly, my brother, to meet him."

"Do not raise thy hopes too high, my sister, neither let thy heart sink. Thy Johan is alive, true, but the hand that placed his wallet where it was found was not that of a mortal. Nay—be not alarmed," he said, putting an arm around her, for the girl was seized with a fit of trembling. "Be brave, my sister, and all will be well if thou wilt be guided by me."

"In anything and everything, my brother," said Olga, clasping her hands. "My soul for Johan's if need be."

"Not that, kära söster, not that shall be required of thee, but bravery thou must show, little woman, such bravery as few men dare show. Thy Johan's return depends upon thee."

"I am ready to face death himself," said Olga, "only tell me what to do."

"Listen, then. I would do it for thee myself, but thou alone canst face the ordeal. I believe the Skogfrau——"

"Oh, my God, the Skogfrau, the terrible forest witch," cried the terror-stricken maiden, falling on her knees and holding up her hands to heaven. "Spare my Johan, oh, heaven!"

"So this is thy bravery," said Karl sternly. "Rise from thy knees and nerve thyself for an ordeal that is not difficult, but requires bravery to tell thee. Wouldst lose thy Johan forever? The Jul Tieden begins at midnight, and at that hour thou must stand alone upon the spot where Johan's wallet still lies, and demand a gift from the Skogfrau. She cannot refuse thee if thou art the first mortal to demand it at that hour. 'Tis thy only hope, for she has lured Johan into her power, and if thou shalt demand him in the name of the Christ Child she may not refuse thy request, since at this season she loses her power and is at the mercy of mortals, but once only."

"Thou wilt be close beside me, my brother?" asked Olga, shivering.

"Within five hundred paces is a charmed circle which none but thou may enter, but I will be just beyond it and hear thy call for aid should aught happen requiring it. Thou must stand alone upon the spot and say three times, 'Skogfrau, in the name of the Christ Child I demand a gift of thee.' Three times, remember, my sister. She may appear terrible in her wrath and threaten thee and thy Johan, but fear not, she will be powerless either to harm thee or him. Come, prepare, for the way is long and midnight must not pass ere thou art there."

"But Thilda? We cannot leave the dear child here alone."

"'Tis all arranged with Dame Thekla," explained Karl. "We shall take the child thither and she will sleep well. Thilda, min lilla flicka!" called Karl to the child, "come hither. Hast prayed for Olga's Johan, child?"

"Ja, my brother, and the good God tells me he shall come home again."

"Then so shall it be, my sweet child, but come, wouldst like to taste Frau Thekla's seed cakes, eh? I thought as much. Well, thou shalt as soon as I can carry thee thither. Come sweetheart; come, Olga."

Though wrapped in the warmest of furs, Olga shivered as she stood alone amid the silent, gloomy, wintry waste of the forest. Not long had she waited ere distinctly through the awful stillness came the clanging strokes of midnight which Karl rung upon the barrel of his gun with a hammer to warn her of the time. With a clear but quavering voice the girl called out three times: "Skogfrau, in the name of the Christ Child, I demand a gift of thee. Skogfrau, in the name of the Christ Child, I demand a gift of thee. Skogfrau, in the name of the Christ Child, I demand a gift of thee." For a moment there was intense silence; then came a rushing sound as of a tempest approaching, and a rasping voice spoke to her:

"Why troublest thou me, mortal? Dost thou not know that I can blast thee with a breath? Speak, what wilt thou?"

"In the name of the Christ Child, I demand a gift of thee," was all that Olga could utter in her terror. It was a terrible old hag, who stood before her and her aspect was threatening.

"Some paltry thing, I wis, a ribbon, a jewel. Speak, mortal, whatever it may be, 'tis thine."

Growing bolder, Olga spoke more firmly: "Thou hast promised, and in the name of the Christ Child thou must keep thy promise. 'Tis not a ribbon, or a jewel, but my Johan, my betrothed, I demand of thee as thy gift."

"Johan, thy betrothed!" shrieked the hag. "Girl, thou art mad. Get thee gone, and at midnight on the Jul Afton I will bring thee a jewel such as none can boast, but not Johan. He is mine, I tell thee, mine forever. I will not give him up," and she raised her arm as if to strike, but now Olga feared her not.

"In the name of the Christ Child I demand Johan of thee. Thou hast promised whatever I might ask, and I will have no other gift from thee."

In vain the old crone raved and cursed and begged the girl to take all she possessed, but not the youth. She tore her hair and beat her breast and threatened dire vengeance upon the girl and her betrothed, but the clanging of Karl's hammer gave Olga courage to repeat her demand: "Give me my Johan in the name of the Christ Child."

At last, the hag, worn out, said harshly: "Get thee home, and at the stroke of midnight on the Jul Afton I will bring thee thy Johan," then with a bitter scream she disappeared, and Olga fell fainting in the snow, but the faithful Karl revived her and brought her safely home.

"Now, my sister, thou must prepare for the Jul Afton, the eve of the great day when the Christ Child was born. Do not fear, thy Johan will come at midnight, as the terrible old hag of the forest said. I will help thee prepare trenchers of snow-white lutfisk, and heaps of kött bolar. We must have a mountain of seed cakes and keep filled with smoking punch the huge bowl thy father left thee. We must not forget the coffee, kära söster, oceans of it, nor the salt pig and the baskets of spice bread. We shall have the village there, and all be ready to greet Johan with a loud "skald," for he will be sadly in need of it. And the pastor, Olga, he must be there and he must remain there, and thou must be ready and willing to do as I bid thee. I have my reasons, my sister; the Skogfrau has been defeated thus far, but she is revengeful, yet I have a plan to end her power over Johan forever. Wilt do as I say, little one?"

"Ja, my brother, though it be to do again as I did to-night."

"It will not be so terrible, my sister, and when thou hast done it thou wilt laugh and rejoice. Now, to bed with thee, to lay up freshness for the morrow. I will watch over the sweet Thilda and bring her to thy arms in the morning."

The Jul Tieden began with its merrymaking and feasting. In one week, on the Jul Afton, the Christmas Eve, the climax would be reached. There was a squealing in the pens, a squalling, cackling and quacking in the coops. Every oven was kept at the baking point and laden with savory toothsome viands. Presents were dragged out from their hiding places and marked with loving mottoes, and the names of the favored recipients. There was a general scrubbing, cleaning and dusting, and a furbishing up of holiday garments and finery.

The men drowned themselves in coffee, punch and bränvin and shouted themselves hoarse with oft repeated "skald." The women gossiped and cooked and cooked and gossiped, while the chubby children crammed their stomachs with unwonted cakes and sweetmeats unmolested. Everything was free for the taking and the privilege of freedom was accorded everybody.

Olga threw her doors wide open to the whole village, promising a wonderful surprise. Many thought she was not very considerate on Johan's account, thinking she would better be going around with tearful eyes and loud lamentations, but they ate freely of her good things none the less

Simple souls, they were not aware that the lost Johan was to be the great surprise. Of course, everybody had given him up for lost, and they were amazed that Olga should be the merriest maiden in the village, and that her home was to be the very center of the merrymaking on the Jul Afton. The pastor had been forewarned by Karl, and the good soul came prepared to fight the wicked troll for the salvation of Johan and Olga.

The board groaned beneath the weight of good cheer, and the huge bowl was kept constantly brimming with steaming punch. There was no formal banqueting, everybody eating when the humor seized him, and drinking whether thirsty or not, because good drink was there to be had without the asking. The whole village was there waiting for the surprise and nerving themselves up to withstand it by distending their stomachs. None but Olga, Karl and the pastor knew what it was to be, and even they did not know in what shape it would come.

At last the first stroke of midnight. Olga turned pale, Karl stood at attention and the good pastor grasped his holy book firmly in his hand. The last stroke was still ringing in their ears when a violent gust of wind shook the house and the dragging of heavy chains over the roof brought terror to the inmates. The door was burst open by some invisible force and a heavy bundle was hurled in among the amazed roysterers. An old wizened hag appeared in the doorway and screamed out above the confusion: "Girl, take the gift of the Christ Child, but beware of my vengeance. Shouldst thou accept any other gift before thou hast fully accepted this, then shall it return to me and be mine forever."

Johan was quickly restored by copious libations of hot punch, and when able to stand on his feet, Karl put his hand in that of Olga and gave the pastor a signal. Forthwith, Olga took Johan for her husband, and when the final words were spoken, a tempest again shook the house, heavy chains were again dragged across the roof, and after shrieks of demoniac laughter, all was still without.

With tears and laughter, Olga grasped her brother's hand, and then threw herself into the arms of her husband, the gift of the Christ Child, forever free from the thralls of the Skogfrau.

Quaint Superstitions of the Christmas Decorations

Ax and knife have been doing their vandal work in the fair woods to provide us with the pins and fir, holly, laurel, bay and mistletoe. Why? Because of the Christmas season; because of the festival of rejoicing.

But why these green things? Why the gifts on the branches of pine? Why the holly about the windows, that it may be seen from without, and the laurel over the hearthstone? Why above all and the center of all, these green and living growths, the mistletoe bough?

Christmas seized upon these things for the celebration of the festival not because they were green, but because of the power that held them green, that kept them alive, that preserved in them the beauty of life, notwithstanding the snow and sleet, the wind and chilling rain and the withering blast.

Those who celebrated the Christmastide wanted the benefit of this power for their own protection and preservation, so they took to themselves the emblems of it—surrounded themselves with them, brightened their homes with them and rejoiced amid their branches.

It is the spirit of these living growths that appeals to us when all the rest of inanimate nature appears to be sleeping under the mantle of winter. Before Christmas was, the spirits behind the green were believed in by an imaginative people, and the great festival adopted them.

The ancient Druids believed in the spirits of the holly, of the laurel, of the bay, and of the great green trees that formed the walls and living arches of their temples. To them these things were peopled with sylvan spirits that loved the growths and kept them green by protecting them from winter frosts. The took the branches within their dwelling, believing that the spirits would follow and there exercise their protecting care.

Among these spirits they believe none to be more powerful or capable of bringing greater blessing than those of the mistletoe. Blessed the man and maid who met beneath the mistletoe bough.

These beliefs have gone from the world, but we cling to the emblems of them, and rejoice amid them at the Christmas celebration.

BOMBARDED BY THE ALLIES

FORTRESS AT PUERTO CABELLO ALMOST DEMOLISHED BY CRUISERS.

FIRST DEMAND SATISFACTION

CASTRO ORDERS THAT IT BE GIVEN, BUT MESSAGE IS TOO LATE.

ACTION IS CONSIDERED HASTY

REGARDED AS PROOF OF INTENTION TO FORCE WAR ON VENEZUELA.

Puerto Cabello, Dec. 16.—The British cruiser Charybdis and the German cruiser Vineta bombarded the fortress here at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon and quickly silenced it. The bombardment lasted for forty-five minutes. The fortress is composed of Fort Solano and the Castle Libertador.

After the firing ceased the Charybdis sent marines to occupy the castle. The fortress was almost demolished. It is probable that only a few persons were injured by the shelling. The commander of Castle Libertador has been taken prisoner. The cruisers are still here.

At 7 o'clock in the morning the Charybdis and the Vineta arrived here searching for Venezuelan gunboats. The two cruisers sent their boats into the inner port, but finding no gunboats, the boats returned. The captain of the British merchant steamer Topaze, which was seized by the mob here last Wednesday, then visited the British commodore on board the Charybdis and against the violation of his ship. The British captain returned an hour later with a detachment of fifty marines, who took charge of the Topaze. The populace was greatly excited at this incident and raised the cry "to arms," but there was no disorder.

The British commodore then sent a message to the authorities at Puerto Cabello demanding immediate satisfaction for the action of the mob in having hauled down the British flag from the Topaze, saying that if this satisfaction was not forthcoming in two hours, at 5 o'clock the fortress and the custom house would be bombarded. On receipt of this demand the authorities sent a message to President Castro asking for instructions. A committee of the merchants of Puerto Cabello then approached the American consul here, petitioning him to intervene. The consul accepted this mission and visited the cruisers, but he could obtain no alteration in the decision of the allies.

Message Came Too Late.

At a quarter before 5 a reply was received from President Castro, who authorized the chief official here to give the British commodore ample satisfaction. Before this answer could be communicated to the American consul the hour stipulated for its receipt had arrived; the cruisers immediately opened fire on the fortress. The fire was returned from Fort Solano and Castle Libertador, but the Venezuelan guns were soon silenced. While the firing continued there was intense excitement in this port. Every house in town was closed.

The people of Puerto Cabello cannot account for this precipitate action on the part of the allies, which they consider to be proof that Great Britain and Germany intend forcing war on Venezuela.

The British marines propose to make use of the cannon in Castle Libertador. No damage was done to the town. The excitement of the people is subsiding.

Confirmed by Bowen.

Washington, Dec. 16. — Minister Bowen, in a dispatch received by the state department yesterday afternoon, cabled that he had been informed by President Castro that British and German warships were bombarding Puerto Cabello.

In an earlier dispatch, received at the state department at 3:22 Sunday morning, Minister Bowen said that the situation in the Venezuela capital, Caracas, was much quieter.

Aside from the dispatches from Minister Bowen there were no further developments in the Venezuelan situation so far as the state department is concerned. The officials are watching events with a keen interest so as to be able to act with promptness should

Such a Step Be Necessary.

In the matter of the blockade Secretary Hay has instructed our ambassadors at Berlin and London to represent to those governments that the United States must not be understood as giving its consent to any extension of the international right of peaceful blockade.

The visit of President Castro to the bedside of the invalid wife of the German diplomatic representative at Caracas created a good impression here, as it did at that place, whereas the necessity for bombardment of Puerto Cabello made an equally unfavorable one. It is regretted that the commanders of the German and British vessels should have found it necessary to resort to such a severe step as bombardment of the city for an act for which satisfaction might have been obtained in a more peaceful manner.

Castro's Graceful Act.

Caracas, Dec. 16.—President Castro learned Saturday morning of the illness of Madame von Pilgrim-Baltazzi, and in the afternoon, accompanied by his wife, and a number of Venezuelan officers, he called at the German legation. Here the visitors were received by United States Minister Bowen, who escorted them to the room of the invalid. President Castro greeted Madame von Pilgrim-Baltazzi and spoke to her of her husband in a friendly way, saying he held the German envoy in high regard. The president of Venezuela produced a favorable impression upon Madame von Pilgrim-Baltazzi, and before he left the German legation he offered her the hospitality of the Yellow House, the capitol of Caracas.

Italy Also Demands Pay.

Caracas, Dec. 16.—The British legation here will be reopened under the American flag by W. W. Russell, secretary of the American legation.

The statement that Italy, through her legation here, is to demand payment of her claims against Venezuela has been confirmed.

The arrival of the United States gunboat Marietta at La Guayra yesterday was due to a rumor that United States Minister Bowen was in danger. There has been no ground for such a rumor and the presence of the Marietta was not required by Mr. Bowen.

The situation at Caracas continues to be critical and there is intense excitement among the German residents of the city. The Germans have sought refuge at the American legation, where they will be sheltered.

The enlistment of Venezuelan soldiers continues. Two thousand men from the environs of Caracas and Valencia came to this city yesterday. The boycotting of the British and German goods continues.

The people of Caracas are astonished that the government at Washington remains silent in spite of the recent acts of the allied fleet.

Tie Up Venezuelan Ships.

Caracas, Dec. 16.—A note from the commanders of the allied Anglo-German fleet which the Venezuelan government refused to receive Saturday at La Guayra was sent yesterday to United States Minister Bowen at Caracas and forwarded by him to the proper government official here. The note is in the name of Great Britain and Germany. It requests all Venezuelan ships, after the lapse of five days, to refrain from sailing from the port of La Guayra until the present difficulties are over.

The question what right Great Britain and Germany have to coerce Venezuela without declaring a blockade is being asked on all sides here.

SCHOONER TAKES FIRE AT SEA.

Crew Takes Refuge on Uninhabited Island and Later Is Rescued.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 16. — The schooner Molly, carrying a crew of seven men was struck by a gale yesterday morning. The vessel was keeled over until the stove in her cabin upset. This resulted in setting fire to the woodwork and the schooner was soon a mass of flames. The crew ran the Molly for Outer Gooseberry island, an uninhabited island twelve miles off Bona Vista bay. Here the schooner was beached and the crew landed on the rocks. Residents of the mainland caught sight of the burning schooner and the mail boat Dundee was dispatched to the rescue. The Dundee reached Outer Gooseberry Island yesterday evening. A heavy surf was breaking on the island, and only the captain of the Molly risked the plunge through the surf necessary to reach the Dundee's boat. The Dundee remained in the offing until morning, when she succeeded in getting the other men of the Molly's crew on board. These men were badly frost-bitten as a result of their night's exposure.

SWEPT BY SNOW STORM.

Entire Rocky Mountain Region Gets Taste of Winter.

Denver, Colo., Dec. 16.—The entire Rocky Mountain region from Northern Wyoming to Southern New Mexico has been visited by a snow storm during the past thirty-six hours. The ground on the plateaus is covered to a depth of six inches, while in the mountains the depth is lower. In this city snow fell Saturday. Yesterday two inches of snow fell during the morning in most sections of Colorado, but last night the weather had cleared. In some parts of Colorado, particularly the San Luis valley in the south, the snow was the heaviest for years. For the past three years drouth has visited the San Luis valley, and the present visitation of moisture has brought rejoicing, assuring, as it does, good conditions for next year's crop.

HITS AT AMERICA

EVIDENTLY THE PURPOSE OF GERMANY'S NEW TARIFF LAW.

MADE CLEAR BY THE SPEECHES

ALTHOUGH UNITED STATES WAS NOT SPECIFICALLY MENTIONED.

HARD ON THE CHICAGO PACKERS

WILL DEPRIVE THEM OF 25 PER CENT OF THEIR EXPORT TRADE.

Berlin, Dec. 16.—During the debate on the third reading of the tariff bill which was passed Saturday it was evident from many speeches delivered by members of the majority that the bill is aimed chiefly at the United States. This was clear even when the United States was not named, for it was understood that the term "abroad" referred to America.

Dr. Paasche, a National Liberal, made a pointed reference to the United States, which most of the newspapers failed to print. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, the leading Agrarian organ, however, published Dr. Paasche's remarks in heavy-faced type. They are doubly interesting, since they disclose the government's policy with regard to future treaty negotiations.

"We expect," said Dr. Paasche, "that the government will undertake a thoroughgoing revision of all treaties, giving the most favored nation advantages. Promises of this kind were made to us in committee. We has absolutely no occasion to concede anything to such nations as are glad to take what we give other countries without making us any concession in return. The United States has introduced the limitation of the most favored nation clause; we have every reason to act in precisely the same manner."

Hits Chicago Packers.

Chicago, Dec. 16. — The tariff bill passed by the German reichstag early yesterday morning, Chicago packers say, will deprive them of almost 25 per cent of their provision export trade, exclusive of fresh meats, and the packers already are preparing to urge the United States government to take some action that will give them relief. William C. Evans, of the foreign department of Armour & Co., who returned to Chicago yesterday from Berlin, where he had been in the interests of the house he represents, said the bill would deprive the American packers of nearly all their German export trade. It also would react on the poorer classes in Germany.

"The new Law will rob the packers of a great part of the German export trade, which is 25 per cent of all our foreign business," said Mr. Evans. "At present the outlook is not bright, and if prices continue high it will be practically impossible for us to win back any of the trade."

LOUBET IN UNITED STATES.

French President Practically Decides to Visit America During World's Fair.

Paris, Dec. 16.—It is practically decided that President Loubet will visit America in June, 1904. It is believed that a visit by the head of the French government would be particularly apropos at that time, it being the centennial of the cession of Louisiana by France, which was in a way the foundation of the United States of to-day. The president's outgoing voyage would be accompanied by a French warship, by way of New Orleans, up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, where he would visit the exposition, thence across the United States to Washington, finally embarking on a United States warship for the return trip to France.

MRS. U. S. GRANT IS DEAD.

Wife of the Late President Passes Away in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 16. — Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, wife of the late President Grant, died at her residence in this city at 11:17 o'clock last night. Death was due to heart failure, Mrs. Grant having suffered for some years from valvular disease of the heart, which was aggravated by a severe attack of bronchitis. Her age prevented her rallying from the attacks. Her daughter, Nellie Grant-Sartoris, was the only one of her children with her at the time of her death, her three sons, who had been summoned here, all being out of the city.

Death came peacefully, the sufferer maintaining almost complete consciousness practically to the end. Word has come from Jesse and Ulysses S. Grant, two of the sons now in California, that they have started on their way to Washington. The other son, Gen. Fred Grant, is in Texas, and he will hasten here as soon as he receives a message telling him of his mother's death. The remains will be taken to Riverside Park, where the remains of her husband rest, to be interred beside them. Whether they will be taken there immediately after the ceremony or the event be postponed for a time is not known.

Mrs. Grant, whose maiden name was Julia Dent, was born in St. Louis in 1826 and was the daughter of Frederick and Ellen Wrenchall Dent. She was married to General, then Captain, Grant in 1848.

WILD FIGHT IN BLIZZARD.

Battle With Guns on the Streets of Toledo.

Toledo, Dec. 16. — Early yesterday morning John and Jerry Sullivan, brothers, and George Gearhart, who has a record of two terms in the penitentiary, entered Williams' restaurant, in the heart of the city, and, after ordering meals, drew their revolvers, intimidated everybody in sight and compelled the cashier to open the money drawer. They secured a good sum and all the cigars their pockets would, and then, with drawn revolvers, backed out of the place and began to run. Meanwhile a waiter named Williams secured a revolver and ran to the door and began firing. This attracted the attention of Officer Jerry Coakley, who stepped in front of Jerry Sullivan and commanded him to stop. Sullivan fired five times point blank at the officer, but owing to the terrible snowstorm raging at the time his aim was bad. Officers came on the run and passers-by took up the chase. Eight more of the gang were in a rendezvous at 518 Jackson avenue, and John Sullivan took refuge there. Jerry Sullivan stumbled and fell and was choked into submission. After perhaps twenty-five shots had been fired all of the eleven were rounded up and thrown into jail. The morning session of the police court held the three principals to the grand jury on the charges and sent all the others to the workhouse on long sentences. Only the blizzard, which kept many people off the street, prevented a series of casualties, as the robbers made a desperate resistance.

SHE PREVENTS THE WEDDING.

Minneapolis Woman Is Successful in Chase.

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 16. — After a chase that extended from Minneapolis to Milwaukee, then to Beloit and lastly to Rockford, Mrs. Mary Stiple and daughter of Minneapolis caught up with Charles M. Stockwell of Butte, Mont., and Miss Rose Stiple in time to prevent their marriage. Stockwell and Rose Stiple reached Rockford late Saturday afternoon, after being on the road from the latter's home for two days. In their flight they forgot about the True law in Wisconsin, and found it impossible to be married in Milwaukee. The lax laws of Illinois tempted them, and they came to Rockford. They had hardly reached here when the pursuing mother and sister arrived. There was a stormy scene in the public waiting room of the Rockford Street Railway company. Stockwell finally left the quarreling women and disappeared. Mrs. Stiple then persuaded her rebellious daughter to accompany her home, and the reunited family left on the first train for Minneapolis.

"COFFEE JOHN" CROSSES DIVIDE.

Man Who Held Fate of Ames in His Hand Dies Suddenly.

Minneapolis, Dec. 16. — John Fitchette, otherwise "Coffee John," one of the most unique personalities ever associated with Minneapolis municipal politics, died at his country place, Burr Oaks, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Fitchette was stricken with pneumonia on Wednesday, and owing to his physical peculiarities was unable to rally from the disease.

In view of the death of Fitchette it is probable that the pretense of hunting for Ames will no longer be kept up, as dependence would have been placed on the evidence of the former to convict the latter. The only other man who was really "in the know" is also dead. Ames himself is suffering from an incurable malady, according to all accounts, and there is no doubt that he will very shortly make the same crossing at which Tanner and Fitchette preceded him.

CABLE IS LANDED

SUCCESSFUL BEGINNING OF THE WORK ON THE PACIFIC CABLE.

WITHOUT HITCH OF ANY KIND

DAUGHTER OF GOV. GAGE PERFORMS CHRISTENING CEREMONY.

WITNESSED BY GREAT CROWDS

IDEAL WEATHER PREVAILED, RENDERING THE TASK EASY.

San Francisco, Dec 16—"In honor of John W. Mackay I christen the Pacific cable. May it always carry messages of happiness."

With these words Lucille Gage, the eleven-year-old daughter of H. T. Gage, governor of California, yesterday christened the trans-Pacific cable, and, breaking a bottle of champagne over the shore, inaugurated a new era in the commercial development of the Pacific coast. The landing and splicing of the shore end which is to connect the mainland with Honolulu was accomplished without hitch of any kind and was witnessed by thirty or forty thousand people. Ideal weather prevailed, there being scarcely any surf. Early yesterday morning the steamer Newsboy, carrying six miles of cable, steamed close in shore, and through a life-saving boat's crew sent a rope to which the cable was attached ashore. Word was sent to President Clarence H. Mackay and the Cable and Postal Telegraph officers that all was in readiness. The work of hauling in the cable was done so expeditiously that the officials arrived on the beach only two minutes before the cable touched the beach and was christened at 9:55 a. m. While the cable was being spliced to the land Mayor Schmitz delivered a short speech congratulating Mr. Mackay on the Successful Beginning

of the work. He also spoke of the importance of the undertaking and the benefit to the world at large that would result from its completion. Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Commercial Cable company, with a voice full of emotion, thanked the governor and those present.

Gov. Gage, on behalf of the State of California, paid a fervent tribute to the late John W. Mackay. The formal exercises closed with cheers for the cable and all those taking part in its landing.

Refreshment tents were erected on the beach and while the cable was being landed Mr. Mackay served champagne and other refreshments to a large number of invited guests. Mr. Mackay sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt:

"I have the honor to inform you that the California end of the Honolulu cable was successfully landed at 9:55 o'clock this morning."

When the cable was landed it was drawn safely through a conduit and made ready for connection with the office. A portion of the hawser used in the landing was cut up into small bits as souvenirs and used for distribution by President Mackay among his guests.

The latest report says there are but 479 members of this once powerful tribe left.

Tobacco Warehouse Destroyed.

Janesville, Wis., Dec. 16. — The tobacco warehouse of Joseph Grundy, one of the largest in the city, was practically destroyed by fire at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The loss is nearly $60,000.

IT MADE BIG MONEY.

The Minnesota State Fair of Last September Made a Profit of $50,000.

Visitors to the state fair this year never complained that they did not get the worth of their money, but after all its lavishness in furnishing amusement, the society comes out of the season with a net profit of $50,000. This splendid showing is made in a report submitted to the governor by the board of auditors, J. V. Brower, W. A. Cowing and E. S. Pettijohn. The report shows that after spending $31,000 of last year's balance of $37,600, the fair comes out with a balance on hand of $55,243.64. The total receipts were $180,909.05, far exceeding the record of last year, which was a record-breaker. The statement of the auditors is as follows:

THIS ALSO THE CHEESE STATE.

Minnesota Last Year Made Nearly 3,700,000 Pounds.

The cheese factories of Minnesota last year consumed 38,894,548 pounds of milk, which made 3,699,600 pounds of cheese, and paid the patrons of the factories $292,285.02, according to figures compiled for the biennial report of the state dairy and food department. The increase in the amount of milk used for making cheese was 8,592,590 pounds, in the amount of cheese made, 587,159 pounds and in the amount of money paid to patrons of cheese factories, $72,272.98.

W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, is convinced that many more cheese factories can be established with profit, and that the industry may become one of the largest in the state. It is not proposed to advocate a cheese factory where it would hamper an established creamery. A cheese factory can be run at a profit, however, with the milk of from 100 to 200 cows, which is not enough to support a creamery. The testimony of experts, Mr. McConnell says, is unanimous that a cheese factory that is well under way can pay its patrons considerably more for milk than can a creamery.

The larger part of cheese made in Minnesota is what is known as cheddar cheese. Last year 33,806,728 pounds of milk was used in making 3,291,171 pounds of cheddar cheese, an increase over two years ago of 3,897,789 pounds of milk used and 241,359 pounds of cheese produced. Patrons of the factories making cheddar cheese last year received $255,581.29 for their milk.

Swiss, brick and limburger cheese last year consumed 5,097,824 pounds of milk and 408,429 pounds of these kinds of cheese was made, an increase in two years of 4,694,800 pounds of milk, and 372,800 pounds of cheese. The patrons of these factories received $36,704.33 for milk.

The event of the session of the state dairymen's convention at the capitol was the address of Food Commissioner W. W. P. McConnell.

Mr. McConnell said there are 705 co-operative creameries in this state, representing an investment of $2,500,000. There are 800,000 cows in Minnesota, one-half of which number contribute milk to the creameries, which in turn produce annually butter which brings to the dairy farmers $12,000,000 per year. If the milk of all the cows in Minnesota were sent to the creameries the dairy product would reach an annual value of $25,000,000. It is possible, in the commissioner's estimation, for the dairy products of this state to ultimately reach a value yearly of $75,000,000 to $80,000,000.

A long series of resolutions were adopted on recommendation of the committee on resolutions. Hon. W. D. Hoard, Hon. C. Y. Knight and the Minnesota delegation in congress were thanked for their fight against oleomargarine. The state dairy and food department was highly commended. The trust which is swallowing up the co-operative creameries was condemned. The legislature was asked to make special appropriations for the work among the creameries and for a Minnesota dairy exhibit at the St. Louis exposition. The convention asked that hereafter at least five of the state dairy inspectors be experts in butter and cheesemaking. Work toward good roads by the legislature was asked for, with a non-paid state highway commission.

Among the addresses were the following: "Development of the Creamery Industry," Prof. E. E. Farrington, Madison, Wis.; "Co-operative Creameries vs. the Trust," Evan Evanson of Strout; "Construction of Modern Creameries," A. W. Trow, Glenville; "Keeping of Butter," Inspector B. D. White.

PROFIT BY MISERY

COAL DEALERS OF NEW YORK ARE IN DELIBERATE CONSPIRACY.

COLD CAUSES MANY DEATHS

THE RICH SHIVER AND THE POOR DIE OWING TO GREED OF DEALERS.

RAILROAD YARDS FULL OF COAL

WHICH THE OWNERS HAVE BEEN HOLDING FOR ZERO WEATHER.

New York, Dec. 12.—The coal famine, which is making the rich shiver and the poor die in this city, is not genuine. It is the result of a corner, a deliberate conspiracy on the part of some coal operators to keep the supply short and force prices to the top.

Dwellers in New York who have listened to the long stories given out by the press agents of the operators about their herculean efforts to keep the city supplied may believe all these professions, but the business men who live in New Jersey and who come daily into New York as commuters on the different roads know exactly what the situation is.

Ask one of these men what the price of coal is in any of the hundreds of New Jersey towns and cities within 100 miles of New York. He will tell you that he can get coal—all he wants of it—for $6.25 a ton. He will tell you that all along the Erie, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, the Ontario & Western, the Lehigh Valley and the other coal road tracks there are thousands upon thousands of coal cars filled with anthracite. Some of it has been waiting on sidings for weeks. It is covered with snow. The men who own it for the zero weather they knew would soon afflict New York. So New York shivers. Mothers and their babes lie down at night and when the neighbors come in next day they are frozen corpses. Even the rich shiver, for as the price soars higher and higher, from $7.50 to $8, to $9, to $10, to $11, to $12, the greedy holders hang on in the hope that it will go higher yet.

Have Been Holding It

To cover their tracks as far as possible a third party has been brought into the iniquitous deal. This is the speculator. The retailers whose yards are empty, the retailers who have a few tons to sell at exorbitant prices, either by the half or quarter ton, or by the bag or pail to the very poor, tell you that they cannot get coal of the operators.

They have to get it of the speculator and pay whatever prices may be demanded. Some of the speculators demand as high as $9 and $10 a ton. Yet coal is selling for $5.50 at the mines and the North and East rivers are full of barges of coal held by speculators.

DEAD MAN IS NOT DEAD.

Friend Serving Sentence for a Murder That Did Not Occur.

Hudson, Mich., Dec. 12.—George P. Hannon of Medina township, supposed to have been murdered by a man of the name of Johnson, who is now serving a life sentence in the Marquette prison, has been heard from. He is at Seattle on a return trip from the Klondike. Hannon returned from the United States service in the Philippines with several comrades about two years ago. He and Johnson were in Denver together when Hannon disappeared. In a letter received by his mother Hannon says he went from Denver to the Klondike. He will reach Hudson in time to spend Christmas with his parents.

TRUSTFUL BOOZERS

Hand Over $6,000 Roll to Man Who Gives Them Advice.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 12. — James Kirkbridge, a resident of South St. Joseph, is the custodian of a roll of bills, amounting to $6,000 which was given him last night by two stockmen who said they were from South Dakota. The men had been drinking, and because Kirkbridge gave them some wholesome advice in the hope that they would not fall into evil hands and be robbed, the strangers thrust into his hands the roll of bills and insisted that he keep it. Kirkbridge made inquiries at the stock yards for the owners of the money but they could not be found.

TRIUMPH OF SURGERY.

Dangerous Operation Tried Successfully to Remedy Curvature of Spine.

New York, Dec. 12. — In order to remedy a growing curvature of the spine, Seth Williams of Brooklyn recently submitted to a rare and dangerous operation at the Polyclinic hospital, Manhattan. The vertebrae were fractured and forced together by a system of weights. When they had been properly straightened the young man was placed in a four-inch plaster cast. This was taken off several days ago and a thinner one substituted. Mr. Williams is now recovering at Summit, N. J.

Nast's Successor.

Washington, Dec. 12.—George Santer, United States consul at Antigua, British West Indies, has been appointed to succeed the late Thomas Nast as consul general at Guayaquil, Ecuador.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

The Supreme Court Hands Down Decisions in a Number of Cases Argued at the Recent Term.

Decisions have been handed down by the supreme court in several cases argued at the last term.

In the case of Katie A. Little vs. Stephen Braun, the court files the following syllabus:

Action to have a deed of warranty which is absolute in form adjudged to be a mortgage in effect, and to redeem from the same as a mortgage.

The complaint alleges, in substance, that the defendant loaned the plaintiff the sum of $302, and that to secure such loan it was agreed that the plaintiff should execute and deliver the deed of warranty in question, and that such deed was executed and delivered with the express agreement that, as between the parties thereto, it should operate as a mortgage to secure the loan.

The complaint further avers that, in making the loan and in entering into said agreements, the defendant was represented by one M. A. Wipperman, as defendant's agent.

Evidence examined, and held that plaintiff and defendant did not, at any time or in any manner, agree to accept the deed in question as a mortgage to secure the alleged loan, and that no such loan was ever made in fact.

Held further, under the evidence, that said M. A. Wipperman did not, at any time in question, act in the premises as the agent of the defendant, nor did he as such agent agree to any loan to plaintiff, nor did he ever agree, in behalf of the defendant, that the deed should operate as a mortgage.

Held further, under the evidence, that the deed when delivered was intended to operate as a deed absolute, and that the evidence to show a parol defeasance falls short of that high degree of proof required by an established rule of evidence in this class of cases. Joseph vs. Hazen, 4 N. D. 1, 58 N. W. Rep. 454, followed and applied.

Case vs. Ebbighausen.

In the case of J. I. Case Threshing Machine company vs. George W. and E. L. Ebbighausen, the syllabus of the decision is as follows:

"A written order for a threshing machine contained no provision for security on growing crops or on a second-hand engine. The machine company refused to deliver the machine unless such security was given. In order to get possession of the machine for immediate use the defendants gave such security and the machine was delivered.

"The order for the machine provided for the machine, as exhibited at the trial, had been changed so as to contain a provision that security should be given on such crops and engine. It is not shown when the alteration was made, nor by whom. Held, that the alteration was not a material one, in view of the fact that the defendants had given such security and received the machine uninfluenced by the content of the order as changed.

"The order for the machine provided that in case the machine failed to work well the company should be notified at Racine, Wis., and the agent of whom the purchase was made should also be notified. The company was not notified at the Racine office in any manner, but a general agent who had no authority to waive was notified by telephone that the machine would not work well, and an expert was sent by him pursuant to request to remedy the defects. The agent from whom the machine was purchased was also notified. Held, that such general agent's acts, independent of any orders or communications from the plaintiff, was not a waiver of the terms of the order requiring the company to be notified at the home office."

The Monson Case.

In the case of the Red River Valley National Bank vs. John Monson, the following is the syllabus:

"On the trial of an action which involved the issue whether a promissory note was given for a valuable consideration or was given as an accommodation note, it became a material question as to what transpired between the parties at the time the note was executed and an arrangement made, which certain notes, indorsed by Fuller & Co. and deposited with the bank as collateral security were turned over to a collection agency for collection. While testifying on that issue the following question was asked a witness for the plaintiff and an objection thereto sustained, viz.: 'Did the bank exercise any ownership over those notes?' Held, that the objection was properly sustained, as it called for a conclusion and not for a fact.

"Questions were propounded to the defendant as to whether he had ever received these notes, or proceeds of these notes, or had anything to do with them, and an objection thereto overruled. Held, not error.

"Held further, that error cannot be predicated on a ruling sustaining an objection to a question when the answer called for is thereafter fully given by the witness.

"The evidence is considered and it is held, that the verdict is sustained by competent evidence."

Nokken vs. Avery Manufacturing Co.

The following syllabus is filed in the case of O. P. Nokken vs. the Avery Manufacturing company:

"It is held, in an action to recover damages caused by the alleged negligent blowing of a whistle on defendant's threshing machine, that the jury did not act capriciously or arbitrarily in rejecting the testimony of the defendant's engineer, who testified that he did not blow the whistle, in view of other evidence in the case tending to contradict him, and that the court did not err in sustaining the question of the defendant's negligence to the jury.

"In an action to recover damages for injuries caused by a single act of negligence, it is not necessary to allege in the complaint the separate items of damage resulting therefrom. It is sufficient to allege a general sum, without specifying the particular items.

"The sufficiency of the evidence to sustain an item of damage sought to be recovered is not properly raised by a motion to strike out the evidence as to such item, and it is not error to refuse to strike out the evidence when it is competent.

DOGS OF WAR LET LOOSE

FIGHTING IS REPORTED IN THE STREETS OF LA GUAYRA.

VENEZUELA READY TO RESIST

TROOPS BEING MOBILIZED AND OTHER HOSTILE PREPARATIONS MADE.

DEWEY'S BIG FLEET IS READY

WILL SEE THAT ENGLAND AND GERMANY DO NOT GO TOO FAR.

London, Dec. 13.—The Central News says it was reported in the lobby of the house of commons yesterday afternoon that the allies have landed bluejackets at La Guayra for the purpose of effecting the capture of President Castro, and that fighting is going on in the streets.

The foreign office has no information to this effect.

Preparing for Resistance.

La Guayra, Dec. 13.—Gen. Ferrero, minister of war, has arrived here with 2,000 troops. Eight hundred men under President Castro's brother are expected here at 10 o'clock.

The government has sent 8,000 men and eighteen guns from Caracas to reinforce the garrison at La Guayra. These troops camped last night at Cuarauti, distant one hour from La Guayra. All day yesterday and the previous night ammunition was carried to Fort Lavigua, which crowns the harbor, and preparations are being made to resist the foreign forces.

Volunteers to the number of 326 men, all from La Guayra, have been armed, and more are requesting arms. It is asserted here that the government can find sufficient men to resist the foreign forces. Everywhere one meets men of all classes and conditions carrying rifles.

The German cruiser Vineta and the British cruiser Retribution left here at 6 o'clock last evening. It is supposed they have on board Venezuela's answer to the demand of the foreign powers, which arrived from Caracas on a special train.

Seize British and German Consuls.

London, Dec. 13.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Willemstad, Island of Curacao, dated Dec. 11, says:

"The Venezuelan authorities at Puerto Cabello are fortifying that town. They have seized and imprisoned the British and German consuls there as well as other Britons and Germans and have taken possession of their property. The authorities also seized a British steamer which was discharging a cargo of coal at Puerto Cabello. The vessel was unable to escape owing to a break-down in her machinery. The American consul at Puerto Cabello attempted to intervene, but he was disregarded."

Dewey Within Call.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Admiral Dewey, in command of the strongest fleet of warships ever assembled, is within a day's sail of the Venezuelan coast. What his instructions are the secretary of the navy declines to make public.

Dewey has with him five battleships and fifteen cruisers. The battleship Texas and the cruiser Topeka left the Portsmouth navy yard hurriedly last night to join Dewey's fleet.

With Dewey in command of such a fleet, only twenty-four hours distant from La Guayra, the government in Washington has no fear that England and Germany will go beyond a peaceful blockade at that port or do anything that will question the recognition of the Monroe doctrine.

The state department is serene and so is the White House and the navy department. No high official will give the reason for their in England and Germany. They admit, however, that the paper assurances of those two great powers are not the only guarantee that the operations in Venezuelan waters will not go beyond the legitimate punishment of President Castro for his defiance of international obligations in regard to the rights of foreign residents, interest on debts guaranteed by the Venezuelan government and the proper respect due the ministers of foreign powers.

Admiral Dewey may have no orders, but he is where he can be placed in close cable communication with Washington. Minister Bowen in Caracas is also regarded as in good position to see that England and Germany do not commit excesses. He has the same kind of nerve that Dewey has. He has shown it on several occasions.

Realize Its Seriousness.

London, Dec. 13.—Up to a late hour last night the foreign office was still without further official news regarding the situation in Venezuela.

While there is no confirmation of the rumors of fighting in La Guayra the newspapers this morning are beginning to show a keener appreciation of the serious possibilities involved by President Castro's continued defiance.

Much gratitude is expressed at Minister Bowen's prompt intervention in behalf of the British and German residents. Considerable alarm is expressed at the possible fate of British subjects not only in the coast towns but in the interior of Venezuela.

Through all the editorial articles published this morning there runs a strong vein of hope, more or less openly expressed, that the United States will interfere in some way to secure an adjustment of the difficulty acceptable to both sides, either by arbitration or by other means, and thus avoid hostilities. Some newspapers even go so far as to argue that it is the duty of the United States to coerce Venezuela into satisfying foreign claims.

Not Ready to Seize Customs.

London, Dec. 13—In connection with the reported seizure of the Venezuelan customs the foreign office officials say arrangements for that step have not been completed. Before any general seizure would occur, Germany, Great Britain and other nations would have to come to an agreement for a pro rata division and adjustment of their respective claims, similar to that arrived at by the allies in China, except that the La Guayra custom house may have possibly been seized as a purely military measure. Though the seizure of the custom house will take place eventually, it is pointed out that while hostilities are in progress, the customs as a fiscal institution are practically valueless.

Confirmed by Bowen.

Washington, Dec. 13—Minister Bowen, at Caracas, in a cablegram to the state department, confirms the press reports that all the British and German prisoners have been released.

France Is More Fortunate.

Paris, Dec. 13.—Leading French officials openly express gratification at the fact that France has secured through diplomacy what other powers were seeking to obtain through force. It is learned from an authoritative source that the French claims which will be submitted to the coming arbitration amount to $10,800,000.

Bowen Famous in Germany.

Berlin, Dec. 13.—Minister Bowen has suddenly become famous in Germany. The newspapers print his portrait with sketches of his career, applauding his prompt intervention in favor of the Germans and British at Caracas.

SALVADOR SAYS IT'S TOO HIGH.

Application for Reduction of Damage Award Is Made.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Salvador has applied for a reduction of the award, aggregating $500,000, made by the arbitration commission which met in Washington last spring, for injuries inflicted upon the Salvador Commercial company, an American concern, through the appropriation of the franchise. The allegation is made that the award is excessive. The state department has for the last three weeks been earnestly considering this matter, but from present indications it has not changed its mind as to the justice of the award, which must be paid by next February at the latest.

JOHN LIND ON RECIPROCITY.

Delivers Witty Speech Before International Convention.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 13. — The delegates to the international reciprocity convention yesterday afternoon adopted resolutions, listened to a witty and at the same time forceful address on reciprocity by ex-Gov. John Lind of Minnesota; heard the report of the finance committee and adjourned sine die. At the morning session but two addresses were made. Eugene N. Foss of Boston Discussed "Canadian Reciprocity," and Frank D. Peavey of New York spoke on "Reciprocity With Cuba."

MOROS ARE REPULSED.

Attempt to Surprise Americans but Are Fooled.

Manila, Dec. 13.—A force of Moros attacked Camp Vicars, Island of Mindanao, on Tuesday, after seventy days inactivity. They were repulsed without loss on the American side. The Moros approached stealthily at midnight, but the Americans were not surprised. The entire force was called to arms and drove off the attackers. It is believed the hostiles were from the country east of Lanao which Capt. Pershing has not yet visited.

KILLED BY HIS OWN MEN.

Constabulary Inspector Was Shot From Behind.

Manila, Dec. 13.—Reports have been received by the military authorities to the effect that Constabulary Inspector Hendryx, who was badly wounded on Nov. 25 on the island of Samar, supposedly by ladrones during an engagement, was in reality shot by one of his own men after the action began. The crime was committed by a constabulary private, who shot Hendryx from behind. All the members of the inspector's command then fled.

"TORONTO JIMMY" PINCHED.

Alleged Leader of Bank Robbers Is Arrested.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—"Toronto Jimmy," said to be the leader of the gang of six men who entered the Exchange bank at Garden, Ill., Oct. 28, and robbed that institution of $4,000, has been arrested in Chicago by central station detectives. He is thought to be the last of the gang. The other five members were recently arrested and sent to Morris.

MAD MULLAH SLAIN.

Rumor Is Current That the Somaliland Disturber Is Assassinated.

Joyful Occasion for Child of the Stage

Christmas day is usually a joyless holiday for actors, with its two performances and hurried dinner between them, writes Annie Russell. Christmas audiences are always in a happy mood and quickly responsive. But the very happiness in the air has a pathetic suggestion for the player who must work while others play.

Still, they have their compensation in the mysterious packages brought up by the stage door man, which one hasn't time to open until after the next scene. Oh, the delight of finishing that scene and opening the package.

A present from the family, who are reunited for the holidays in the old home, and who each send a gift and a word of loving greeting to the absent worker.

Then the telegrams, the flowers, the unexpected gifts from members of the company, or little offerings from a poor "stage hand," which touches you deeply, because you know how much the dollar and a half meant to him.

But on this especial Christmas day last year there was an air of great but suppressed excitement in "A Royal Family." One met the queen in her long court gown, struggling with her train over one arm and a huge package in the other, groping along a dark passage to the "property-room."

Then the cardinal, in his magnificent scarlet silk robes, guiltily concealing a long box. Others of the royal family were seen along the dark passage carrying parcels to the property-room, from which they emerged with smiling, eager faces.

As the curtain fell upon the final tableau of the play, with the entire court assembled, there was not the usual rush for the dressing rooms. Everyone remained on the stage, and the princess, taking the tiny prince by the hand, explained that she had received a letter from Santa Claus to say that he would visit the theater that day.

Hardly was the explanation made when on came Santa Claus, impersonated by the property man, drawing in a most wondrous Christmas tree, loaded with gifts and candles and fairy things.

The poor little actor for whom all this joy had been prepared by his grown comrades was too stunned to speak. Even after a formal introduction to Santa Claus and his assurance to the little boy that all the tree was his, the realization came slowly and he gave faint little squeals of joy as the undreamed of toys were shown to him.

Oh, the wonderful wagons that went half way across the stage when they were wound up, and the funny animals that jumped about all by themselves.

The child's delight grew and caught the whole company. What a sight it would have been for the audience leaving the theater could they have seen on the other side of the curtain. There was the entire court of Caron—king, queen, prince, princess, cardinal, courtiers, ambassadors, ladies in waiting—in all their gorgeous raiment, playing like children with the toys.

Some were on their hands and knees; others running around after a mechanical rabbit. The cardinal and the dowager queen were convulsed over the antics of two wooden monkeys having a prize fight.

Where was the dignity and the art now! Forgotten in the happiness of a moment of return to that nature which makes the whole world kin to a little child.

Early Christmas Music

Both in Germany and in England in olden times the custom prevailed among young choristers of going through the streets in bands early on Christmas morning and singing Christmas hymns and carols for alms before the houses of the rich. A familiar picture is that of Martin Luther when a boy singing in the streets at Christmas dawn. Several of the most familiar German Christmas hymns were harmonized early in the seventeenth century by Jacob Praetorius to melodies composed about the middle of the sixteenth century by Luther. One of the greatest masters of German music, Johann Sebastian Bach, when a pupil at the choir and grammar school of St. Michael's, in Luneberg, walked the streets early Christmas morning singing these "waits," as they were called in England, with his fellow choristers, between whom and those of another school the musical rivalry was so intense that the authorities were obliged to map out separate routes for them in order to prevent their meeting and coming to blows.

New Year Superstitions

With the exception of All-Saints' Day there is no time in the whole twelvemonth about which so many superstitions cluster as New Year's. Some form of divination to foretell the future is practiced in almost every land on January 1. This, of course, is practically the case with young people who desire to know whether they will get married during the coming year or soon thereafter. In the country districts of England and Germany there is a tea and coffee test which is most satisfactory. A teaspoon is balanced carefully on the edge of a cup. Then tea or coffee, as the case may be, is dropped into it, drop by drop. Every drop that the spoon will hold without losing its balance means another year before the wedding. One or two large drops will usually upset the spoon, and so this is a very popular way of looking into the future.

Don'ts For Christmas

Don't forget that a basket of fruit or a box of flowers is just as nice a present in many cases as something that will last a good deal longer.

Don't give your husband something he don't want, just because you want it yourself or it will look nice in the parlor. This "don't" works the other way also, though men are not often sinners in this line.

Don't think that you are too poor to keep Christmas. You can't be so poor as all that.

Don't spend so much money on Christmas that you can't get even with the butcher and grocer until March.

Don't give presents that are a pleasure for 10 minutes and a burden and a worry for ten years; that is, don't give the dweller in town a beautiful bulldog, even if it did take a prize at the dog show, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Don't give a drum to the children of your enemy who works nights. A watchman's rattle is just as good, and it is cheaper.

A Scotch Celebration

In Scotland there is a curious superstition to the effect that good or bad fortune is brought to the house by the character of the first caller on New Year's day. In the eighteenth century this was supposed to take effect after 12 o'clock, and so devoted lovers would station themselves outside of the doors of the houses where their sweethearts dwelt so that they could enter at once upon the striking of the hour. From midnight till morning the streets of Edinburgh were crowded with young men, all making merry in one way or another. Indeed, it is the most important celebration of the year to the Scotch.

Need of Improvement in Dairy Methods.

From Farmers' Review: In no article of human food is so much filth consumed as in dairy products. When milk or cream is ordered even at our best hotels and restaurants, dirt is frequently found at the bottom if it is allowed to stand a short time. This is not appetizing, to say the least, and is driving people who like milk to using something in its stead. This greatly reduces the consumption of milk and at present Americans do not consume more than one-third as much milk per capita as is used in some European countries. Many persons use as little milk as possible because of the careless way in which it is produced and the fear that it may contain disease germs. As dairy products are usually consumed in the raw state, there is, of course, more danger on this account, but when in proper condition they are both healthful and economical and would be consumed in much larger quantities if people could always obtain them clean and of good quality.

Simply because we are accustomed to doing a thing in a slipshod way is no reason for its continuance. We are living in an age of the most rapid change and improvement and the sharpest competition. The public is becoming more intelligent and is demanding better food products year after year, and unless the dairymen fall into line and march with the procession by producing clean milk and dairy products their consumption will certainly decrease. People will not continue to drink milk in which a sediment is found and to eat poor butter and cheese. It is then to the interest of the dairymen themselves as well as the general public that attention be given to the production of milk, butter and cheese that are clean and attractive in appearance as well as of superior quality.

In dairying as in all other occupations there is room at the top and it is in the better class of dairying that the profits lie, for this is as yet a field almost wholly unoccupied.—W. J. Fraser, University of Illinois.

Gain in Feeding Silage.

There are about 2,488 hills in an acre of corn. Valuing the corn at from $10 to $12 an acre, you will find feeding six hills a day, it will cost you 2½ cents a day to feed a cow or a horse. The cow or horse is doing its own grinding and shucking the feed, costing you 2½ cents per day per animal. We remember one year after our cows had gone through a terrible drought, they caught the pink-eye from a neighbor's cattle, which he had bought at the stock yards. They fell off in flesh and milk. Frost had killed our field corn and we were at a loss to know what to do. This was the latter part of October, and we began to feed ensilage and from that day we increased our milk, the cows gained in flesh, the hair looked silky and glossy and the milk was of a rich June color.—L. A. Speis.

Unscientific Handling of Milk.

Mr. McNutt said: The farmer sells his milk for 2 cents a quart, the baby who drinks it pays 8. Two cents for production, 6 cents for distribution. There is something wrong about that. I found out the trouble one morning when in New York. At 4 o'clock a milkman came along, climbed stairs and left a pint of milk. His wagon rattled away a quarter of a mile and delivered another pint. That morning over fifteen milk peddlers came up those same stairs to deliver milk. We have learned how to distribute our letters, but if we had the same system of distribution in the mail service that we have in the milk business every letter would cost 25 cents postage.—Benton Harbor, Mich., News.

Big Returns From Poultry.

Now what about the returns from eggs and poultry meat when produced? I am disposed to under, rather than over, estimate in this matter. A very moderate estimate is 100 eggs per hen per year for sale or use. These eggs at one cent each are worth $1.00 all told. In addition to this you should have a setting of eggs that would give you eight chickens, which, at 10 cents each, would be worth 80 cents. This makes a total return of $1.80. What does it cost to produce these returns? This is just where one marked advantage of poultry raising comes in. A great deal of the feed used to produce poultry on the farm is made up of what are, comparatively speaking, waste products—small grain, table scraps, green bone, etc. But we have made experiments at Ottawa with a view of learning just what the cost of production is where foods have to be purchased—the cost of the grain used, being placed at a cent a pound. Even on this basis, the cost of feeding a hen, as shown by actual experiment, was not beyond 75 cents per year. This left a profit of at least $1.00 per fowl. And this was allowing only a cent each for eggs. How much greater would the profits be if eggs were produced in winter, when 25, 30 and 35 cents per dozen can be obtained in Toronto or local markets? In that case the net profits would run up to $1.50 to $2.00 per year.—Prof. A. G. Gilbert.

Spain has 620,000 miles of cork forests, and Kentucky is insanely jealous.

Live Stock Items.

It is hard to get bids on short fed steers.

From this time until after the holidays, beef will have to compete with big supplies of poultry in the retail markets.

November 17th the best grades of cattle on the London (Eng.) market were quoted at 14¾ cents and common cattle at Liverpool were bringing 11¾ cents. Choice lambs sold for 14½ and good ewes at 11¾ cents.

Reports from feeding districts of the middle west indicate that while at some points a smaller number of cattle than usual will be fed, in the majority of instances stocks are above normal, some correspondent reporting 200 and 300 per cent. Many estimate 100 to 110 per cent on feed.

Western correspondents report that Kansas feeders are rather apathetic and are not going into the business on the usual liberal scale. Corn is not cheap enough to tempt them and they fear beef prices will not be maintained. This should help business for feeders in the eastern portion of the corn belt.

The officials of the National Live Stock bank at the Union Stock Yards have shown their interest in the International Exposition by offering prizes for fat stock, viz.: On grand champion carload grain-fed steers, $200; on grand champion carload of feeding steers, $200; on champion carload of fat sheep, $100.

Red Wilkes, the greatest living sire of trotters, with 117 standard trotters and 41 pacers to his credit, again went under the hammer last week, and, although he is now 28 years old, he brought $850 or $250 more than he brought two years ago, when William C. Hendrickson paid $600 for him at the Cloverdale dispersal sale.

At the sale of Herefords, November 18th, at Indianapolis, the splendid cow Theresa, 86,482, sired by Mercury out of Lady Wilton, and owned by S. H. Godman of Wabash, Ind., carried off the honors. She was sold with her heifer calf, Miss Theresa, and the first bid was $1,300. This was raised to $1,350, at which price she was sold to D. E. Studebaker of Warren, Ind. Miss Nelly Bly 7th was sold to J. N. Shirley of Lebanon, Ind., for $515, and Chloe to Anderson & Son for $625.

Several American capitalists have joined in the purchase of a tract of land in the State of Sonora, Northern Mexico, embracing 7,500,000 acres. It is being enclosed by a wire fence and is to be converted into the largest cattle ranch in the world. In its present wild state it will afford pasturage for about 50,000 cattle. An extensive irrigation system is planned and much attention will be given to the growing of forage crops. W. C. Greene, who is the head of the syndicate, is president of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company, which operates some of the most productive mines of Mexico.

The annual report of State Veterinarian Knowles of Montana, soon to be issued, will show the inspection of 205,728 animals of all kinds, of which the sheep inspection aggregated 198,287. Forty-seven horses were killed and their carcasses destroyed because they had glanders, while six beeves were killed on account of tuberculosis. The number of horses quarantined was 1,593. As shown by the report 112,567 southern cattle were brought into the state, accompanied by the required health certificates. The number of such certificates issued for animals going into other states and across the Canadian lines was 10,306; while the number given out for animals going directly to the Northwest Territory was 5,726.

Farmers' Sons in a Judging Ring.

In a communication to the Farmers' Review Manager Skinner of the International Live Stock Exposition says: A most highly interesting and instructive innovation this year at the International Live Stock Exposition will be the admission of farmers' sons into the students' judging contest. The donors of the premiums for this year's contest, Messrs. Spoor, Clay and Sanders, have specially specified that the contest be left open to all farmers' sons, regardless of their belonging to any agricultural college. This will give the colleges an opportunity to prove up their teachings, and boys who are not able to take the time for schooling will have an opportunity to become a part of this educational feast. It will hardly be expected that any recognized, first-class school will, under these circumstances, fail to enter the lists, as the schools would better look to their laurels in such a contest. Fathers whose boys have not attended this exposition should not allow anything to prevent the boys from coming this year to watch this event, so as to prepare themselves for subsequent contests, as undoubtedly at future expositions this feature will remain a fixture. In addition to its being a pleasure to send the boys, fathers should consider it a bounden duty to give them the benefit of this week's live-stock education, and the man who farms and is not a student striving to improve and put his place on a better footing each year will not be a success. Remember the date, November 29 to December 6.

The practice of moistening the cow's teat with milk when milking is a dirty one and should be abandoned.

A Wrong Interpretation.

A bright young woman was very deeply interested in her Sunday school class, and endeavored to make the little ones understand different verses in the Bible more clearly by letting them finish each sentence.

"The idol had eyes," sh esaid, "but it couldn't—"

"See!" cried the children.

"It had lips, but it couldn't—"

"Speak!" the children answered.

"It had ears, but it couldn't—"

"Hear!" they once more correctly replied.

"It had a nose, but it couldn't—"

"Blow it!" the children confidently shouted.—New York Evening Sun.

Never Heard of It.

"It it not soothing," asked the maiden, "to sit here and gaze upon the face of Nature?"

"Yes," answered the mere man.

"Dear old Nature!" resumed she, "Her face is ever fresh and fair. She ever has a smile for us all, and we know that her face is unsullied and untouched by the artifice of fashion."

"Well," remarked the mere man, "I don't know that I ever heard of the artifices of fashion requiring two men and a horse to go over the face of humanity with a two-ton roller every week."—Cassell's Journal.

The Schoolboys and the Queen.

Two little schoolboys in Holland recently sent Queen Wilhelmina a quaint little letter, which, translated, reads: "Dear Queen—Do, please, say that our teacher is not to be sent away. She is so good to us, and we love her so much, and really she hasn't done anything. Father says you are powerful and good, and that you even pardon murderers, because you wish bad people to become good again." Queen Wilhelmina sent a reply promising that the case of the teacher threatened with dismissal should be investigated.—Leslie's Weekly.

Fifty Dollars to Sit Down.

Carmel, Ind., Dec. 15th.—Mr. Joseph L. Duffy relates an experience that has aroused considerable interest in this locality. It is best given in his own words.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have effected quite a number of other cures here and it seems safe to say they are an effective and permanent cure for all diseases arising from the Kidneys.

"Hello, yourself!" answered the Earth. "How are you feeling this spring?"

Only One Blockhead Left.

Conversation became reminiscent at the Lawyers' club, the other day, the late Judge James T. Brady being the subject. A veteran practitioner, who knew him well, said:

"Brady's first attempt at practicing law was in very humble quarters, in the rear of a cobbler's shop in Fulton street, near William. One day an Irishman who called and inquired for the cobbler, was told by Brady that he was out. Peering about the room of the newly-fledged lawyer, scantily furnished with two unpainted chairs and a deal table, he inquired:

"'I say, boss, what do you sell here?'

"'Blockheads,' promptly replied Mr. Brady.

"'Humph!' said the Irishman, 'must be doing a good business, as I see you have only one left.'"—New York Times.

An effort is to be made at the session of the legislature this winter to secure the passage of a bill which will add the counties of Clay and Beltrami to this judicial district and provide for an additional judge to be appointed by the governor. All of the attorneys in this district are in favor of the change.

If the newspaper correctly report the proceedings of the Game and Fish commission that much advertised body is contemplating making more of a public nuisence of itself, if possible, than ever before. They now ask the legislature to impose a fine of $25 on anyone found carrying a gun without a license—half to go to the informer. This may go in Russia but we do not think it will stand up in "the land of free and the home of the brave." The constitution of the United States provides that the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed. FROZE TO DEATH.

A Homesteader Enroute to the Lumber Camps.

Frank Bartlett, a homesteader living in the town of Linn, Roseau county, arrived in the city last Friday with both arms and legs badly frozen and died early Tuesday morning at the South Spring hospital on the East Side. The unfortunate man was enroute with four horses to the lumber camps of the Red lake country where he had intended to work during the winter. When at Highlanding, about 20 miles east of this city, he lost the road and wandered about on the reservation for some time until he was picked up by some Indians and afterwards brought to this city. His condition was such that nothing could be done when he arrived here to save his life, although he was given the best of care.

Bartlett was a single man and resided upon his homestead in the summers, going to the woods in the winter. His sister arrived here yesterday and the remains will be taken to Nebraska for burial.

Wheat	62c
Oats	30c
Flax	$1.07
Barley	35c
Butter	20c
Eggs	20c
Potatoes	30c

The following letter furnished by the Edwards, Wood & Co. Commission Merchants, 110 Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis, 310 Board of Trade, Duluth.

Last week's wheat market was active and strong, and the Minneapolis wheat made a net gain of ⅝ cents per bushel. The price rests upon the broad and sure foundation of a large and steady home and foreign demand. Wheat continues to go out to Australia from both American coasts and shipments of four from the Pacific coast to South Africa are good. Exports for the week were 3,761,000 bushels, but the foreign demand is better shown by sales for export which were very large. The eagerness of foreigners for American wheat is partially explained by the closing of navigation of Danubian ports and the falling off of the exports from these countries. Our domestic visible supply gained 2,211,000 bushels for the week but continues to drop under last year's figures. Two weeks ago the difference was 7,000,000 bushels, a week ago 9,000,000 bushels, and the visible supply is now 11,000,000 bushels under the amount at this time last year, the indications are strong that it reached the maximum for the year. Receipts of all grains at primary points last week were 13,543,000 bushels, the lightest in two months and 14 less than the previous week and 10 under last year. The decrease was mostly in wheat and oats as receipts of corn increased 279,000 bushels. World's shipments (board's figures) were six and a half million bushels bushels compared with 9,080,000 for the week before, and 7,095,000 bushels a year ago.

RED LAKE LANDS

Senator Clapp Has an Amendment to Insure Opening.

The following telegram from Washington was published in last Saturday's Minneapolis Journal.

Senator Clapp has a plan for passing a law at this session of congress which will insure the opening of all the townships of agricultural land in the Red Lake reservation covered by the treaty which has passed the senate and is now pending in the house. He has drafted and referred to Commissioner Jones for an opinion a bill providing that all these lands shall be sold by sealed bids in tracts not exceeding 160 acres to each purchaser, the time of payment extending over five years. The object of the proposed amendment is to meet the objection made to this treaty by Representative Cannon that the government will have to expend a million dollars for land with no assurance of its ever being returned to the treasury, in view of the prospect of its being made subject to the terms of the free homes law after it has been obtained and entered.

Commissioner Jones is in favor of the proposition to sell the land by sealed bids but will oppose allowing the deferred payments to run for five years. He wants the land sold for cash. He fears that if hard times come to the purchasers they will appeal to congress for an extension and payment altogether. In support of his contention he cites the case of lands in Kansas and Nebraska sold at auction, the purchasers of which secured legislation relieving them of the payment of a large share of the purchase money. It is estimated that the Red Lake land will bring at least $10 an acre. The treaty negotiated by Inspector McLaughlin provides for the sale at $3.90 an acre.

Mayor Kratka has received the following letter from Senator Clapp:

"Mr. Cannon is more obdurate than ever, and of course having been practically nominated for speaker, with committees yet to be appointed, you can see the power which he has. He is willing to favor a bill to provide for the sale of the land at public auction at not less than $5 per acre, homestead requirements as to cultivation and residence, the bill to take effect when ratified by the Indians. This practically means a new proposition. Secretary Hitchcock will do all in his power to facilitate prompt action by the department upon the passage of the bill, assuring me that he will send for McLaughlin and have the matter closed up as soon as it is possible to do so. The old bill, you will remember, only allows $5000 for improvements abandoned by the Indians removing from the land; this I do not think is a sufficient sum and and in the new bill that sum can be increased. I have drawn a bill and left it with the secretary, to be taken up when congress reassembles. Will be in St. Paul next week.

City Clerk Lars Backe has received the following letter from Senator Nelson:

In reply to your favor of the 15th I beg leave to say that I have no doubt but what the delegation will do all that it is possible to do to secure the opening of those Indians lands east of your place. I know that Senator Clapp is doing all he can in conjunction with Congressmen Eddy and Morris in perfecting a new bill which will meet with the approval of the Department, and which will undoubtedly pass and accomplish what you want. I shall be very glad to cooperate with the rest of the delegation to the best of my ability. I don't think you need have any fears that our delegation will not do the best they can under the circumstances.

Sad Death.

HE MADE MONEY

George Ralph Charged for 90 Days Work in Two Months.

Conditions discovered by the public examiner's office and investigated by James A. Peterson of Minneapolis, under commission from the governor have resulted in two indictments by the grand jury at Crookston against George A. Ralph, an engineer of that town. The indictments seem to indicate a wholesale bleeding of the state treasury, the treasuries of Polk, Marshall, Roseau, Wadena and Red Lake counties by Ralph and his associates.

The specific charges in the first indictment are that Ralph charged Polk, Marshall and Red Lake counties, as well as the state drainage board for work on the same dates swearing in presenting this bill to each county, that his time had been spent in the service of the county.

The second indictment alleges that Ralph charged Polk county $35 for the services of one McPhaul as civil engineer, for the seven days between Feb. 27 and March 5, 1902, and also charged Red Lake county with the same McPhaul's services as rodman at $2 per day for the same seven days. Both these bills of expense were sworn to by Ralph.

The history of Ralph's alleged speculations is a long one. The Minnesota legislature of 1901 appropriated a sum of money to be used in draining the Red River Valley. The legislature authorized counties in the Red River valley to engage in the work of ditching and drainage, and authorized any three counties to join hands in this work.

George A. Ralph of Crookston is a civil engineer, and has gained quite a reputation for his ability in this profession. On this acount he was made a member of the state drainage board. He was also engaged as engineer at $5 a day by Polk, Marshall, Roseau, Wadena and Red Lake counties, the legislature having authorized counties to designate engineers at this rate to oversee the drainage work.

According to the statement of the state's attorney, Ralph has duplicated his bills, and has charged the state drainage board for time spent at meetings of that body in St. Paul, while at the same time he was charging two or more of the five counties named $5 a day for his services. One instance is alleged where Ralph charged four counties $5 each for his services on the same day.

It is further alleged that Ralph hired rodmen, axemen and other laborers for the work of surveying. In some instances it is charged that Ralph classed these men as engineers in his expense accounts, and charged $5 a day for their services, when in reality they should have been paid not more than $2. Not content with this over-charge, Ralph, according to the charges, in some instances duplicated the time of these men just as he duplicated his own bills.

One of the cases is that of McPhaul, a young man of good general education, but of no experience in surveying or civil engineering, who served as rodman on one of Ralph's surveying crew. In some of the bills returned by Ralph, McPhaul is classed as engineer to be paid $5 a day.

Another "engineer" whose valuable services cost the same amount is one Johnson, a common laborer who acted as helper on a crew.

These duplications of charges were discovered by one of the deputies of Public Examiner Johnson. A report was made to Governor Van Sant, and a more detailed investigation showed an apparently appalling state of corruption. James A. Peterson of Minneapolis was appointed by Governor Van Sant to present the evidence in the cases to the Polk county grand jury, and the result was the return of the indictments previously mentioned. Meanwhile the state ordered payment stopped on the warrants issued for Ralph's expenses.

The first indictment charges that between the dates of April 26 and June 24, Ralph presented and swore to a bill against Polk and Marshall counties for 35 days work on Judicial ditch No. 1. He also presented a bill to Red Lake county for all but five days of the period named. During this period he was present at several meetings of the state drainage board in St. Paul, and during one week of this time he was working in Wadena county.

In other words, of these sixty days (including Sundays), Ralph is accused of charging Polk, Marshall and Red Lake counties with ninety days' work. In his spare moments he managed to give the state drainage board and Wadena another fortnight of his two months. It is not known whether he charged Wadena county with the week spent there.

The full extent to which the five counties named have been bled is not known, nor will be until further returns are secured from those counties.

TO WASHINGTON

Our Mayor Will Be There Next Week.

The city council at a meeting held last week authorized Mayor Frank H. Kratka to appoint private secretary and fixed the salary at $750 per year. This was done for the purpose of allowing the mayor to be relieved of his duties here for a few weeks and take a trip to Washington, where he will look after the passage of the Red Lake bill which will open to settlement some eleven townships of agricultural land just east of this city. Mr. Kratka will leave next week and will probably be absent in Washington for a month or six weeks. He has appointed his daughter, Miss Daisy Kratka, as his private secretary.

Says He's All Right.

C. H. Schellback, a graduate of the Minnesota law school, has located at Thief River Falls for the practice of his profession, and The Courier wishes to commend him to the good graces of the people of that city. For many years Mr. Schellback was a successful school superintendent, serving for two terms in that capacity at Adrian, where the writer had opportunity to observe his most excellent qualifications as a man and a scholar. The people of Thief River may consider themselves fortunate in securing the addition of such estimable people as Mr. and Mrs. Schellback.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

PEACE IS NOW LOOKED FOR

EFFORTS TO SECURE ARBITRATION ARE PROGRESSING SATISFACTORILY.

BOWEN IS GIVEN FULL SWING

VENEZUELA GIVES HIM POWER TO ACT WITHOUT RESTRICTION.

"WAR BLOCKADE" COMES NOW

DOES NOT MEAN THAT MINISTER BOWEN'S EFFORTS HAVE FAILED.

Caracas, Dec. 20. — Venezuela's efforts to bring about arbitration of its disputes with European powers, which the government and all thinking men of the leading classes hope will result in a satisfactory settlement, are progressing satisfactorily, and it is trusted that the honor and welfare of the nation will be thus protected. Yesterday morning the government delivered to Mr. Bowen, the American minister, full authority to do all that he can to secure arbitration and appointing him as the representative of Venezuela on any board of arbitration that may be selected.

The replies to the proposition forwarded by Venezuela through Washington to London and Berlin asking that the question at issue be decided by arbitration are awaited here with intense anxiety.

Merchants, proprietors and every one having anything at stake wish to avoid war and seek to prevent if possible the blockade of the coast, which would bring ruin to the country.

A meeting of prominent citizens was held last night to discuss the situation. So anxious were those attending to avoid hostilities with the powers that they declared they were willing to loan the government sufficient money to pay the claims if the authorities thought this necessary. Perfect calm has been restored, even in government circles.

Confirmed in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The state department received a telegram yesterday from Herbert W. Bowen, the United States minister at Caracas, giving the text of a formal communication from President Castro and the Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, in which full powers to adjust the pending difference between Venezuela and the European allies are conferred on Mr. Bowen.

After a long conference with the president on the subject Secretary Hay sent instructions to the United States embassies at London, Berlin and Rome to communicate to the British, German and Italian governments the fact of Mr. Bowen's designation as the Venezuelan representative and to request these governments to state whether he will be acceptable to them in that capacity.

Secretary Hay sent a telegram to Mr. Bowen in which he was told that he might act as the intermediary of Venezuela if the European governments concerned consented.

The news from Mr. Bowen of the action of the action of the Venezuelan government is regarded here as the most important that has been received since the beginning of the present embroglio in South America. This government earnestly hopes that the allies will consent to treat with Mr. Bowen, and should this hope be realized it will be practically certain according to the belief here that peace will be established between Castro and his foreign enemies.

"War Blockade" Ordered.

Caracas, Dec. 20. — It has been learned from an official source that the allies yesterday notified the Venezuelan authorities at Guayra of the blockade, to become effective Saturday, Dec. 20, at 3 p. m., of the ports of La Guayra, Puerto Cabello, Coro, Maracaibo, Carupano and Barcelona.

Washington, Dec. 20. — As understood here, the blockade to be declared by the allies against Venezuela on Saturday is to be a "war blockade" as contrasted with the "peace blockade" which has been in operation since the trouble with Venezuela assumed acute stage. Ordinarily a legal blockade is preceded by a declaration of war, but at times this formality is dispensed with and a blockade maintained just as though war had been formally declared. To all intents and purposes war has existed and such condition has been recognized by the governments of the allies.

The notice about the issue of the formal blockade of Venezuelan ports is not understood here to mean that Minister Bowen's efforts to adjust the Venezuelan difficulties have failed. It was conceived that the naval commanders of the powers were acting under explicit instructions, which included the establishment of a blockade, and it was not expected that these instructions would be suspended until the negotiations through diplomatic channels had assumed a phase indicative of a final and satisfactory adjustment.

Bowen Given Full Power.

Caracas, Dec. 20. — Lopez Baralt, Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, has transmitted to United States Minister Bowen a document signed by President Castro as constitutional president of the republic, and countersigned by himself as minister of foreign affairs, in which Mr. Bowen is recognized as the only representative of Venezuela in the matter of effecting a settlement of the present difficulty. According to the terms of the document Mr. Bowen may act without restriction, and he is to use all means possible to protect the interests of Venezuela.

Receiver for Venezuela.

Washington, Dec. 20. — The latest suggestion for clearing up the Venezuelan situation is to treat that government as an international bankrupt and have the president of the United States to appoint a receiver to take charge of the custom houses, collect the revenues and apportion them among the creditors after setting aside sufficient sum to maintain an economical administration.

This suggestion was made to President Roosevelt, and it impressed him favorably as a way of settlement should this government be finally drawn into the affair. It would have to be agreed to by the Venezuelan government and the other governments represented as creditors, and it would have to be done without any guarantee from this government that the debts would be paid. This government would only consent to appoint a receiver who should take charge of the customs and so apportion the receipts as to keep the government running on an economical basis and fairly distribute the surplus to the creditors.

Captures Venezuelan Schooner.

La Guayra, Dec. 20. — The German cruiser Falke, which has been anchored for the past two days at the entrance of Lake Maracaibo, yesterday captured the Venezuelan schooner Victoria. After cutting down her main mast, thus disabling her, the Germans abandoned the vessel. This incident has caused great indignation among Venezuelans, and excitement runs higher at Maracaibo, where the people have been parading the streets, uttering cries against Great Britain and Germany.

Another "Mailed Fist."

Washington, Dec. 20.—The navy department contributed the most important developments in the Venezuelan situation over night in the form of a cablegram from Admiral Dewey announcing the proposed itinerary of the vessels of his fleet during the Christmas holidays. So prudently and advisedly have its details been drawn up that Secretary Moody cabled the admiral the department's approval of his orders.

According to the approved plans the powerful fighting ships of Admiral Dewey's fleet will rendezvous at the Island of Trinidad, right off the coast of Venezuela, and at St. Thomas, near Porto Rico. Rear Admiral Higginson, commanding the North Atlantic squadron, will have command of the battleship fleet at Trinidad, on his flagship Kearsarge, with Rear Admiral Sumner commanding the South Atlantic squadron on his flagship Iowa as second in command. The fleet at St. Thomas, which includes two battleships, will be under the command of Rear Admiral Crowninshield, on his flagship Illinois. The fleet of cruisers and smaller vessels which will anchor at St. Kitts, will be in command of Rear Admiral Coglan, commanding the Caribbean division, on his flagship Olympia.

No Hurry to Answer.

London, Dec. 20.—It is not apparent that anything definite has resulted from yesterday's cabinet meeting with regard to the transmission by the government of the United States of Venezuela's request for arbitration.

Charge d'Affaires White was in touch with the foreign office throughout the day. He transmitted a long dispatch to the state department at Washington, but this communication is not believed to contain anything in the nature of a final decision.

The governor decided to issue a proclamation announcing the organization of the new county. A SONG OF THE WAY.

Is the world a-rollin' right?
Never mind, believers!
Keep yer faith strong day an' night—

Never mind, believers!

Though you press a thorny bed,
Never mind, believers!
Thankful for a crust o' bread—
Never mind, believers!
Dash the tear-drops from your eyes—
Songs are comin' after sighs;
See!—the light is in the skies!—
Never mind, believers!

A GENTLEMAN'S CHILD.

By UNA HUDSON.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Publishing Co.)

The bell of the Foundling's Home rang softly, so softly that the old portress dozing at her post beside the door took no heed; but Sister Mary Angela passing through the hall heard and herself answered the summons.

"She's tired, poor thing," she said with a pitying glance at the nodding portress, and she stepped softly past the sleeper and opened wide the door. Instinctively her hand sought the basket that day and night stood just without the entrance; for Sister Mary Angela had been long in the Foundling's Home and her caressing hands and pitying heart had soothed and welcomed many a tiny outcast.

She lifted the child tenderly, and loosening its wrappings, held it so that the rays of the dimly burning night-lamp shone full on its baby face. It opened big, violet-blue eyes and stared blinkingly at the light, and its dimpled hands clutched at a fold of the sister's black gown. To its dress was pinned a paper on which was written a single line:

"Amabel, a gentleman's child."

And the sister read and sighed softly for the penciled words told a story with which she was only too familiar.

"Poor child," she said gently, "Poor child," and her thoughts were of the mother rather than of the babe she held in her arms.

But she blamed no one, this good sister, for she knew that to every story there are many sides and unheard she would condemn neither man nor woman.

In the gray light of the early morning Policeman O'Donnell followed silently a girl who, muttering incoherently and wringing her hands, walked rapidly toward the bridge and the darkly flowing river. She paused for a moment above where the current ran swiftest and the policeman laid his hand on her arm.

"None o' that, my girl," he said gruffly, "none o' that!"

And at the sound of his voice the poor, distraught creature burst into wild sobbing, and turning, clutched desperately at his arm.

"I don't want to," she cried, the love of life rising strong within her and fighting against the black despair that possessed her soul. "I don't want to; but there's nothing else for me to do; in all the wide world there's no place for me."

The burly policeman patted her shoulder with rough kindliness. "We'll see," he said, "we'll see. Come with me, my girl." And half leading, half carrying her he made his way through the silent streets and stopped before a square, brick building. But the girl drew back protesting.

"Not here," she cried, "any where but here; it is the Foundlings' Home."

"And what if it is," O'Donnell said, not heeding her protest, "the good sisters will know what to do for you."

And he rang the bell and gave her in charge of Sister Mary Angela, who took the forlorn girl in her arms and soothed and comforted her as she might a child.

"You shall stay with us as long as you will," the Sister said, "We need you here. There was a tiny baby left on the steps last night. The Sister's have so many to care for; you shall have charge of it."

"For," the Sister said to herself, "she must be taken out of herself. She needs something to love and the baby needs a mother."

And the girl caught at the Sister's

"Annabel, a gentleman's child."

hand, and the light of hope came back to her dull eyes.

"You will let me stay," she breathed softly, "and I may love the little baby. Oh, God be thanked!"

• • •

Sheltered within the walls of the Foundling's Home and tenderly cared for by the good Sisters the little Amabel grew and blossomed like a flower. And the girl whose life had all but gone out beneath the silent river watched over the child and loved her with such love as often brought upon her the gentle chiding of Sister Mary Angela.

"Set not your heart upon the things of earth, Sister Dorothea," was her oft-spoken reproof.

And she who had come homeless and despairing, but who now wore the black gown of the sisterhood and was known as "Sister Dorothea," would answer always:

"But you gave her to me to love, Sister Mary Angela."

And Sister Mary Angela looking at the peaceful face of Sister Dorothea and remembering that from which she had been saved would sigh softly and say no more.

But over the happiness of Sister Dorothea there was always the shadow of an impending sorrow; for from time to time, now one and now another of the children whom the Sisters tended would be sent away to homes that had been found for them in the outside world. There were days when men and women came, seeking to gain by adoption that which Nature had denied. And at such times Sister Dorothea would turn faint and sick with apprehension and strive to hide the little Amabel; for though she knew that within the Foundling's Home there could be no future for the child she so dearly loved yet from the moment of parting she shrunk faint-heartedly.

"In all the wide world there's no place for me!"

"The child is young," she told herself, "there is no need for haste in finding her a home."

And so the days went by till Amabel was four years old; when there came to the Foundling's Home a lady, at sight of whose loveliness Sister Dorothea for a brief moment forgot her haunting fear lest Amabel be taken from her. Then she raised her eyes to the face of the man who walked by the lady's side and her own face went white as the spotless linen folds that bound her brow.

She heard their request for a child and half blindly she led forward the little Amabel and caressed the child's bright hair with shaking hands, for she knew that now the time of parting was upon her.

And Amabel, the child of her love and care, turned from the black-robed Sister and going fearlessly toward the beautiful lady played with the bracelet on her wrist.

But into the eyes of the man had come a look as of one who gazes upon the face of the dead, and he whispered a name beneath his breath—a name that the somberly garbed Sister had not heard for four long years.

"What is your name, dear?" the lady was saying and the child answered "Amabel."

"'Amabel', that is a pretty name. And your other name, what is it?"

"She has no other name, "Sister Dorothea said very gently, "She was left here a tiny baby four years ago. I know, for I, too, was brought here that same night. I—I was most unhappy; I had tried to drown myself and the Sisters cared for me and gave me the child to love. Her name was written on a slip of paper and pinned to her dress and a—a wedding ring was found in the basket with her. I—I have kept it lest the child should lose it."

And from out the folds of her black gown the Sister took a ring and dropped it with a scarcely perceptible shudder into the lady's outstretched hand. [illegible]

But the man knew that the ring had signalized nothing and his eyes sought the Sister's face, dumbly beseeching forgiveness for the wrong he had done her.

But the mother's thoughts were less for the man who had betrayed her than for the child she had borne him. She who had been too proud to plead for herself, stretched out her hands and besought happiness for her child.

"Be good to her," she cried, "Oh, you will be good to her!"

And the man promised with down bent head for he knew that for the sin committed against the mother he must atone to the child and in so doing would he win forgiveness.

A RECORD POTATO PRICE.

Twenty-five Hundred Dollars Paid for One Ton of Seed.

The potato when well grown still maintains its importance as a money maker. The latest record price for a new potato has created a sensation in agricultural circles, and no wonder, for one specialist has paid the raiser of it £500 for one ton of seed. It is named the Northern Star, comes from Scotland, and is evidently one of the most prolific potatoes grown. On April 13 last 22 pounds of seed were planted, with the result that they gave a yield of 15 hundredweight of good, salable tubers. From 12 pounds of seed 149 pounds or an average of 12 pounds per root, were obtained. One of these roots actually produced 14½ pounds. From another single plant 65 potatoes were grown, weighing 10 pounds. It is said that the potato is hardy, and that the haulm resists blight better than any other variety. There can be no doubt that potato growers who raise the tuber on skilled or scientific lines can still depend upon making as much money from the potato as from any other crop that can be raised. The new potato will be distributed from Lincolnshire, which county, by the way, has during recent years become famous for seed potato culture. At anything like the present value Northern Star will yield a good income to any man growing it on an acre of land. It seems rather premature to talk of the decay of home rural industries when such a price as £500 can still be secured for one ton of potatoes.—London Globe.

Ethan Allen Park.

Ethan Allen's old home and the park which surrounded it in Vermont, has been presented by its owner, W. J. Patten, a descendant of the general, to Burlington. It lies in the outskirts of the city and comprises several hundred acres of forest and meadow land on the banks of the Winooski river. Here Ethan Allen lived and died. On the meadow by the river his youngest daughter saw the vision that caused her to break her engagement of marriage, accept the Roman Catholic faith and enter a convent in Montreal. She became the mother superior of the convent and was renowned for her loveliness, being known far and wide as "the beautiful American nun."

Ethan Allen's home, long since fallen into decay, stood at the foot of the hill leading down to the intervale, or meadow lands. The four elms he planted in front of his house still stands strong and vigorous.

Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep.

"Babies never get seasick. I have carried thousands of them in my time," said an American Line steward, "and in rough weather I have seen their fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters keel over like soldiers before a cannon ball; but no so with the babies. Whether it be rough or smooth at sea, a baby is always an excellent sailor—rosy, jolly, and with the appetite of a horse. Do you know the explanation of this singular fact? It is as simple as the fact is strange. Babies don't get seasick because they are accustomed to the rocking of the cradle. That movement is much like the rocking of a ship. A baby aboard ship, therefore, is merely a baby in an unusually big cradle, and there is nothing odd to him about the rocking, for it is what he has been accustomed to all his life."

In 1910.

"Did you hear of Mrs. Sisler's unfortunate mishap?"

"No, indeed. What was it?"

"Why, she was having a little house party at her aerial chateau, and sent her aeronaut with the omnibus balloon to the air line station to bring the guests to the house."

"Yes."

"She has always thought the man so trusty. He has been with her two years. But it seems he had mixed himself an oxygenated highball that morning and he wasn't in a responsible condition."

"Mercy, what did he do?"

"Why, he completely lost his head on the up grade and collided with an aeromotor moving van with such violence that the balloon broke lose from the 'bus and the dreadul man dropped his whole load into the lake!"

FARM MISCELLANY

Loss in Unstandardized Cream.

Nearly every cream separator has some contrivance by which the richness of the cream can be regulated, but these regulations are far from accurate. A fairly uniform cream delivered by the separator in daily operation may have a range of variations of 5 per cent above or below the per cent desired. These variations even in a minimum case would result in great profit or loss, as the case may be, too great for a healthy, legitimate business. To illustrate: Take fifty gallons of cream containing 20 per cent of butterfat and as a variation, let there be 5 per cent more butterfat than the standard requires. Assume that the cream is sold at an average price of 80c a gallon. The loss to the party selling the cream would amount to $10 on the fifty gallons, which could have been saved by standardization. Even though each separator has a regulating contrivance there are always some conditions in practical operations which influence separation and cause variation in the richness of the cream. These conditions can be controlled, to a certain extent, but in order to secure as little variation as by standardizing the operation will require such vigilance and close supervision that it would become impracticable for the creamery man as well as for the dairyman.

The first and probably the most important cause of these variations is due to the speed of the bowl in the cream separator, for anything that tend to change the speed must necessarily influence the per cent of fat in the cream. Second, the temperature of the milk has considerable influence on the per cent of fat in the cream. A difference of ten or more degrees in the temperature of the milk will cause a decided variation in the per cent of butterfat in the cream. If milk is warm the cream will be thicker, if cold it will be thinner, other conditions being equal. Third, the per cent of fat changes with the amount separated per hour. If milk is fed into a separator at an uneven rate or if the flow of milk is stopped, the thickness of the cream will be greatly influenced. Although cream separators are nearly all provided with floats to regulate the inflow of the milk into the machine, yet a slight variation of pressure as that due to the difference in the height of milk in the receiving can or tempering vat influences the per cent of fat in the cream. Fourth, the amount of water or skim milk used to flush out the bowl at the end of separation will naturally tend to affect the cream test. Fifth, the condition of the milk changes the per cent by having small clots obstruct the cream or skim milk passage in the bowl of the separator.

How to Get Good Butter.

The all important question of the day with creamery and dairy men is how to obtain a uniform and fine flavored butter. Nearly all investigators agree that the secret lies in the proper ripening of the cream; and when we read of the tons of low grade butter brought into the markets daily, all owing to the fact that the negligence or ignorance as to the proper treatment of the cream lies at the root of this great fault, it appears to be a point worthy of consideration.

To state the subject of starters plainly and intelligently, it is necessary to take the fundamental principles of the ripening of cream into consideration. The ripening of cream includes two features upon which the quality of the butter largely depends. These are flavor and texture. The effects of ripening with starters are far more marked upon the flavor of butter than upon the texture, for it is during this process that the characteristic flavors are developed. Cream ripening is merely a fermentation process caused by bacterial growth. This growth is controlled by temperature, in which a rise (from 60 degrees F., and not to exceed 100 degrees F.) induces growth and develops immense numbers of bacteria; while lowering the temperature retards growth. The action of these germs in cream results in the conversion of a part of the milk sugar into lactic acid, and a slight formation of carbonic acid gas and a few other volatile constituents not definitely known.—Oscar Erf, before Indiana dairymen.

The Herdsman.

In the history of the improvement of live stock, in the evolution of the pure breeds and in show-yard successes, the herdsman has played no unimportant part, for it must be acknowledged that good feeding has been and is the necessary accompaniment of successful breeding and showing, and that unless these go hand in hand, improvement [illegible] —Thomas McFarlane.

AGRICULTURE

Spring Vetch.

We illustrate Spring Vetch, a plant that is being tested on various soils as a renovator and forage plant. At the Kansas station it has been tried and condemned for Kansas. But this does not prove that it has no value for other states. We have yet to learn what possibilities are locked up in it. Cultivation and selection may yet evolve something from it.

SPRING VETCH

Rate of Seeding Wheat.

Unless some unusual condition exists, the Oklahoma Experiment Station seeds wheat at the rate of one and one-half bushels per acre. Covering a period of several years at this station different amounts varying from three to eight pecks per acre were seeded on different plats to furnish data on this question, says a bulletin of the Oklahoma station. The average of these results show a few bushels in favor of the five and six peck rates, but there were cases in which there was practically no difference in yields from the lightest to the heaviest seeding. On the other hand there were times when above the usual rates as three pecks and eight pecks gave much poorer results than a medium amount. Similar experiments have been carried on by many of the stations over the United States and the results agree very closely with those given above and all recommend a good liberal seeding as being the safest rule to follow. Conditions have been found to influence the results very much at times, so that any fixed rule cannot be laid down, and the farmer should give each individual case due consideration as many poor yields have been the result of not using the proper quantity of seed wheat per acre. The following factors are to be considered in deciding the rate of seeding, time of seeding, character and condition of soil, location, character of seed (quality, size of berry, purity, method of seeding and variety) characteristics. Before considering these it is well to recall to mind that wheat, like other small grains, has the characteristic of throwing out from each seed, stalks varying in number from two to [illegible] in extreme cases. The number usually runs as high as [illegible] This is the tillering habit of the plant. Due to this habit of growth the number of seed stalks per foot does not vary much even if different amounts of seed are used per acre, and consequently the yield per acre may not differ materially. But much will depend upon the factors cited above whether we get the proper number of seed stalks per foot or whether they produce the maximum amount of good grain. If any condition exists that stimulates or allows an abnormal amount of tillering, it is usually detrimental to the yield and quality of the grain, but this injury is seldom due to there being too many stalks produced per foot as the tendency is to produce about so many seed stalks per foot and then the tillering ceases.

Saving Seed Corn.

From Farmers' Review: In our issue of the 12th inst. an article on seed corn saving in the cellar by A. T. Evans, leads me to say that seed corn saving can be much simplified by making a flat box large enough to hold the seed required, with doors along one side and covered all over with screen wire similar to that used for window screens. Suspend this from the floor joists. This prevents all loss from mice or rats, which is sometimes considerable, saves much time, labor and string. As to dampness, I have seen corn come out quite mouldy, but still vigorous, safe seed. Surely no cellar too damp for [illegible] —W. L. Frisbie, Winnebago County, Illinois.

From Farmers' Review: In regard to saving seed corn in a cellar I would say: Corn at this time of year should be sound and ripe. Any common cellar on the farm will prove to be all right. A green mould may form over it, but that will not prevent it from growing in the spring. [illegible] —A. T. Evans, Knox County, Illinois.

There are plenty of people who have become depressed and discouraged, because that dry, hacking cough hangs to them continually. They have taken much medicine, mostly of the advertised quack sort, nothing like Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, the discovery of a then noted German physician 60 years ago. We do not say that this will cure a case where the lungs are badly diseased, for it will not; [illegible] but on the other hand, if the lungs are not hard hit, the patient should take Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, a cup full every night on going to bed, have it hot, drink slowly, then every other night rub the throat and top portion of the lungs with St. Jacobs Oil, cover with oil silk, let it remain an hour, then remove. Eat good, plain, nourishing food, live in the open air as much as possible. By all means sleep as near out of doors as possible, that is, windows wide open, except in the very severe weather. Take a cold sponge bath every morning; then immediately rub the body vigorously with a coarse towel. Take Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops every other day according to directions. One can buy the three remedies for $1.25 of any reliable druggist. Begin the treatment at once and see how much better you will be almost within a week's time.

GREAT IS MARCONI

SOLVES THE PROBLEM OF WIRELESS TRANSOCEANIC COMMUNICATION.

SENDS MESSAGES ACROSS OCEAN

TRANSMITTED TO THE KING OF ENGLAND AND KING OF ITALY.

FROM CANADA TO ENGLAND

INVENTOR HIMSELF ANNOUNCES HIS GREAT ACHIEVEMENT.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 23.—After eight experiments conducted with the greatest secrecy, Marconi announces that he has solved the problem of wireless transoceanic communication and has successfully transmitted messages from the shores of Canada to the coast of England. The formal announcement of this achievement was made by the inventor himself yesterday when he stated that wireless messages had been successfully transmitted and forwarded from the governor general of Canada to King Edward VII. of Great Britain and to the king of Italy.

Dr. George R. Parkin, principal of Upper Canada college, trustee of the Rhodes scholarships, was present when one of the successful tests was made. Prior to December, 1901, the greatest distance covered scarcely exceeded 100 miles. Early in that year Marconi visited Newfoundland and from Signal Hill commenced experiments with Cornwall, and on Dec. 12 and 13 of that year, faint signals of the letter "S" repeated several times, were caught by ear only with the aid of telephones. Later on Marconi, on board of the steamship Philadelphia, bound for America, succeeded in establishing communication with Cornwall, a distance of 2,100 miles. Transoceanic messages also were received on board the Italian warship Carlo Alberto while that vessel lay at anchor in Sydney harbor on Oct. 31, and since then Marconi has been perfecting the apparatus at Table Head. He met with innumerable difficulties there, but at last has succeeded in sending a transoceanic wireless message from Canada to Cornwall, a distance of 2,300 miles. The Carlo Alberto some days ago, was ordered to proceed to Venezuela, but as her immediate departure would seriously delay the order was modified and she was held at Sydney until transatlantic communication was successfully accomplished. She has sailed for Venezuela to take part in the blockade operations.

By Wireless Telegraphy

Marconi' operations,

London, Dec. 23—The London Times confirms the receipt of a message by wireless telegraphy from Marconi at Cape Breton.

The text of the wireless message from the Times correspondent, which was transmitted from Glace Bay, N. B., to Poldhu, Cornwall, is as follows:

"Being present at its transmission in Sig. Marconi's Canadian station I have the honor to send through the Times the inventor's first wireless transatlantic message of greeting to England and Italy."

PACT TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

Two Aged Germans Agree to Kill Themselves.

Cincinnati, Dec. 23. — The officers have detected a pact between two aged Germans, Joseph Tabe and Rudolph Schaum, to commit suicide. Both were held awaiting trial on the charge of shooting to kill their wives. They occupied adjoining cells and became very intimate during the time allowed them for freedom, keeping apart from other prisoners. Tabe secured a rope from the dining room and gave half of it to Schaum, but the latter was discovered before he carried out his purpose. Schaum was restrained and Tabe held for lunacy.

EXPLOSION ON DEUTSCHLAND.

Cylinder Bursts and the Vessel Is Filled With Steam.

Plymouth, Eng., Dec. 23.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Deutschland arrived here at 2:15 yesterday afternoon. When she was nearing the Scilly islands a cylinder burst and the starboard engine was badly damaged. It will require four months to effect repairs. One engineer was badly scalded. The steamer left to-day for Cherbourg and Hamburg. The accident happened at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning. For a time the vessel was in complete darkness and filled with escaping steam. The passengers were greatly alarmed. They rushed from their cabins, anxiously making inquiries as to what had occurred. Excellent discipline, however, was maintained. Everybody was assured that there was no danger and the excitement gradually subsided. With the exception of the engineer, who was caught in the escaping steam, the officers say that no member of the engine room staff was seriously injured.

DEATH IN A WRECK

SIXTEEN PERSONS LOSE THEIR LIVES AS A RESULT OF A COLLISION.

SEVERAL MORE LIKELY TO DIE

TWENTY-TWO TERRIBLY INJURED PERSONS NOW IN HOSPITAL.

FAILED TO HEED THE WARNING

ONE TRAIN CRASHES INTO REAR OF ANOTHER WITH AWFUL FORCE.

Martinez, Cal., Dec. 23.—As a result of a rear-end collision between the Stockton flyer and the "owl" train on the Southern Pacific at Byron, twenty deaths have already been recorded and there are indications that the total will soon be raised to twenty. Most of the wounded passengers who were too severely injured to be taken to their homes were taken to the Southern Pacific hospital at San Francisco, and on the way to that place five victims died. Twenty-two of the injured reached the hospital, where it was announced later that two would probably succumb. Of the twenty-two patients only three were permitted to receive visitors, so seriously were they suffering. It was a rear-end collision, the engine of the local into the last coaches of the "owl," which was filled with Fresno people. The passengers who escaped death were hurled to the fore part of the coach and crushed in the mass of debris. Their sufferings and danger were intensified a hundred fold by the clouds of scalding steam that poured out upon them from the shattered boiler of the Stockton engine.

After the "owl" left Molito it was noticed there was a leak in the flue of the boiler. This increased to such an extent that it was decided to stop here and take on a fresh engine for relief. The train known as the Stockton local was following half a mile behind, and a flagman was sent back down the track of the presence of the "owl." It is said that the Stockton train, in charge of Engineer Maguire and Fireman Joyce, got the warning signal in due time and gave the usual responsive whistle blasts. Why the incoming train was not checked, however, has not been thus far explained, the men who could give the facts being numbered with the badly injured. On came the train with apparently scarcely any diminution of speed, and the Fresno coach was completely telescoped. So forcibly did the local meet the rear end of the "owl" that the second car, the dining car, was smashed in and the three cooks were seriously hurt. The penned-up passengers were spared from fire because the oil burners were extinguished when

To Give Warning

The Crash Came.

Relief quickly came to the passengers who were pinned in the wreckage, axes and saws being brought into play and passengers and train crews lending every aid. Messengers were sent to Byron Hot Springs, a short distance away, and Dr. Bird of the Springs, with Dr. J. D. Davidson of Fresno, who was a guest, came quickly to the station. A trained nurse accompanied them and first aid was at once given to the mangled, bruised and crushed sufferers who were lying near the track. Every effort was made to alleviate their sufferings, and those who were unable to proceed on their journey were taken to the Springs hotel or to the church in Byron, which was temporarily transferred into a hospital. None of the passengers of the Stockton train were injured, and all of the crew of the "owl" escaped unhurt.

STUDENTS ON A LARK.

Pretend to Hang a Student Who Was Being Initiated.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 23.—A party of fraternity boys of the university threw the clerks and guests of the Avenue hotel into a panic last night by realistically hanging one of their number in a back room in the basement of the hotel.

The victim was being initiated into a Greek letter society, and the boys had arranged a mock hanging as part of the ceremony. After having imbibed freely of refreshments the party proceeded to hang the man being initiated. They took a strong rope, a little heavier than a clothes line, and suspended him from a hook in the ceiling. At this time the bartender came into the room, and, thinking the novice was really being hanged, secured a butcher knife and cut him down. The boys became boisterous and the proprietor of the buffet induced them to go home. The affair gave rise to the rumor that a student had been accidentally hanged by some of his friends during an initiatory ceremony.

JURY ALMOST EIGHTS.

Three Days of Excited Deliberation Ends in Disagreement.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 23.—After deliberating three days without reaching a verdict the jury in the John N. Watts kidnapping case was discharged yesterday. Eight of the jurors stood for acquittal and four for conviction. Twenty ballots were taken in all. Up to the fourth ballot the vote was seven for acquittal and five for conviction. The jury then reached a point where an agreement was absolutely out of the question. It developed after the jury was discharged that two of the men were on the verge of exchanging blows when others interfered. The case was on trial eight days before it went to the jury.

ROOSEVELT AS ARBITER

ENGLAND AND GERMANY WILLING TO SUBMIT CLAIMS TO HIM.

VENEZUELA IS ALSO WILLING

PRESIDENT WANTED QUESTION SUBMITTED TO THE HAGUE TRIBUNAL.

BUT WILL NOT REFUSE TO ACT

NEGOTIATIONS WILL SOON BE UNDER WAY TO STOP HOSTILITIES.

Caracas, Dec. 23. — In the name of Venezuela President Castro has signified the acceptance of the appointment of President Roosevelt to arbitrate the Venezuelan difficulty.

Would Leave It to Roosevelt.

Washington, Dec. 23.—England and Germany have indicated that they will submit their claims against Venezuela to arbitration if President Roosevelt will act as the arbiter.

This is not what the president desired when he requested that the question be submitted to The Hague tribunal for arbitration, and, while he will continue to urge that there is at The Hague all the machinery for arbitration, created by a court of nations, he will not refuse to act as arbiter. He will throw the whole question down as a gauge of battle, with the Monroe doctrine as the barrier holding two great powers from compelling Venezuela to pay her debts.

No New Developments.

Officials of the state department announced to the newspaper reporters last night that there was nothing to make public regarding the latest phases of the Venezuelan embroglio. Such dispatches from the American embassies in Europe and from Minister Bowen at Caracas, regarding Venezuelan matters as came to Washington were of a confidential character, concerning the nature of which it was impossible to ascertain anything. It is believed there has been no change of importance since Saturday, when the state department announced that in response to President Roosevelt's suggestion to the allies that The Hague tribunal arbitrate the issues the European governments suggested that the president himself act in the capacity of arbitrator.

Adopt Detailed Answers.

Berlin, Dec. 23.—It has been learned here that the governments of Germany and Great Britain have adopted detailed answers to the proposal to arbitrate the Venezuelan issues. These communications will be handed to Ambassador Tower here and Charge d'Affaires White in London to-day. The correspondent of the Associated Press has learned further that the German answer agrees in all substantial effects with the British answer, and makes no separate reservations in behalf of the German case.

Observe Strict Secrecy.

London, Dec. 23.—It is believed that President Roosevelt's answer to the proposal made by the allied powers that he arbitrate the Venezuelan issues has been received in London. The strictest secrecy with regard to every phase of the negotiations is preserved, however, and it is impossible to make a definite statement, but such indications as are obtainable point to President Roosevelt's acceptance of the office of arbitrator.

A constant interchange of cablegrams is proceeding night and day between the United States embassy and the state department at Washington. It is believed that the president's answer will be submitted formally to the foreign office to-day. By day after tomorrow, unless some unexpected complications arise, it is believed, it is believed the negotiations will reach a stage assuring a definite arrangement and obviating hostilities.

Blockade Is Now On.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 23. — The blockade of Venezuelan ports was begun with an effective force at midnight last night. The British have the cruisers Indefatigable, Alert and Tribune, the special service steamer Columbine and the torpedo boat destroyer Rocket along the coast. The cruiser Aridane, the flagship Vice Admiral Douglas, is here and will remain here. All the British operations will be directed from Trinidad.

The United States battleships Kearsarge and Alabama arrived here yesterday afternoon. Their appearance provoked considerable comment on shore, but when Admiral Higginson called upon the acting governor of Trinidad and the commander of the Britishships he took occasion to explain that the visit to this port of the American men-of-war was part of the usual winter trip of the squadron.

La Guayra, Dec. 22. — The Italian cruiser Giovanni Bausan has captured a sloop which was coming from the east. The British cruiser Tribune left here at noon yesterday for Port of Spain, Trinidad, with the schooner Mercedes in tow.

One of the results of the blockade is that the harbor corporation and shipping firms here have dismissed their laborers. Over 500 men are, therefor out of work.

IN DREAD OF PLAGUE.

Mexicans Fear It Is the Bubonic Disease.

Mexico City, Dec. 23. — There is much alarm on the west coast over the reported appearance of bubonic plague at Maatlan. The local doctors assert that it is the true form of the Asiatic plague, but the doctors of the British warship Grafton decided that it is something else. However, the Grafton has left the port. The governor of the State of Sinola is investigating.

WANTS ROOSEVELT ARRESTED.

Man With Wheels Says President Hired Men to Kill Him.

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 22.—"I want a warrant for President Roosevelt," said Charles C. White yesterday at the Central police station. Addressing Police Captain Grover, White continued:

"He hired Tim McCarthy and John Farley to assault me the other day and I was assaulted by them in Eastern avenue. Roosevelt was there in his carriage and encouraged the men while they were striking me."

Then the speaker rambled into a long string of complaints against President Roosevelt and the coal question. The man was excited and resisted arrest. He was overpowered and a loaded revolver and a razor were found on him. He will be examined by physicians.

TOWER MEETS THE EMPEROR.

American Ambassador to Germany Presents Credentials.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—Ambassador Tower yesterday presented his credentials to Emperor William at the palace. All the members of the staff of the embassy were present. The emperor received the ambassador in the presence of Foreign Secretary von Richthofen and Gen. von Knesebeck and talked animatedly with him for from fifteen to twenty minutes. His majesty said he was convinced that the cordial relations between Germany and the United States which had always existed would continue. The emperor also remarked that he felt specially interested in the St. Louis exposition. Although Germany's exhibit would not be large, it would be very good in quality; for instance in goldsmithing and in art.

SHE SAW IT IN A DREAM.

Mrs. Mary Johnson Warns Her Husband, but It Was in Vain.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 22. — "John, don't go to work. I feel sure that something is going to happen to you." Mrs. Mary Johnson gave that warning to her husband as he started to work in the terminal yards.

"O, bother," he replied. "Nothing is going to happen to me. I'm all right, and in no danger."

Three hours later Johnson was picked up from the Santa Fe track terminal yards at Hickory street, after the in-bound Santa Fe train had cut off both legs, crushed his hand, mangled his body and cut a gash in his head. He died later. His wife dreamed that he would be killed.

WILLING TO ARBITRATE

BUT THERE ARE MANY PRELIMINARY MATTERS TO BE ADJUSTED.

RESPONSE GIVEN BY THE POWERS

SERIOUS DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF ABSOLUTE ACCEPTANCE.

GERMANY WANTS AN APOLOGY

KAISER'S GOVERNMENT PRESENTS THE WORST STUMBLING BLOCK.

London, Dec. 22.—The basis for arbitration with Venezuela and a settlement of the present dispute will be a guarantee by J. & W. Seligman of the English and German claims to the extent of £5,400,000. It is expected that the matter will be arranged within a few days. The Washington government, which has declined to be in any respect a party to the financial transactions, has agreed to use its good offices in support of Mr. Seligman in the execution of the terms of his agreement with Venezuela.

Washington, Dec. 23. — Secretary Hay has received partial responses from the governments of Great Britain, Germany and Italy respecting the proposal to arbitrate the Venezuelan difficulties.

Great Britain is favorable to arbitration with proper safeguards; Germany accepts arbitration in principle, but finds a multitude of small adjustments to be made before entering into the agreement; Italy, as the junior partner of the allies, declares that she is favorable to arbitration, but will be bound probably by the action of the senior partners.

To secure these results the American embassies at London, Berlin and Rome have been working energetically to carry out the instructions of Secretary Hay to ascertain how the proposal would be received. As far as England is concerned, the are believed to relate to the question of guarantee, which is full of difficulties. In this connection some consideration is again being given to the feasibility of the assumption of responsibility for any award assessed against Venezuela by responsible private agencies, but the United States government is determined not to allow itself to be drawn into the position of a guarantor in this case, for the precedent once established, might require the united states to become the financial backer of all South and Central America. However, if private concern can be induced to enter the field, the United States government will do what it can to reduce their risks.

Secretary Hay, Sir Michael Herbert, the British ambassador, and Senator Depew were in conference yesterday and it is suspected that this was touched upon, although no confirmation can be had at this time.

The German position presents the great difficulties, for not only does it involve a demand for apologies, which are extremely repugnant to Venezuela, but also presents so many points requiring adjustment that it is evident that many days or, perhaps, weeks, must elapse before the adjustment can be effected and the case prepared for arbitration. And the danger of delay in the fact of a blockade which seriously cripples neutral commerce and invites hostile collisions with the Venezuelans cannot be over-estimated.

The efforts of the United States, therefore, must be directed toward hastening Germany's action on the arbitration proposal.

Germany Is Willing.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—The answer of Germany to the arbitration in behalf of Venezuela, received through the United States government, is its acceptance.

The delivery of this reply to the United States for transmission to Minister Bowen is delayed for a day or two for tactical reasons, probably through the expectation that another solution may be found, possibly by President Castro yielding. Four days ago the idea of the German government was in favor of rejecting arbitration, and that is understood here to have been the temper of the British foreign office. While it is impossible to trace the steps that led to a reversal of this view, it appears that the state of public opinion in the United States, so far as Germany is concerned, produced a revision of the first idea. The officials here maintain absolute silence regarding the character of the answer. The foreign office has no information to the effect that President Castro has bestowed on Minister Bowen full power to represent Venezuela in the settlement of the existing difficulties, but such a step toward a solution would be received with pleasure.

Safeguards Desired.

London, Dec. 22.—Great Britain has sent a reply to the United States in regard to the suggestion that the Venezuelan question should be submitted to arbitration.

The tenor of the reply, it is expected here, will tend to bring about some arrangement for a satisfactory solution, while thoroughly safeguarding the interests of the powers concerned.

The note to Reuter's Telegram company announcing that Great Britain had sent a reply to the United States, says:

"The statements issuing from Caracas to the effect that President Castro has empowered Minister Bowen to act as the representative of Venezuela are regarded in London as open to question. Any such action on the part of President Castro would be considered wholly beside the mark. The powers concerned will deal solely with the United States in the matter of arbitration. The government of Venezuela will not be consulted in any form, nor even as to the terms on which arbitration might be acceptable to the powers. The forms and conditions to be observed in any settlement by arbitration are still the subject of the extensive exchange of views between the powers and the United States prior to the embodiment of the several replies in one definite arrangement is possible."

Rebels March on Caracas.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 22.—It is reported here that the Venezuelan revolutionary generals, Penalcza, Rolando, Riera and Solague, with a force said to number 10,000 men, are marching on Caracas and are believed now to be near that city. Cable messages coming from Venezuela to this port are subjected to Venezuelan censorship.

Admiral Douglas of the British fleet has ordered the blockade of LaGuayra, Carenero, Guanta, Cumana, Carupano and the mouth of the Orinoco river. This blockade is to go into effect at midnight to-night. Days of grace are allowed as follows:

To vessels sailing prior to the date of the decree of blockade from West Indian ports and from the east coast of the continent of America: Steamers, 10 days; sailing vessels, 20 days. From other ports: Steamers, 20 days; sailing vessels, 40 days. Vessels in the blockaded ports will be allowed fifteen days to obtain clearances. Violators of the blockade will be liable under the law. It is intimated here that the blockade probably will not last longer than thirty days.

Albany Goes to La Guayra.

San Juan, P. R., Dec. 22. — The United States cruiser Albany has been ordered to La Guayra. She will return here immediately from that port. This step is taken in accordance with instructions from Secretary Moody, transmitted through Admiral Dewey.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The explanation of the visit of the Albany to La Guayra, from which place she is to return immediately to her position with Dewey's command, is made that she is to transport a naval officer to assist Minister Bowen in the discharge of the numerous duties that suddenly have devolved on the minister.

Grace to the Rescue.

New York, Dec. 22.—It develops that one of the principal financial institutions in New York is engaged in an attempt to solve the Venezuelan difficulty by advancing to Venezuela a sufficient amount of money to pay its foreign obligations.

A definite offer has been made, it is said, with the approval of the state department at Washington, to advance all the money necessary to meet these obligations. The name of the financial institution has not been given out, but it is understood that W. R. Grace & Co. are interested in the move. Mr. Grace is a former mayor of New York and has extensive property interests in South and Central America.

The plan is said to be for Venezuela to pledge its customs receipts for the repayment of the loan and to put the administration of its customs affairs in the hands of an agent to be designated by the New York people.

Not an Ultimatum.

Caracas, Dec. 22.—The French note to Venezuela has absolutely nothing of the character of an ultimatum, although its text is still unknown here in consequence of delay in its transmission by cable. Therefore, Charge d'Affaires Quievreux has not been able to present it. Its terms are similar to those of Belgium and Spain, asking for the most favorable nation treatment in the payment of claims.

Dutch Minister Recalled.

London, Dec. 22.—A special dispatch received here from Brussels says the Dutch minister to Venezuela, Dr. Van Leyden, has been recalled, and that Dutch interests in Venezuela have been committed to United States Minister Bowen.

It has inspired confidence. Certain misgivings as to the final selection of the Panama route had previously existed.

DISPOSES OF BAD PAPER FOR AN ALLEGED CRIMINAL OF PHILADELPHIA.

REACH THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS

POLICE HUNTING FOR ANOTHER MAN SAID TO BE IMPLICATED.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Forgery of notes aggregating almost $30,000 was revealed yesterday, according to the police, through the arrest of Louis Stern, a note broker. He is now locked up at the central station, while the police are searching the city for William S. Brown, a former dealer in jewelry, with a place of business in Philadelphia.

The arrest of Stern was made upon warrants procured by attorneys representing Walter E. Lindsay, Jr., son of W. A. Lindsay, said to be a millionaire jewelry dealer in Milwaukee. Mr. Lindsay, Jr., alleges that Brown has forged and obtained money on commercial paper reaching into the thousands of dollars by forging his name. A year ago, according to the story told by Lindsay's attorneys, Lindsay, Jr., and Brown formed a copartnership in the jewelry business in Philadelphia, to be known as the Walter A. Lindsay company.

Last November the partnership was dissolved, Lindsay surrendering his interests in the concern to Brown, with the understanding that the firm name be changed and his name excluded. Since that time he has learned that commercial paper to which the firm name had been signed had been circulated throughout this and other cities.

Investigation proved, it is alleged, that money was being realized upon them by forgery. After an investigation it was learned, it is said, that the paper was being circulated by Brown through Stern.

FIRE AT FARIBAULT.

Main Building of the Institution for the Feeble Minded Caught Fire This Morning at an Early Hour.

Faribault, Minn., Dec. 22. — Fire started at 2 o'clock this morning in the main building of the state institute for the feeble minded and threatens to destroy the entire building. The blaze was discovered in the attic near the tower, and the 300 inmates of the school were removed before the fire had spread to the floors below the garret and no one was hurt. The loss, provided the firemen are able to confine it to the portion of the building in which it started, will be about $50,000.

The building is a four-story stone structure and was erected twelve years ago at a cost of $200,000. The central portion, where the fire started, is used as the offices and for dormitories for the inmates, and is flanked by a tower. Other wings have been added until the whole building is now 350 feet long.

The fire was not under control at 3:30 this morning and it was feared the entire structure will be destroyed.

The building was covered by a blanket insurance policy along with the other buildings belonging to the state.

NEW TRIAL IN BRIBERY CASE.

Gardner and "Coffee John" Decisions Reversed.

St. Paul, Dec. 22.—Irwin A. Gardner, special officer under Mayor Ames, who was convicted in the Hennepin county district court on a charge of accepting a bribe from confidence men, and sentenced to six years in the state penitentiary, will have a new trial. The supreme court yesterday reversed the decision of the lower court denying Gardner a new trial.

"Coffee John" Fitchette, too, would have had a new trial. He was sentenced to ninety days in the workhouse on the charge of accepting $200 for securing Long a place on the police force. The order of the district court denying him a new trial is reversed, but the words "a new trial granted," are crossed out, for "Coffee John" is dead.

The decisions are important contributions to the criminal law of Minnesota. The Gardner case is reversed because he had given testimony before the grand jury which indicted him. The supreme court holds that the lower court should have quashed the indictment on this ground.

The last section of the bill provides that any article of food or drug that is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this bill and is transported, or being transported from one state to another state, or if it be sold in the District of Colombia or the territories, or if it be imported from a foreign country, shall be liable to confiscation by a process of libel for condemnation in the United States courts. Such goods, it is also provided, shall not be sold in any state contrary to the laws thereof.

KILLED BY A POSSE.

Dead Man First Fatally Wounds Two Men.

Keokuk, Iowa, Dec. 22.—Clay Marshal R. W. Coulter and Justice A. M. Musgrave were fatally wounded at Farmington, Iowa, by George Stillwell, a deputy fish commissioner, who was afterward shot to death by a posse. Coulter attempted to arrest Stillwell on a warrant charging him with disturbing the peace. Stillwell shot Coulter in the stomach and in the shoulder. Stillwell then ran up the street and shot Musgrave in the head, because, it is said, the justice had recently sent him to jail for fifteen days on a charge of disorderly conduct. Stillwell then went home, reloaded his revolver, took a rifle and started across the country with a posse of armed citizens in pursuit. When the posse overtook the fugitive he took a position behind a tree and held the citizens at bay for nearly an hour. Stillwell was wounded several times and dropped to his knee, but continued to shoot until a bullet stuck in the barrel of his gun. The posse closed in on Stillwell, riddling him with bullets. none of the posse was hit.

GOMPERS CREATES A STIR.

Testifies That Coal Companies Bring Immigrants to Mine Regions.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 18. — Notwithstanding the fact that the mineworkers announced Monday that they had closed their case with the exception of calling one more witness, the entire two sessions of the strike commission yesterday were consumed in hearing three witnesses for the men. They were John C. Haddock, an individual operator; Rev. Dr. Peter Roberts, who is assisting the miners, and President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The principal point in Mr. Haddock's testimony was that he favored giving the mineworkers concessions under certain conditions. President Gompers testified as an expert on the trade union movement. He created a stir when he strongly implied during his examination that the coal companies are responsible for bringing immigrants to the coal regions. When one of the lawyers for the coal companies asked him if he knew it from personal knowledge, he said he could prove it if necessary.

The miners made another attempt yesterday to have the commission admit as evidence a large mass of testimony tending to show that the anthracite coal carrying roads charged extortionate and discriminating freight rates and that a monopoly exists in the anthracite mining industry which keeps the wages of men at an unnaturally low level. The commission again decided that the evidence must be limited to the scope of the commission and that if it did take up the claims made in evidence proposed to be submitted, the justice of the mineworkers' demands would still remain.

WOULD LET COAL SOAR.

Rumored That Reading Will Abandon Selling Price Agreement.

Washington, Dec. 18. — A well defined rumor is circulating among the local dealers that the Reading company will soon abandon its efforts to keep down the price of coal in selling only to those who will sign an agreement to charge a maximum of $7.25 a ton for anthracite, and will place its coal on the market to be sold to the highest bidders. The Reading authorities are said to be much discouraged over the manner in which their effort to protect the consumer has been received, particularly in Washington, where the famine is said to be not entirely due to the refusal of coal dealers to sign the selling price agreement. Should the Reading take the anticipated step it is probable that coal will go to $15 a ton here.

REVIEW OF THE PAST AND FORECAST OF THE COMING YEAR

The coming year promises to see in the United States a more marvelous period of commercial and industrial development than even that of the year 1902. The prediction may be safely made that American trade with the East will be doubled during the next twelve months and the United States will become the dominant power of the Pacific ocean. It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that within the next decade the empire of trade and commerce will pass from the Atlantic to the Pacific shores.

Having in mind the vast strides taken by our country in comparatively a few recent years what the volume of our commerce will be in another quarter of a century it would be foolish to predict, but it will be enormous. That the influence of America and the American people througnout the world will have increased, so that they will have become not only the great commercial nation of the world, but the greatest in political rank and power and influence and responsibility can scarcely be doubted by those who have an abiding faith in the energy and wisdom and integrity of the American citizen.

The producing powers of the United States are still in their infancy. Compare our producing area with that of the well-developed and well-tilled countries of Europe, and it will be apparent at a glance that in the matter of agriculture we may and shall increase enormously the products of the soil, not only in increasing the actual product per acre, but by bringing under cultivation many millions of acres which are now non-productive.

In the matter of mines and minerals our production and productive powers have scarcely begun to show their possibilities. In all the great articles which enter into manufacture—the products of the mine, the forest and the field—we are the world's greatest producer and likely to continue so indefinitely. We have more of coal, more of iron, more of copper, more of timber, more of cotton, more of all the requirements which enter into the processes of the manufacture of articles required by the world at large, civilized or uncivilized, than any other nation. We have the skill and energy with which to turn these into manufactures, by far the greatest railway system of the world to carry them to the water's edge, and a great ocean on either side to float them to the waiting millions of the world.

This is a review of what we have done in the past, and only by it can we measure or attempt to measure what we shall do in the future. What wonders in the way of inventions and discoveries the next few years may have in store can only dimly be guessed at. A great thinker and inventor has said of the future newspaper: "We may, and I believe shall, have news transmission by air waves into phonographic instruments which will repeat the news of the day and record it at the same time, so that people may listen or may read as they prefer. The great force of the future is electricity, and it is in its infancy as yet. It will be used to obviate all unnecessary waste of nervous tissue, and the phono-air-wave newspapers of which I speak will certainly be transmitted some day direct from the brains of their producers without any such manual labor as writing and without even the need for speaking them aloud."

In reviewing the record made during the past year by United States soldiers it must be remembered that while the implements of war have been vastly changed by modern inventions, and modern weapons can be used at much greater distances and with more destructive effect, yet the principles of war have not changed, although skill, science and strategy to some extent take the place of valiant leadership and physical strength and courage in successfully using the destructive weapons of war of the present day.

During its varied experience of the last few years on most extended fields of operation the United States army has maintained its reputation for loyalty, intelligence and valor. There have been a few instances of surprise and ambuscade of small detachments, but whenever it has met the enemy under ordinary circumstances it has achieved an unbroken record of success. What its future may be it is impossible to prophesy, but it is fair to predict that it will be as commendable as its past has been glorious.

So far as money is concerned, it is reasonable to suppose that the rates of interest will vary but little in the absence of unforseen circumstances, such as war, etc. While we continue to sell our products to Europe and get large returns, we will be compelled to seek a market for our money. The result will be the enormous development of our own resources, mineral, agricultural, including wool, cattle and cotton, and the reaching out for markets in Japan and China, South America, and in fact all of the markets that have been monopolized by England, Germany and France. Having great natural advantages over our European competitors, we will eventually rout them from these fields of trade.

The rapid growth of the great schools of applied science in the universities of America has been one of the most notable features in the educational history of the past thirty years. To this more than to any other cause is due the overshadowing success of American manufacturers and commerce. Higher education is coming more and more to mean development of the highest practical effectiveness. Without abundant and thorough technical training good articles cannot be produced in competition with the world. Navies, tariffs, trusts and other devices cannot take the place of expert knowledge.

The past year has been remarkable for a sudden and a practical advance in the mrvelous history of the wireless telegraph. The scientific achievement which had been dreamed of for nearly half a century, and only within late years had shown itself something better than a dream, has given the most definite and the most encouraging evidences of its claim to be regarded as one of the world's greatest accomplishments in the domain of practical science. Something of the same kind, although in a lesser degree, may be said of the attempt to construct a flying machine, that project which had its beginning, so far as we know, in the realms of classic fable, and may have had its beginning for aught we know in days long before the gods of Greece had ever come to be classified and worshipped.

It is not too much to say that whatever may come of this ever-renewing enterprise, the year saw the most practical evidence of its possibility yet given to the world. The year cannot boast of any great triumphs entirely its own in the realms of literature and art. Its literary and artistic firmament has not indeed been clouded, but no new star of the first magnitude, no blazing comet even, has arisen on the field of mortal vision.

A NEW YEAR

It was New Year's Eve; a mild, breezeless night swathed and muffled in a mantle of salt fog which dimmed the glare of the electric lights on either shore, changing them for the time into nebulous globes of luminous beauty, and hung like a soft gray curtain around the big ferry boat that, shrieking hoarse warnings of its menacing presence, was plowing its way heavily through the black water of San Francisco Bay.

Only one passenger was braving the dampness of the open forward deck, and he sat on the side next Goat Island, just in front of the churning wheel, with his coat collar turned up and his hat pulled down over his eyes, and murder—self-murder—in his heart.

The world had gone wrong with him in every way. He had wasted his small patrimony in dissipation, and when it was gone the woman who had helped him scatter it had thrown him over for another victim. For the last week he had been drinking heavily to "drown his sorrow," but not succeeding he had come to the bemuddled conclusion that the next best thing was to drown himself. For this reason he was sitting on the Goat Island side of the ferry-boat and waiting—dominated by the ghastly whim which has sent so many others overboard at that same spot—until the wheel paddles should beat along the border of the well known "graveyard" of the bay.

The saloon door opened and a girl and an old man, both laden with bundles, came out—the man with a rancher's sun-brown face, stooping shoulders and toil-hardened hands, the girl, plainly his daughter, tall, straight and comely after the wholesome, honest country fashion. The close warmth of the brilliantly lighted interior had driven these two out into the damp coolness of the enveloping fog, and the man sitting just before the wheel emerged from the gloomy calm of his dying meditations to swear roundly, under his breath, as they sat down near him.

Then he raised his head and looked at them surlily, mentally cursing the relentless fate which even at this last minute interfered between him and his nearly accomplished plan. He must go to the other side of the boat now; but as he rose and the light of the saloon windows fell on his face the girl put out her hand suddenly and cordially.

"Why, Jim!" she exclaimed with frank friendliness; and then: "How oddly things hapen! This is the first time I've come down to the bay since I came back from Nevada, and here you are, that none of us have seen nor heard of for over three years!"

And then "father" greeted the old-time 'neighbor's boy" in friendly fashion also and made room for him to sit between them that they might share his welcome presence equally.

It was impossible to get away from them at once without absolute rudeness; and after the first the man who had cherished the thought of death in his heart all that long wretched day did not feel that he wished to. He could attend to that matter just as well on the return trip, and meanwhile it was pleasant, during these fast-ebbing minutes of his doomed life, to talk of old times and old friends, and this breath from his old country home seemed to blow the cobwebs from his drink-drugged brain and give him fleeting glimpses of possibilities that might have been his were it not now irrevocably too late.

He went with them to their train, helping to carry their bundles and piloting them safely through the bewildering eddies of the pushing, elbowing, excitedly hurrying crowd that the boat disgorged upon the Oakland dock. Then, as in the car he busied himself for a last minute in arranging for their comfort, some vague heavenly hint of his dire need of instant unquestioning human help came out of the invisible and touched the girl's white soul.

She looked with sudden comprehension at his worn face, his somber eyes and his tremulous hands, and then as he raised his hat and turned to leave them she caught his sleeve with timid, entreating fingers.

"Come and begin the New Year with us," she said. "The city has not been kind to you, but the country always was. You will grow back to your old self up in the foothills, and afterward—if you care to stay—there is work in plenty."

He looked down at her upturned face and the insistent voices that had all day been calling him from the bay's always yearning "graveyard" grew fainter and died into silence.

"Come with us," echoed the father, and the light pressure of the girl's fingers on his arm held him captive.

The train shuddered into motion, and then, moving faster and faster torough the crosslights of the deserted pier, bore the three away toward the beckoning promise of the New Year.—Florence Matheson.

Boy's Frankness Spoiled the Christmas Giving

It happened over in a city mission last year, and it made such a sensation in its own way that it bids fair to become one of the Christmas classics of the neighborhood in which it occurred.

They were having the Christmas tree in the Sunday school room, and the beautiful green cone-shaped fir was ablaze with lights, glittering with gay decorations and loaded down with the tokens of affection and good will which the parishioners were exchanging among themselves and their children.

Jimmie Smith, a freckled-faced youth of some eleven winters, sat with some of his chosen companions on a bench just in front of his parents, nearly in the center of the hall. The Smiths—these particular Smiths, at least—were comparatively recent additions to the church family, but they had already achieved a mild sort of popularity among their new acquaintances, for they dressed well, apparently lived well and were, seemingly, in every way "nice people to know."

Their gifts to each other on this public occasion had been expensive and elegant enough to fill the minds of all present with respectful admiration, in some cases shadowed by a faint cloud of envy. Mrs. Smith had received a flashing solitaire diamond ring from her loving lord, and had presented him with a gold match safe and a silver paper cutter; and soon after the name of their only son and heir was loudly proclaimed by the stentorian-voiced young man who played the part of an Aaron for the rubicund and smiling dispenser of presents.

A good-sized morocco case was young Smith's reward for plowing his way to the tree. "Jimmie Smith, from his father and mother," the young man read from the card attached as he handed the gift to the boy, who, grinning widely, hurried back to his seat.

"Hully gee! Mebbe it's a baseball!" suggested one of the Dauntless nine, as a crowd of small boys closed in around their extremely interesting looking covering. But it wasn't. It was a large solid silver, gold-lined mug, with Jimmie's name ornately engraved on its glistening front. Truly a fine present for any boy, but Jimmie some way didn't seem to appreciate it.

First he looked at the rich and beautiful specimen of the goldsmith's art with scorn and disappointment, and then he turned upon his smiling mamma and papa with hot resentment.

Quoth he loudly and clearly: "It's the same darned old mug that Uncle Frank gave me when I was a baby! I don't see what in time you two old folks wanted to fool me this way for!"

And some way the glories of the diamond ring and the gold match safe and the silver paper cutter seemed far less dazzling after that innocently indignant little speech.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

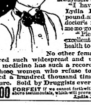
I Did Not Feel That I Could Walk

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It is with thankfulness I write that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been of the greatest help to me. My work keeps me standing on my feet all day and the hours are long. Some months ago it didn't seem as though I could stand it. I would get so dreadfully tired and my back ached so I wanted to scream with the pain. When I got home at night I was so worn out I had to go right to bed, and I was terribly blue and downhearted. I was irregular and the flow was scanty, and I was pale and had no appetite. I told a girl friend who was taking your medicine how I felt, and she said I ought to take it too. So I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and commenced to take it. It helped me right off. After the first few doses menstruation started and was fuller than for some time. It seemed to lift a load off me. My back stopped aching and I felt brighter than I had for months. I took three bottles in all. Now I never have an ache or pain, and I go out after work and have a good time. I am regular and strong and am thankful to you for the change.

"I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I hear of a girl suffering, for I know how hard it is to work when you feel so sick."—MISS MAMIE KEIRNS, 553 9th Ave., New York City.

Women should not fail to profit by the experiences of these women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, irregular and painful menstruation, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

Miss Amanda T. Petterson, Box 131, Atwater, Minn., says:



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM.—I hope that you will publish this testimonial so that it may reach others and let them know about your wonderful medicine.

"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with the worst kind of fainting spells. The blood would rush to my head, was very nervous and always felt tired, had dark circles around eyes.

"I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am entirely cured. I had taken doctor's medicine for many years but it did me no good.

"Please accept my thanks for this most excellent medicine which is able to restore health to suffering women."

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want —a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

Modern Mother Proud of Her Athletic Son

She sat in the grandstand, waiting for her first football game to begin. Her boy had played it ever since she could remember, and now he had made his 'varsity team, which was her 'varsity, too—her Cornell.

Two of his fraternity "brothers" sat on either side as a bodyguard to her gray hairs and as a bureau of information. They were happier than they would have been with the prettiest girl they know.

She smiled with motherly pride when she picked him out of the squad of red sweatered "huskies" which at length trotted out on the field. She wiped away a tear when a Columbia man fell across the line for a touchdown.

Then she surprised her bodyguard by muttering under her breath: "Hold 'em hard, fellows!" "Twist their necks!" "Push! Push!"

She explained her knowledge of these strenuous technical details by saying that her boy cried out like that when playing dream games in his sleep.

She did not faint when he tackled too hard and failed to rise, although his white face, with a streak of red blood across the forehead, was staring up at her.

"You can't hurt my boy," she said with confidence. "He's just doing that to get wind." So it proved.

He was up and at it harder than ever within the time limit. The Ithacans gained five through tackle, and lost as many more yards trying to round the end. Then something happened.

A sturdy youngster shot out of the tangled elevens and dashed down the field toward the goal of the blue and white. He crossed line after line of white-wash, and finally was over the last one, the whole pack at his heels.

"Touchdown! Touchdown!" cried the crowd.

"My boy did it," said the mother, and then she cried.—New York Tribune.

Design That Transforms Bedroom Into Garden

Now that we have seen realistic little cloudlets flecking the ceiling part of the newest wall paper we can but wonder nobody thought of it before. Stars, indeed, whole solar systems, have been our lot for years, but cloudlets are much more to the point, since they show in the daytime. And, practically, it's always daytime in a room whether it is lit by sunshine or some artificial substitute.

This particular paper which has just been opened by a Chestnut street firm, is the height of a realism. Not only will it transform a room into a rose bower, but it will give one "all outdoors" for an environment. Could anything be lovelier for a dressing room or for a bedroom?

The designer has gotten at it in this way. The paper itself shows strong iron supports in groups of fours. These are painted deep green and are fairly lost to sight under clambering red roses and their foliage. The novel part of the frieze is that it comes the wrong way of the paper. Instead of running it around the upper part of the wall a separate section comes to top (or rather to cap) every length of the paper on the side wall. In these caps the iron work terminates in graceful pointed arches, the roses giving a final spurt of prolific luxuriance, a veritable riot of fragrant beauty. For the three or four inches above this frieze is flecked with the exquisite cloudlets. These fascinating little collections of vapor figure exactly in this fashion all over the ceiling paper, the ground in all three instances being the same softly unobtrusive white. This striking red and green scheme would tone in finely, with Georgian furnishings.

Exactly the same design is to be had in beautiful yellow roses. In this case the color of the foliage is not quite as strong, and the iron work seems to have been painted in a shadowy silver tone. The effect is very different. It is not as strong and better for many rooms.—Philadelphia Record.

Secret of Fisherman's Luck Is Made Public

An enterprising man in New Jersey has invented a new device for catching tomcods and according to all who have seen it in operation it is a wonder.

Every one who has angled for this particular fish knows that it will bite anything but a bare hook. It is a matter of record that one fisherman that when his bait gave out put the white of a hard-boiled egg taken from his lunch basket on the hook and caught little tomcods as fast as the line went overboard.

Any one can catch a lot of the fish. Skill is shown not so much in bringing home a basketful as in catching some a boat load.

C. H. Chavant, treasurer of the Greenville Camera Club, astonished his friends by the immensity of his catches. He has been bringing home more fish in a day than any other three anglers could capture and for a time he was the wonder and envy of the fishing fraternity. But the secret is out now.

A rival threw his line in Newark Bay not far from where Mr. Chavant was fishing recently and noticed that the camera man was working with the queerest looking arrangement he had ever seen. Investigation showed that Chavant had stripped the covering from an umbrella and attached a short line with three hooks to the end of each rib. The apparatus was attached to the main fish line and thrown overboard.

When he felt a nibble Mr. Chavant gave a twitch with his rod and waited for another. He didn't have long to wait as the tomcods were biting furiously, and after a few moments of twitching he pulled up his machine and unhooked fourteen fish.

Now that the secret is out nearly every one in the neighborhood is using the new spreader and Mr. Chavant has lost a little of his prestige.

NEW CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

Will Disappear if You Puff on an Empty Pipe Before Retiring.

Among the recent discoveries accidentally made is the fact that insomnia may be cured if the person afflicted will but spend a few minutes before retiring each night puffing an empty tobacco pipe. The remedy is therefore available to those who do not smoke as well as to the devotees of the habit, for it is not necessary that the pipe shall have been used by a tobacco smoker. To smokers the remedy involves no cost whatever, but of nonsmokers the capital outlay of the price of a pipe is required. It must be a wooden pipe, and curved, not straight.

Having retired for the night, the sufferer should lie perfectly flat on his back, discarding pillow rests, and puff steadily at an empty pipe until he feels thoroughly drowsy. The desired result usually is achieved after about sixty to 100 puffs have been made. The puffing should be done slowly, with a deep inhaling movement. The expelling motions must be made deliberately with narrowed mouth. During the entire operation the pipe should not be removed, as each displacing and replacing movement tends to wakefulness.

Those capable of great concentration of thought should, if smokers, imagine they see volumes of smoke and those who eschew the burning weed will be helped by counting the puffs.

As sleep is often successfully wooed while yet the pipe is in the mouth, bowls of meerschaum or clay are not recommended, since these are liable to be broken when the coming of slumber allows the pipe to slide from the mouth. Nervous people may be reassured that there is no danger in falling asleep with the curved pipe caught between one's teeth. Sleep always occasions the grip to be removed. That may hold also of straight pipes, but for other and obvious reasons these are less suitable than those with curved stems.

How Grant Became a Smoker.

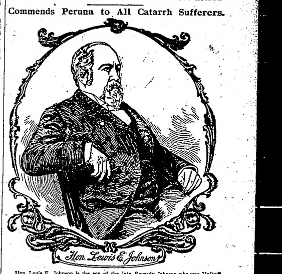
Gen. James Grant Wilson addressed the Historical Society of Pennsylvania on the subject of "Personal Reminiscences of Lincoln and Grant." Among many interesting yarns spun by the general was one setting forth how Grant became a great smoker. It seems that after one of Grant's great victories he was seen riding down the line with a half-smoked unlit cigar in his mouth. In reporting the affair the war correspondents one and all mentioned the incident of the half-burnt cigar.

It was not long after that every express from the north brought the general packages of cigars, until there were 20,000 cigars received at camp. Up to that time Grant had been in the habit of smoking but two or three cigars a day. But with this unlimited supply, and feeling that as they were gifts he could not give them away, he started to smoke them wholesale, and thus acquired a tremendous appetite for tobacco.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

English Manners Explained.

English rudeness toward casual acquaintances, as compared with Continental tact, is due to the Englishman's sincerity. Quite frankly he shows his opinion that nominal friendship is the cause of much personal annoyance and inconvenience, and takes good care to encourage as little as possible any members eligible to encroach upon this position. So that when an Englishman in that stiff way of his deliberately turns his back on his friends it may generally be understood that he considers it a tedious and uncongenial task to have to meet and talk with them; and that, being a dunce at dissimulation, the only course left open to him is one of blank, honest rudeness.—London To-Day.

THE SON OF EX- U. S. MINISTER TO ENGLAND
Commends Peruna to All Catarrh Sufferers.



Hon. Louis E. Johnson is the son of the late Reverdy Johnson who was United States Senator from Maryland, also Attorney General under President Johnson, and United States Minister to England, and who was regarded as the greatest constitutional lawyer that ever lived.

In a recent letter from 1006 F. Street, N. W., Mr. Johnson says:

"No one should longer suffer from catarrh when Peruna is accessible. To my knowledge it has caused relief to so many of my friends and acquaintances, that it is humanity to commend its use to all persons suffering with this distressing disorder of the human system."—Louis E. Johnson.

Catarrh Poisons.

Catarrh is capable of changing all the life-giving secretions of the body into scalding fluids, which destroy and inflame every part they come in contact with. Applications to the places affected by catarrh can do little good save to soothe or quiet disagreeable symptoms. Hence it is that gargles, sprays, atomizers and inhalants only serve as temporary relief. So long as the irritating secretions of catarrh continue to be formed so long will the membranes continue to be inflamed, no matter what treatment is used.

There is but one remedy that has the desirable effect, and that remedy is Peruna. This remedy strikes at once to the roots of catarrh by restoring to the capillary vessels their healthy elasticity. Peruna is not a temporary palliative, but a radical cure.

Humiliated.

"What's the trouble, Henry?" asked the wife. "Wasn't the majority as large as you expected?"

"I'm not thinking about the election, Jess," gloomily replied the statesman, whose admiring constituents had returned him to congress for another term. "You remember there is a brand of a 5-cent cigars named for me? Well, they're selling them two for 5 cents now."—Chicago Tribune.

THE NEWS.

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Both of the Red Lake Falls newspapers issued handsome Christmas numbers last week. The issue of the Gazette was undoubtedly the best and largest paper ever issued in Red Lake County.

A new issue of postage stamps is expected here soon for the first time since 1860, and practically since the establishment of the United States Postal System the people will have the privilege of using a stamp bearing the flag of the Republic. Models for four stamps for the new series have thus been completed the 2, 4, 8 and 13 cents. The department has just approved the drawing for the new 8 cent stamp, upon which Martha Washington will make her appearance.

A country exchange suggests that the law ought to be amended so that the voters of independent school districts shall not have the right to vote for county superintendents. The suggestion is an excellent one, and is applied in Hennepin county, where the absurdity of permitting 40,000 voters to take a hand in electing the superintendent of schools represented by another 2,000 is obvious. All officials should be elected by voters residing within the region of their jurisdiction.—Minneapolis Journal.

ARE NOT GAME.

Taxidermist Claims that Stuffed Deer Are Articles of Commerce.

Henery Buethner of Bemidji, a taxidermist, has brought a suit against the state board of game and fish commissioners, S. F. Fullerton, its executive agent, and J. W. Whitney and J. P. Sanders, game wardens, asking for a permanent injunction restraining them from seizing heads or hides in the hands of taxidermists.

Mr. Buethner in his complaint alleges that Dec. 1 he had in his establishment, in the process of curing and mounting, eight moose heads, forty deer heads and four whole deer, which belonged to customers, who had killed them during the open season. He says that he received information, and presents two affidavits to show, that Warden J. W. Whitney on Dec. 5 said that within the next 12 hours his place would be raided and the heads seized. Mr. Beuthner immediately swore out his complaint and secured temporary injunction.

The complaint contends that the state law requiring game kept out of season, but illegally killed, does not apply to the heads and hides, which when mounted and tanned, or when in the process of mounting and tanning, lose their identity as parts of animals and become articles of commerce.

He says that the law does not provide for any fee for the commission, but says that the commission has charged one dollar for tagging heads and hides at his establishment at Bemidji, while the charge at St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth is much less.

Mr. Fullerton states that Buethner recently made application to have heads tagged. When the commission found out he had forty heads in his establishment, they insisted upon the others being tagged, but Buethner refused to pay for tagging. The law allows a reasonable charge for tagging game, and the reason why more was charged at Bemidji than at St. Paul and Minneapolis was that there was no warden at the place, and the expense of sending a man there was greater. The charges were made according to expense.

Creamery dairying is declining in Iowa. In spite of better prices than in ten years past the number of factories is seventy-four less than a year ago, and the product has fallen off an average of 1,339 pounds per creamery. The number of patrons is less by nearly ten thousand. That is what Dairy Commissioner Wright's report for 1902 will show. It does not appear what has taken the place of this industry, or that it makes dairying a matter as an incomegiver, since the price of butter for the year has averaged slightly over 23 cents.

To Electric Light Consumers.

The best lighted stores in any state in these United States are the most prosperous stores, not because they have more money to spend, but on the contrary the more prosperous the sharper may be the point of the pencil used by the "Boss." In order to have a well lighted place of business the Incandescent burner should be replaced once or twice a year, its no economy in burning old and deteriorated lamps as you do not get the light. We have endeavored to keep on hand the best lamp on earth, the Edison lamp selling them at cost and there is no excuse for burning a lamp after it becomes old and black. What has been said in regard to business houses, also holds good in regard to residences lighting.

The Markets.

Wheat	62c
Oats	30c
Flax	$1.07
Barley	40c
Butter	20c
Eggs	20c
Potatoes	30c

The following letter furnished by the Edwards, Wood & Co. Commission Merchants, 110 Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis, 310 Board of Trade, Duluth.

The firmness which charactenised the wheat market during the latter part of last week has continued over into this week's market. The market is very quiet, prices moving over a narrow range as is customary during the holidays. The markets generally declined a small fraction today, the result of profit taking and evening up of trades. There will be no session of the Board of Trade, Chicago, or the Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis, Friday. The northwestern receipts for last week and for Monday of this week were quite heavy and stocks are increasing at Minneapolis, though they are still about 4,000,000 bushels less than they were last year. We have excellent authority for the statement that during the last 30 days interior elevators have been ordered to ship out stocks on hand and that they are now well cleaned out, which accounts for the recent heavy receipts and foreshadows a sudden decrease in them. The excellent demand for cash wheat results from the efforts of millers to supply their future needs of good wheat while prices are still moderate. We have been for some time arguing that good wheat would be scarce in the northwest this winter and spring, and are glad to see our opinion confirmed by the "Modern Miller", which authority states: "That stocks of wheat are decreasing at points of accumulation showing that most of the good wheat has been marketed.

Exports for last week were moderate about 3,250,000 bushels but sales were made daily and on the last days of the week they were heavy. On Saturday exports were 908,000 bushels and this would not figure in the exports of this week. The latest advices from Argentina are of heavy rains which are of course extremely unfavorable for harvesting wheat. It seems now extremely probable that Argentine wheat will be harvested in as bad condition as was that of western Europe. The Venezuelan incident made longs timid because of fear that probable war between the United States and England.
